I reside at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Henniker, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 19 years old; had it bad all the time; I run all that period, and nights it would fill up and drop down in my throat, giving me a feeling of choking, so that I would spring up in bed to save myself from strangulation, I affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headaches at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and spent much money. I had a hacking cough I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has cured me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.
MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.
Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.
I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, clockings and stranglings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.
Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left, Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

Josephine and Napoleon.

There is scarcely to be found in history a life so rich in dramatic interest as this of the empress Josephine, for its romance commences with the dawn of her existence in the island of Martinique in 1763, and continues unabated until 1814, when at the Chateau Malmaison she breathed her last, clasping in one hand the miniature of Napoleon and in the other the hand of Alexander I. of Russia, her sincere friend and admirer. Especially is she immortal in the hearts of women by the triple appeal of moral excellence, intense suffering, and heroic submission to her fate. It is the romance of her life, more than all other causes, that has thrown a halo around the ugly old pile with its high-pointed pyramidal roofs, its tall chimneys, and its general lack of architectural symmetry. Its very name is a malediction—malamansio—though the motive of it is lost in the obscurity of the thirteenth century. The chateau is near Rueil, some eight miles from Paris. It was purchased in 1798 for sixty thousand francs, partly with the dower of Josephine and partly with the resources of General Bonaparte, whom she married in 1796, being then thirty three years old and he twenty-seven. The marriage was a fortunate one for him, as his own words testify. "The circumstance of my marriage with Madame de Beauharnais," he says, placed me on a proper footing with the party necessary to my plan of fusion, one of the first principles of my administration. . . . . Without my wife I should never have established any natural relation with that class." Another declaration of his agrees perfectly with this idea: "I win only battles—Josephine wins me all hearts."

It was a proud boast of Josephine that she never kept any one waiting half a minute where punctuality depended upon herself. This consideration for the pleasure of others, the never-failing mark of refined breeding, was signally wanting in Napoleon. When the established hour for dining at Malmaison was six o'clock, and though etiquette forbade any one to approach the table before the announcement of the head of the house, he often failed to appear before seven, eight or even ten o'clock. A chicken or some other article was placed on the spit every fifteen minutes by order of the cook, who knew well the habit of the emperor. The table manners of Napoleon may have been those of the hero; they were certainly anything but those of the gentleman. He completed the process of cramming—it could scarcely be called eating—in six or seven minutes, as a rule. Ignoring the use of knives and forks as regarded his own plate, he did not stop there, but "helped himself with his fingers from the dishes nearest him, and dipped his bread in the gravy." Knowing the time necessary for the emperor to dine, the shrewder ones took care to dine in advance. Eugene once confessed this at the dinner-table, much to the amusement of the emperor. Josephine always quitted the table with Napoleon, but with her never failing consideration for the comfort of others she commanded the rest, by a gesture as she rose, to remain.

No one can excuse Napoleon for that domineering spirit toward Josephine which made him forbid her to receive, when she became Empress, her old associates who he knew were tried and true friends. A letter from Josephine to the duchesse d' Aiglemon, a former fellow captive and a sincere friend, throws some light upon Napoleon's motive. She writes among other things on the same subject, "The more I think of what my friends did for me, the greater is my sorrow at being unable to be now with my heart distracted. The Empress of France is but the first slave in the empire, and cannot pay the debts of Madame de Beauharnais. This constitutes the torture of my life, and will explain why you do not occupy a place near me; why I do not see Madame Tallien; in fine, why several ladies, formerly our confidential friends, would be strangers to me were not my memory faithful. * * * Desirous of strengthening more and more the Church re-established by himself, * * * Napoleon's intention is to keep at a distance from his court all those who may have profited by the possibility of divorce. This he has promised the pope, and hitherto he has kept his word. Hence the cause of his refusal of the favor I asked of having you with me, which has caused me unspeakable regret; but he is too absolute for me to have even a hope of seeing him retract. * * * Often do I regret that small, dark, and dismal chamber which we shared together, for there, at least, I could pour out my whole heart, and was sincerely loved in return."

One of the greatest attractions at Malmaison was the magnificent collection of tropical and other rare plants, gathered from all parts of the earth. Not a ship left a foreign port without bearing some botanical treasure to Josephine, who fairly idolized flowers, and seemed to possess a sort of fraternal sympathy with them—a mysterious affinity not comprehended by the rest of the world. A flower was a surer passport to her favor than the most precious gem. All Europe knew of her passion, and strangers took pride in gratifying it. Even war suspended its rigors in favor of a taste so laudable and beneficent, for the prince-regent of England gave orders that all plants expressed to Josephine which fell into the hands of his cruisers should be forwarded to her.

Holland House Visitors.
[Eugene Lawrence, in Harper's.]

To the motly and endless procession of noted and not always reputable men and women who have passed the portals of the hospitable mansion it is quite likely that no other human habitation can offer a parallel. Princes and poets, all the later kings of England from George II. to William IV., Talleyrand and the Princess Lieven, Louis Napoleon and the Orleans princes, Canova and DeStael, Roman Catholic bishops and Protestant divines, the two Humboldts, President Monroe and Washington Irving, beautiful duchesses and famous actors, Moore and Rogers, Brougham and Metternich, Russell and Derby, form but a fragment of the endless stream of visitors that have wandered through the gilded halls, and surveyed the long list of its ceaseless curiosities, have shone in its assemblies and masquerades, and strolled through its graceful gardens. In the midst of his throng of varied guests, Macaulay has painted with a loving and gentle touch, the mild and generous host of the later period, ever amiable and full of kindly feelings, attentive to those who wanted notice, anxious to please and certain of pleasing, benevolent as his famous uncle, and proud only to have been his pupil. Of his wife, Lady Holland, we are told that she was "beautiful and clever," but had "a habit of contradiction." It is admitted that she could say "disagreeable things." When Macaulay was pouring out a flow of his interesting anecdotes she would tap on the table with her fan and say, "Now, Macaulay, we have had enough of this; give us something else." To Moore, who was writing Sheridan's life, she said, "This will be a dull book of yours, this, 'Sheridan,' I fear." To Lord Portchester, who was a poet, she said, "I am sorry to hear you are going to publish a poem. Can't you suppress it?" Her name is not mentioned by Macaulay, who, perhaps, remembered her "spirit of contradiction;" and her eccentric interruptions often invited severe retorts. Once she dropped her fan so often when Count d'Orsay was sitting next her that he grew tired of picking it up. He told the servants to place his dinner on the floor and dined there. The lady was fond of overcrowding her dinner table. When it was once tightly packed an unexpected guest arrived. "Luttrel, make room!" she cried, imperiously, to Colonel Luttrel. "It must certainly be made," he retorted, "for it does not exist." "I wonder Lady Holland dines at such an hour," said some one who did not like her late hours. "To annoy everybody," suggested Talleyrand.

A Breakfast in Lima.

As I have said in former letters, the Peruvian breakfast at 11 A. M., having had a cup of chocolate, tea or coffee, and a biscuit brought to them while in bed at 6 A. M. The dusk seronas and seronitas all in white, loose, flowing wrappers (children and all if they are among the wealthier classes, and female portion of the house leave their long, heavy, black hair hanging in loose plaits, down the back, matrons as well as children. Then, if the sea-breeze be very cool, they come out in little crimson or blue cashmere sacques over their white robes, and the breakfast begins with soup. Nothing can be more delicious than these native soups; one, in particular, called chupe made of a kind of crab (called camarons), like the English shrimp, but more delicious eating, and more resembling a lobster. These camarons are boiled alive in new milk, to which is added rice, parsley, grated cheese, hard-boiled eggs, potatoes in halves, onions and bread-crumbs. Then the fruit and melons are brought in—many, however, preferring the fresh figs, melons and bananas before the chupe. Then the fish, broiled or fried,—a salt water fish, broiled called corbina, very much like our Spanish mackerel in flavor; and small fish fried, called peckanasis, like our fresh water perch, except not so long. And now comes the substantials: Fried bananas with poached eggs; mutton chops, breaded; delicious beefsteak with fried potatoes around it—the dish containing only enough for one person; lettuce and radishes made into salad; ham and eggs; and always the native dish of aquique, compounded of red peppers, and potatoes, and so hot with Cayenne pepper that the tears start from your eyes as you swallow it. Then rice cakes and picantie,—another fiery dish made of mustard,—or a kind of curry and rice. Then comes coffee (never boiled, but condensed in French coffee pots), and always clear as amber, and served in tiny Sevres China mugs, without milk or sugar (unless you ask for them); truly a "nectar fit for the gods." Then cigars and claret comes out, and the ladies light not only your cigars, but a cigarette for themselves, and you sit and chat at the table for half an hour. Their manner of eating is not exactly like ours. They use knife as often as fork, and the fingers more than either. One of their peculiar customs at the table deserves special mention. If there is a little delicacy on the plate,—a bit of the breast of a fowl, a tender morsel of turkey, any little dainty that is inviting,—it is a very delicate compliment to a person sitting next you at the table to take up this "morceau" in your thumb and finger, and place it in that person's mouth from your own fingers. I have often seen a young Peruvian gallant pick up a bit of chicken, or a small piece of game, and convey it with his fingers direct to the mouth of the leading belle; although his fingers may drip with gravy, or (if it be preserved fruit) the juice may run down his wrist. It is the most delicate compliment, and any one refusing the donor the eating of these finger bits would commit an unpardonable insult. There are no large dishes put on the table—no platters, or meat served in large quantities. Every one at the table has a plate brought to him and a plate set before him, and each course separately, that he may help himself to what he pleases.

Daily Chronicle.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 21, 1874.

To the Readers of the Chronicle.

The editors of the New Hampshire Printers' Association are on a time. In other words they are holding a social gathering in Manchester, and, without doubt, while we are penning these lines are enjoying themselves hugely. This "time" has attracted every member of the CHRONICLE staff from the financial manager down to the "local." An outsider was summoned to run the establishment for a day and this fact will account for the appearance of the indispensable CHRONICLE this morning.

However painful the announcement may be to its readers, it is our duty as faithful journalists to inform them that this state of things is extremely temporary, and that the whole force will be on duty at noon today to dish up the current events and hand them over to the reader tomorrow.

Tweed's Faith.

Tweed was the most striking illustration of a very common faith—belief in the Almighty Dollar. He is the victim of a most touching fidelity to the great principle which every good American will surely be the last to flout. His creed was very simple; it was that money would buy everything; and he reposed upon his belief with the sweet serenity of the Mussulman who sees by faith a heaven of houris. Certainly his confidence was not surprising. He had proved his creed. He had seen money work miracles. He had seen himself, a man of no cleverness and of no advantages, rising swiftly by means of it from insignificant poverty to the control of a great party. It had made him master of one of the great cities of the world. It had secured for him Governors, Legislatures, councils, and legal and executive authorities of every kind. He invested in land and judges. He bought dogs and lawyers. He silenced the press with a golden muzzle, and money made his will law.

Here was a man who wanted nothing that money could not buy; was it strange that he had unbounded faith in it? Every form of virtue was to him mere affectation, a more or less ingenious and tenacious "strike for money. If a man spoke of honesty, patriotism, self-respect, the public welfare, public opinion, truth, justice, right, Tweed smiled at the fine phrases in which the auctioneer, anxious to sell himself, cried, "Going! going!" Argument, reason, decency, they were meaningless to him. If an opponent held out, he simply asked, "How much?" The world was a market. Life was a bargain. He felt himself with pride to be the largest operator in his way, as Vanderbilt in his, or Stewart in his.

In Albany he had the finest quarters at the Delavan, and when he came into the great dining-room at dinner-time, and looked at all the tables, thronged with members of the Legislature and the lobby, he had a benignant, paternal expression, as of a patriarch pleased to see his retainers happy. It was a magnificent rendering of Fagin and his pupils. You could imagine him trotting up and down in the character of an unsuspicious old gentleman with his pocket-kerchief hanging out of his pocket, that his scholars might show their skill in picking a wipe. He knew which of that cheerful company was the Artful Dodger and which Charley Bates. And he never doubted that he could buy every man in the room if he were willing to pay the price. So at the Capitol, where sits the Legislature of a noble commonwealth of four millions of souls, he moved about with an air of fat good nature, like the chief shepherd of the flock. If he stood at the door of the Assembly looking in, it is easy to fancy him saying to himself, the State pays these men two or three hundred dollars for four months' service; I will give them better wages. He did not doubt that it was a fair transaction. What is the State? It is only four millions of people, he thought, who are all trying to be rich—struggling, cheating, by hook or by crook, every man for himself, and the devil take the hindmost, to be rich. These men would be fools not to take my money. And he smiled his fat smile, and paid liberally for all that was in market.

There were some papers, whose price he could not ascertain, which persisted in speaking ill of him and his pals. It the fools did not know their own interest enough to be content with a good price—say, of corporation advertising—they must be silenced. The conceit of virtue must not be pushed too far. So one day his Legislature passed a bill virtually giving his judges power to imprison editors at their pleasure. But virtue—that is, in the Tweed theory of life, obstinacy in holding out for a higher price—mustered such a really respectable protest that the public project of coercion failed, and private methods were tried. Tweed had no doubt that reputation could be bought as well as power. Peter Cooper builds an institute for the education of the poor, does he? You mean, said Tweed, a monument to his own glory. He pays a certain number of thousands of dollars for the reputation of philanthropy. And Mr. Stewart builds a working-woman's palace. Ah! And Mr. Astor founds a library. Indeed! And they are benevolent gentlemen and benefactors of their kind? Not at all. They merely invest money in a certain kind of fame. That pleased their taste, as fast horses and yachts and pictures please the taste of other people. I will show you how 'tis done, says the faithful believer in the Dollar. And he gives fifty thousands dollars to the poor just as winter is beginning. "Let the cavilers say what they will," exclaimed a myriad voices, "that shows a good heart." Tweed, as it were, tips a wink. I told you how it was done, he seems to say: what is there that money will not buy?

It is surprising that such a man did not try to evade justice? Justice in his view was a commodity like legislative honor, like newspaper independence, like the reputation of benevolence. The reform movement was to him a sudden and confusing flurry, in which strikers, to whose terms he would not yield, had somehow gained a momentary advantage. He had perhaps made a mistake in not buying them at their own price. Success had possibly put him off his guard. He was sure that if an indictment were found, that would be the end of it, and he had no feeling of shame. His friend Fisk had shown what lawyers were made of, and he himself would buy lawyers and judges, sheriffs and juries. He knew that the one thing that in a needy and greedy world can not fail is money. He came to his first trial, and the jury disagreed: naturally, for he had bought some of them. The evidence is, of course, moral only, but it is conclusive. If justice, facetiously so called, wanted another bout, he would "come up smiling." There was no trick or quibble that lawyers could devise for which he had not made munificent preparation, even to asserting that the judge who obstinately refused to name a price was disqualified from sitting at the trial. Money had never failed before; it certainly would not at this last pinch.

But it did, and the bewilderment and consternation of this simple devotee were pitiful. He had but one article in his faith, and that was now destroyed. He had staked everything upon the Almighty Dollar, and he had lost.

Improvement in Manufacture of Artificial Stone.

—Mr. Frederick Ransome, of England, whose name is so intimately associated with the subject of modern improvements in the manufacture of artificial stone, has just returned to England from a visit to this country. The object of his visit was to call the attention of American engineers to certain improvements in this field recently accomplished by himself. In papers read before the Franklin Institute and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology he elucidated the process of manufacturing the product which he terms "apozemite." The stone known as "Ransome stone" was made by mixing sand with silicate of soda or potassia, and then saturating the same under pressure with chloride of calcium, the result being a material strongly cemented with silicate of lime. The chloride of sodium (common salt), however, formed as a result of this reaction, had to be removed by thorough washing afterward. The "apozemite" process, according to Mr. Ransome, obviates this difficulty by employing such materials for cement as would of themselves become insoluble, and require no after treatment with chemicals. This is effected by adding to the sand or other indurate materials hydraulic lime and silica in form of infusorial earth, in connection with some silicate of soda to start the chemical action. The result is the transference, in time, of the active silica, through the agency of the alkali, to the unsaturated base of the hydraulic lime, to form an insoluble double silicate of lime and soda, thus avoiding the necessity of after-treatment with water, and the inefficiency of the cementation, by the complete fixation of the alkali.

The papers attracted much discussion at the meetings of the societies named, where the importance of Mr. Ransome's improvements in this branch of technology were warmly appreciated.

The Great Cuttle-Fish.

The stories of enormous cuttle-fish off the coast of North America, which has been generally considered fabulous, have received confirmation in what appears to be a truthful report from St. Johns, to the effect that some fishermen encountered a marine monster while out in a boat, which, on being struck with a "gaff," threw out two long arms across the boat. These were promptly severed, however, and the animal, a huge squid, backed off very hastily. The severed portion of the arm, being about nineteen feet in length, was brought in to St. Johns, the entire length being estimated at about thirty-five feet. Portions of this arm have been sent to the Natural History Museum of Montreal, and also to Professor Agassiz in Cambridge. The length of the body was thought to have been about forty feet.

—The marriage custom of celebrating golden and silver weddings has been so burlesqued by the introduction of tin, wooden and even paper weddings, that it is proposed to abandon such celebrations altogether and to substitute an entirely new custom. It is this: That the groom shall renew his fee to the officiating minister at every anniversary of his wedding as an expression of the fortune which he obtained in a good wife. This proposed custom has the misfortune to be based upon some sort of reason, whereas customs as such are usually unreasonable. Thus, as it has entered the domain of logic, counter customs might logically grow from it, and the unfortunate minister be obliged to annually return the marriage fee where the wife did not get a good husband. The minister in either case would be equally responsible, and if in one event he should be rewarded in the other he should be punished. The old custom, with no reason but much good will in it, of celebrating the golden and silver weddings and even the tin, wooden and paper weddings of one's friends is much the better.

—A Waterville man offers his wife and two children for $1000. A former and still more appreciative neighbor offers $500. Negotiations are still pending.

Readables.

The greater part of the survivors of the Virginius have gone away from the city, most of them preferring to live in warmer climates, to which they had been accustomed. Two, who claim to be American citizens, though born in Cuba, sailed for New Orleans on Saturday in the Metropolis, and most of the others expect to start for the West Indies by the next steamer.

The troubles of the Spanish iron-clad Arapiles are by no means ended. She received considerable injury by striking on the rocks in East River on the way to her present anchorage off the Battery, and it is reported is making thirty-six inches of water every twenty-four hours. Her commander proposes to have her bottom examined by divers to-day, and, unless absolutely impossible will put to sea and trust to his pumps rather than try further repairs in New York.

The nomination of Morrison R. Waite of Ohio to be Chief Justice of the Supreme Court recalled the fact that he was one of the counsel at the Geneva arbitration, and some of the senators acquainted with him say he is an able lawyer of thirty years' standing and a republican, at the present time president of the Ohio constitutional convention. It was discovered on looking at the Supreme Court record that a year ago to-morrow Mr. Waite was, on motion of Caleb Cushing, admitted to the bar of that court as attorney. Waite never held a judgeship in Ohio. Senators of both parties speak well of the nomination, and there seems to be no doubt of its confirmation.

In the United States senate Tuesday several new bills were introduced, after which the finance committee resolution was taken up, and Senators Wright of Iowa and Logan of Illinois made speeches in opposition to resumption. A communication was read from the Secretary of War stating that the appropriation for bounties to the colored soldiers and sailors would soon be expended, and making suitable recommendations for renewing it. In the house of representatives a large number of bills were introduced, and a resolution to increase the currency was defeated. A bill looking toward the partial restoration of the franking privilege was also lost. A bill was passed allowing coinage to be executed in the United States mints for foreign countries.

State News.

The centennial celebration of the Congregational church at Amherst was celebrated on Sunday, when an appropriate sermon was preached by the pastor, the Rev. J. G. Davis, D. D.

General McCutchins, the republican nominee in New Hampshire, is described in one of the newspapers as "one who tills his own broad acres, follows his plough in the field, and whose locks are dusted with clover seed and red-top!" Such a Cincinnatus ought to satisfy the most radical granger.

—Not long since a very nervous lady took passage at the Tip-Top House, White Mountains, to descend by the almost perpendicular railway. Her fears were apparent to every one, and the following unique dialogue took place between her and the conductor: Lady—Mr. Conductor, how do you hold these cars when you want to make a stop? C.—Madame, we apply the brake, which you see there. Lady—Suppose, Mr. Conductor, that brake should give way, what do you do then? C.—Madame, we then apply the double-acting brake, which you see at the other end of the cars. Lady—But, Mr. Conductor, suppose that brake should not be sufficient to check the cars, where will we go then? C.—Madame, that depends entirely upon how you have lived in this world.

—An old farmer became seriously ill, and was urged by his neighbors, who thought he was going to die, to call in a minister to pray for him. "To pray for me! No, sir. I am an original granger, and do not want any middleman between me and the Almighty."

—The Danbury man says that a New Haven editor spent last Sunday in Slawson, and attended church. When the contribution box came round he was in a doze, but on being nudged, hastily exclaimed: "I have a pass."

—Over a hundred women in the United States are preparing to hurl Blackstone and Coke at the head of doubting and despicable man.

—A Kansas farmer is so thorough a granger that he travels long distances in his wagon rather than patronize the railroads.

Business Notices.

The February number, the second of the new volume of LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE, sparkles with brilliant, interesting, and attractive articles. In this number Mr. George MacDonald's long-promised serial story, "Malcolm," really begins. It is brimful of fine Scotch humor. The continuation of "The New Hyperion" maintains the interest already created,—an interest which is constantly surprised and intensified by the original and suggestive illustrations of Dore. "Josephine and Malmaison," illustrated, is an interesting sketch of Napoleon's life at Malmaison and of his relations with Josephine, by Marie Howland. "A Western Seeress," by Will Wallace Harney, is a graphic and curious piece, descriptive of adventures illustrative of the faculty of second sight. "Among the Alligators" is a lively Florida hunting sketch, by S. C. Clarke. "The Romance of a Tin Box," by Louis A. Roberts, is a very amusing story.

Something certain at last.—Piles is not only one of the most painful of human diseases, but professional men had almost despaired of finding a remedy, until the introduction of ANAKESIS by Dr. Silsbee, and after an experience of 20,000 cases in five years, doctors agree that an infallible remedy has been found. Sufferers will appreciate ANAKESIS after trying everything else in vain and then experiencing the bliss of instant relief and ultimate cure.—Price $1.00. Sold by Drug ists every where. Principal Depot, 46 Walker st., New York.

Decorated China Sets Cheap.—We recently called the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Richard Briggs, 137 Washington street, Boston, who is offering decorated dinner and tea sets at greatly reduced prices. The plan which he has adopted for the first time in this country, of offering really desirable China sets at very low prices, is meeting with great success, and we advise all to avail themselves of the rare opportunity to supply their table with a handsome service for about the usual cost of ordinary white China.

Unhealthy Surroundings.

To breathe pure, healthful air, and to follow occupations conducive to health and long life are the privileges of the minority. The majority must dwell wherever their lot is cast, however insalubrious the locality may be, and work at the craft assigned to them, however destructive to health and vigor. Medical science has, however come to the aid of the latter. In Hostetter's Stomach Bitters they have (and have had for the last twenty-five years) the best defence against the morbid influences which create and foster disease that the vegetable kingdom can supply. Its ingredients are among the finest botanic specifics which research has yet revealed to man. As a preventive of, and remedy for the diseases generated by swamps, miasma, the foul air of factories, excessive heat, over exertion of body or mind, unwholesome water or any other morbific cause, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters bear away the palm from all medicines of the present day.

Vegetine cleanses and purifies the blood, thereby causing humors of all kinds to disappear.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver or "Billiousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. 708

The Kidneys, although but little understood, are among the most important of the vital parts. All diseases pertaining to them or to the organs they supply with health and vigor, in either sex, are cured by Helmbold's Extract Buchu. By Helmbold's process Buchu becomes a specific. No other chemist has so skillfully extracted its virtues. Sufferers will avoid disappointment, failure and exposure, by obtaining only Helmbold's Buchu. For sale by all druggists.

A Would Be Fire Extinguisher.

It is a well known fact that all fires occurring between the hours of two and six o'clock in the morning make greater progress before the firemen reach the spot than those breaking out at an earlier or later hour, because nearly everybody is in a sound sleep and it is with difficulty that an alarm is made general at such a time. Prompted by this idea, a philanthropic individual of our acquaintance arose about four o'clock on Tuesday morning and commenced perambulating the city with a view to the discovery of an insidious smouldering of flame in some by-way or high-way.

Our faithful friend had not proceeded far on his mission of mercy, when the treacherous ice, smoothed by the recent rain, slid him from his upright and dignified position of a man to a sitting posture similar to that in which the patient Job is represented to have been found while indulging in the luxury of a bath in the ashes. Nothing daunted, by this mishap, however, he arose promptly and proceeded on, looking to the right and left, giving especial attention to back yards, sheds and barns, those common inviters of the fire fiend. Of a sudden, a light flashed out upon the darkness of the misty morning from a stable in the rear of a palatial mansion near the Mill Pond. The eyes of our philanthropist fairly glistened with eagerness at the prospect of preventing a serious conflagration and thereby saving the lives of numerous animals and perhaps human beings.

The enclosure in which was the stable referred to was surrounded by a very high fence and this must be scaled by the volunteer watchman ere he could reach the scene of the supposed fire. He thought he would first make sure that the stable was really on fire, and so, being short in stature, he was obliged to jump up from the ground many times before he could be assured that there existed in the building in question the danger he feared. This jumping or hopping-up process was so unsatisfactory as a means of determining the cause of the bright light, that he concluded to get upon the fence and drawing himself up a foot or so stood upon the baseboard, a small platform indeed for No. 12 boots. It was a good position, though, in which to look at the fire, and as he stood there watching the flickering light, his toes slipped from the narrow shelf on which they rested, and down he came with a "chunk" and a groan striking his chin on the top rail of the fence. At this state of affairs his philanthropy suddenly left him, and he made the air blue with curses on himself in particular and high tences in general. He soon rallied, however, and passing down a little farther, he came to a gate as high as the fence from which he had just slipped, but by the aid of its latch and handle he managed to gain the inside of the stable-yard. Now for business. There was the bright light right before him, and it seemed as if he could see the flames darting up through the hay and he fancied he heard the stamping of the feet of the horses as if striving to get out. It was enough. He tried the stable door. It was fastened. He seized an axe that he happened to discover standing by a chopping block and using it as a wedge, pried the door open at the bottom far enough to enable him to get his fingers under it and then after a strong and sudden wrench, open it came. He had no sooner straightened himself up and was about to rush for one of the horses than he was roughly grasped by the collar of his coat and our faithful fireman found himself in the clutches of a strong man of about 40 years who asked him "what in —— he was doing?" It was in vain that our now discomforted friend tried to explain matters. The stable man led him across the yard to the entry way of the house, called to his master (who was eating his breakfast before taking an early drive on business) and informed him that he had in his grasp a harness thief and that he was about to take him to the police station. "Who is he?" asked the owner of the horses and the domain. "Bring him in here by the light and let look at the scamp." The man-servant with a fidelity that was not called for rudely hustled our genial friend into the dining-room of the mansion, into the glare of the gaslight and into the presence of the astonished proprietor. "This is no thief," was the immediate exclamation; "this is my old friend ———. He is no harness stealer." Apologies followed, and our good friend departed with a resolve that in future he will mind his own business and not go out hunting for fires.

Laconics.

The January term of the supreme judicial court for Rockingham county begins on Tuesday, before Judge Hibbard at Exeter.

Fishing Schooner J. P. Allen, while lying in the Lower Harbor Tuesday morning, dragged her anchor and went ashore at New Castle, but sustained no serious damage.

General Marston intends to have a reunion of the survivors of the gallant second New Hampshire regiment upon the old camp ground at Portsmouth in June, to celebrate the thirteenth anniversary of the birth of the regiment. The regiment began to be mustered into service for three years on the 30th of May, 1861, and left Portsmouth for the seat of war on the 20th of June following.

The winter fishing fleet has had hard luck this season. The weather has been unusually bad and whenever they have made a catch the prices have been so low that they have not realized any profit. Usually a good market has been found in Canada and the Western States; but the mild weather prevented them from sending long distances and thus New England markets have been kept glutted and caused prices to rule very low. Cod fish have been sold for one dollar and fifty cents per hundred and haddock for one dollar.

At the annual meeting of DeWitt Clinton Commandery of Knights Templar held on Monday evening, the following officers were elected for the coming year: Eminent Commander, John R. Holbrook; Generalissimo, W. Freeman; C. G., Philip Hichborn; Prelate, John Christie; S. W., Charles W. Gardner; J. W., J. H. Cheever; Treas., W. N. Isley; Recorder., Jas. F. Jenness; Standard Bearer, D. G. Raitt; Sword Bearer, W. Porter Walker; Warder, Benj. F. Webster; Capts. of Guard, H. C. Walker; W. A. Peirce, Wm. A. Ashe; Standing committee T. E. O. Marvin, W. A. Peirce; Samuel S. Fletcher.

Messrs. M. T. Betton & Co., in their new store in the Rogers Block have one of the finest places in the city and some of the best facilities for business of any firm in Portsmouth. With a large and spacious store well stocked with all kinds of goods, beautiful show cases and counters of modern design and finish, ample accommodations for the reception of new and second-hand auction goods, they cannot help having a good share of the public patronage. They are also honest and upright young men, and as such have a double claim upon those who have occasion to patronize them. Their wares are nearly all new and they are selling their goods at panic prices. Call and see them, and take a look at the new arrangement for heating a room by gas, which they have on exhibition in their show window.

By an advertisement in another column it will be seen that the copartnership of Messrs. David Kimball and N. Dana Whipple is dissolved by mutual consent, the latter gentleman retiring from the firm for the purpose of accepting a more lucrative situation in the wholesale drug business elsewhere. Mr. Whipple is a young man of fine talents and stands A 1 in his profession. We wish him all the success he deserves in his new field of labor.

The Portsmouth Savings Bank has just declared its 101st semi-annual dividend amounting to $50,255.85, and have a surplus of $19,554.50 as the result of the business of the last six months. The deposits during the six months have amounted to $146,457 96.

—Moses Emery, Esq., of Saco, is the oldest member of the York county bar now in practice. He was admitted to practice in 1821—fifty-three years ago.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus lusty, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair regrows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

A Curious Indian Relic.

[Harper's Magazine for February]

Oregon, if one may judge by the fossil remains in Mr. Condon's collection, seems once to have been inhabited by a great number and variety of pre-adamite beasts; but the most singular object he has to show is a very striking ape's head, carved with great spirit and vigor out of hard lava. This object was found upon the shore of the Columbia by Indians, after a flood, which had washed away a piece of old alluvial bank. The rock of which it is composed is quite hard; the carving is, as I said, done with remarkable vigor; and the top of the head is hollowed out, precisely as the Indians still make shallow depressions in fragments of slate, in which to burn what answers in their religious ceremonies for incense. But, supposing this relic to belong to Oregon—and there is, I was told, no reason to believe otherwise—where did the Indian who carved it get his idea of an ape? The Indians of this region, poor creatures that they are, have still the habit of carving crude figures out of slate and other soft rocks. They have also the habit of cutting out shallow, dish-like depressions in the heads of such figures, wherein to burn incense. But they could not give Mr. Condon any account of the ape's head they brought him, nor did they recognize its features as resembling any object or creature familiar to them even by tradition.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN

HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the utmost care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color. It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quietly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the ease of the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing diseases and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a foul state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in be glass.

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,

LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

The BAZAR is edited with a contribution of tact and talent that we seldom find in any journal; and the journal itself is the organ of the great world of fashion.—Boston Traveller.

The BAZAR commends itself to every member of the household—to the children by droll and pretty pictures, to the young ladies by its fashion-plates in endless variety, to the provident matron by its patterns for the children's clothes, to paterfamilias by its tasteful designs for embroidered slippers and luxurious dressing-gowns. PROSPECTUS FOR 1874--SEVENTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

An Illustrated Monthly Journal, universally admitted to be the handsomest Periodical in the world. A Representative and Champion of American Taste.

NOT FOR SALE IN BOOK OR NEWS STORES.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rare specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it has been bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim an superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes FOR TEN TIMES ITS COST; AND THEN, THERE ARE THE CHROMOS, BESIDE!

ART DEPARTMENT, 1874.

The illustrations of THE ALDINE have won a world-wide reputation, and in the art centres of Europe it is an admitted fact that its woodcut engravings of the highest perfection ever attained. The common prejudice in favor of "steel plate," is rapidly yielding to a more educated and discriminating taste which recognizes the advantages of superior artistic quality with greater facility of production. The wood-cut is of THE ALDINE possess all the delicacy and elaborate finish of the most costly steel plate, while they afford a better rendering of the artist's original.

In addition to designs by the members of the National Academy, and other noted American artists, THE ALDINE will reproduce examples of the best foreign masters, selected with a view to the highest artistic success and greatest general interest. Thus the subscriber to THE ALDINE will, at a trifling cost, enjoy in his own home the pleasures and refining influences of true art.

The Christmas issue for 1874 will contain special designs appropriate to the season, by our best artists, and will surpass in attractions any of its predecessors.

PREMIUM FOR 1874.

Every subscriber to THE ALDINE for the year 1874 will receive a pair of chromos. The original pictures were painted in oil for the publishers of THE ALDINE, by Thomas Moran, whose great Colorado picture was purchased by Congress for ten thousand dollars. The subjects were chosen to represent "The East" and "The West." One is a view in The White Mountains, New Hampshire; the other gives The Cliffs of Green River, Wyoming Territory.

If any subscriber should indicate a preference for a fit are subject the publishers will send "Thoughtfulness," a new and beautiful chromo, 14x20 inches, representing a little Italian exile whose speaking eyes betray the long tribe of his heart.

TERMS.

$5 per annum, in advance, with Oil Chromos free.

For 50 CENTS EXTRA, the chromos will be sent, carefully rolled in a tube, and prepaid by mail.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates, and no subscriptions taken by agents or the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON & CO.

CANVASSERS WANTED.

Any person wishing to act permanently as a local canvasser will receive full and prompt information by applying to

CATARRH!
A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years. Cured.
And Droppings in Throat, Choklings, Stranglings, Pains in the Side, Loins, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the
CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY.
TO MESSRS. LITTLEFIELD & CO., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.:
I reside at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Henniker, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 19 years old; had it bad all the time. It run all that period, and nights it would fill up and drop down in my throat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I would spring up in bed to save myself from strangulation. It affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made overnew. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.
MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.
Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.
I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, choklings and stranglings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.
Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left, Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

Social Qualities of the Bears.

[Canon City letter to the Chicago Times.]

The mountain ranges of Colorado are well supplied with bears, and during the fall of the year, when the plums and grapes are ripe, it is nothing unusual to stumble upon a dozen or so of the brutes in half an hour's walk. There are three distinct species; the common brown or black bear, which still maintains a precarious foothold in many of the Eastern States, and is hunted with much ceremony; the cinnamon, and the genuine grizzly.

The cinnamon chap is about the color of brick dust and his fighting weight ranges all the way from 800 to 1000 pounds. He is a supple, active brute, and inclined to be a genuine coward. Meet him in a secluded place and he will skulk off with his tail between his legs, like a coyote; but he is apt to prove a dangerous customer when wounded and brought to bay. Then he assumes the offensive, and a true rifle and a steady nerve are required on the part of the sportsman, or his bearship will proceed to form an acquaintance more close than agreeable. If a good tree is at hand, and the hunter can scale it, so much the better, as the cinnamon do not climb; and a knowledge of this fact tends to restore confidence. The majority of men I have conversed with prefer to hunt them in this way. In some instances the cinnamon, after being badly hit, rushes at the tree up which his antagonist has shinned for dear life, seizes it in his teeth, and claws and attempts to tear it down. At this critical juncture it is best for the hunter to preserve his composure and not fly off the handle. The bear may keep him imprisoned an hour or so, but bruin has a small stock of patience, and when he ascertains that the position is impregnable, he gives up the job in disgust, and retires in good order.

The grizzly, however, stands at the head of the bear family, and is more feared and respected than all others. He is a treacherous, sullen, malicious, desperate, ill-mannered, uncouth, shaggy brute—one which stubbornly resists all advances toward friendship, and is ready at any time to die in the last ditch. Like the immortal "Old Guard" of Napoleon, your genuine grizzly never surrenders, but is game to the last. The grizzly has a lordly, independent bearing, and on his native mountain sides, or in the forests, will hardly deign to make room for man himself. If you meet one in the road, the chances are that he will not budge an inch, unless he happens to be in an accommodating mood, and then he will trot out one side a few yards, rear himself upon his enormous haunches, and graciously wait for you to pass. No matter whether you are armed with a breech-loading Ballard, needle-gun, Winchester, or Sharpe, never attack a grizzly alone, or out in the open country.

The only safe position is on the back of a good horse, or in the limbs of a cottonwood tree. Many persons, disregarding this advice, have paid for their temerity with their lives; for no matter where you shoot a grizzly, whether through the heart or brain-box, he never gives up the ghost without a struggle, and will fight as long as he can lift a paw. Practical illustrations of the fighting powers of the grizzly are to be seen in these mountainous regions nearly every day. The other morning your correspondent encountered a miner from Fairplay, who had come down to the valley region for supplies. His personal appearance was, to say the least, peculiar. He carried his right arm in a sling; one eye was twisted upwards; his face was scratched and torn, and indented with ridges; while his head was as guiltless of hair as a billiard ball. At first I supposed he had been invited by some of the friendly Indians to a scalping picnic as chief performer; but, in conversation, it turned out that he had received each and all these grievous wounds from the claws of a grizzly.

The grizzly bear attains his full growth in four years. At six he is in his prime and able to cope with any animal in existence. The majestic lion may be considered the king of beasts, so far as looks are concerned, but he would stand a very poor show in the hug of a grizzly. The average weight of a grizzly is 1300 pounds, but quite a number have been killed in this locality who kicked the beam at 1800. Old man Griffin, of Canon, one of the early settlers, and reputed to be the sharpest and most courageous bear hunter in these parts, knocked over a grizzly last fall that weighed 1600 pounds after being dressed. The claws of this fellow were large enough to anchor a good-sized sloop, being nine inches in length. He fought to the last, and with three balls square through his heart, charged upon the enemy, and dropped down stone dead so close to the old man that he could touch him with his paw.

They tell a story around here of a foolish young fellow, residing on Current Creek, who made a bet that he would lasso a grizzly and bring him into camp. He made the experiment, and slipped a good noose over Mr. Grizzly; but the latter sat down coolly and commenced hauling in on the line. In vain the horse struggled—the power at the other end was irresistible; but, fortunately, the lariat broke and the rash young man escaped with his life.

It is said that the ice on Lake Winnipisaukee is thinner than at any corresponding season in the memory of man.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 22, 1874.

The New Hampshire Press.

At the annual meeting of Publishers, Editors and Printers, on Tuesday, it was voted to change the name of the society to "The New Hampshire Press Association." Rev Carlos Martyn and J. Horace Kent were chosen honorary members. A vote was passed, fifteen to five, requesting Congress to allow weekly newspapers free transmission through the mails in the county of publication. The following officers were chosen for the ensuing year:

President, P. B. Coggswell of Concord; Vice-Presidents, John B. Clark of Manchester, Albert A. Rotch of Amherst, Samuel Dodge of Portsmouth; Treasurer, Thomas W. Lane of Manchester; Recording Secretary, C. F. Livingstone of Manchester; Corresponding Secretary, H. F. Hill of Concord; Executive Committee, John M. Hill, George E. Jenks of Concord, and W. A. Wallace of East Canaan.

The Association voted to make an excursion in July to Burlington, Lake Champlain, Lake George, Saratoga, and down the Hudson to New York, returning home via the Fall River route.

Newspaper Postage.

The passage by the Press Association of the vote requesting Congressmen to amend the postage laws so that exchange papers shall pass through the mails free and also to allow subscribers resident in the county wherein their papers are published to receive them free of postage, is, we think, a mistake, and will have a pernicious effect. If there is any injustice in the present law there is no need of such action. There is always a deficiency of millions of dollars per annum in the post office department, caused by the excess of expenditures over receipts. The abolition of the franking privilege was a triumph of reform, and it ill becomes an association of editors to request special legislation to carry their goods through the mails free while other citizens are obliged to pay. If the rates of postage on papers are too high they should be reduced, not abolished. The effect that the present law may have on the various interests of the country press as compared with the metropolitan papers should not be considered. Either all papers or none should go free. To discriminate is unjust. As a matter of equity the present law is a just one, treating all alike. Were we to consider the matter in a wholly selfish manner, the proposition to return to free delivery would have our hearty support, but as a matter of right and justice we oppose it as an opening wedge calculated to a re-agitation for the restoration of the franking privilege. The danger of free institutions lies mainly in special legislation, and we regret to see the New Hampshire Press Association leading in demands that are founded on rivalry rather than justice.

The Press Gathering.

Good greeting gave Manchester to the Publishers, Editors, and Printers' Association on Tuesday. The weather was delightful and from eight o'clock in the morning until late in the afternoon representatives of the press from all parts of New Hampshire, and also many from neighboring States, continued to arrive. At two o'clock the members of the association and their ladies, together with invited guests, sat down in Masonic Hall to a sumptuous repast provided far them by W. Tufts of Boston. The hall was handsomely decorated with flowers. There were two hundred and fifty persons present, and after doing justice to the good things provided the chairman, Mr. John B. Clarke of the Manchester Mirror, introduced Mr. C. F. Livingstone as toastmaster. The first toast on the list was "Benjamin Franklin," and a song by a quartette party was given in response. Then followed "New Hampshire," which was responded to by his Excellency Governor Straw. "Manchester" was responded to by Mayor Weston and ex-Mayor J. P. Newell, Esq. Various speeches were made, all more or less eulogizing the power and importance of the press. Among the speakers were ex-Governors Smyth and Stearns; Editors Elwell of Portland, E. B. Haskell of Boston, E. C. Bailey of Concord and G. S. Merrill of Lawrence; Colonel W. H. Hackett of Portsmouth, Orren C. Moore of Nashua, B. F. Guild of Boston and many others. "Woman" was responded to by Dr. P. A Stackpole of Dover. The proceedings were enlivened by several songs and duets by the quartette party, and the affair came to a close at five o'clock by the company joining in the song of "Auld Lang Syne."

In the evening, Gov. Straw's palatial residence was the scene of a brilliant assemblage, a levee being tendered the Association by the Governor. The Manchester people did their best, as they always do, for the entertainment of the Association. Long may its Smyths, and Straws, and Westons, Governors, Ex-Governors, Mayors and Ex-Mayors, be prosperous and hospitable, teaching other cities the way to thrive and be liberal.

Biddeford Bridge Burned.

The P. S. & P. Railroad bridge at Biddeford, 700 feet long, was burned between one and two o'clock, Tuesday afternoon. It is supposed that the fire caught from a spark from freight C. On the arrival of the through train from Boston the passengers crossed on the ice, but it was not deemed very safe, and those who came by later trains were transferred in coaches round by the highway, a drive of about a mile and a half. The delay occasioned was about twenty minutes. The bridge was an ordinary covered trestle bridge, built on five stone piers, the spans averaging one hundred feet. It was built about twelve years ago, was considered a fine bridge, and is said to have cost $70,000. This included the cost of the piers, which are only very slightly damaged. The ice on the river is strong enough to bear workmen to repair the bridge, but would not admit of the weight of transporting teams.

An arrangement has been effected with the Portland and Rochester Railroad by which all the through freight from Boston to points east will be taken over the Rochester road until the new bridge can be completed. On receipt of the news in Boston a head-carpenter was summoned from Salem, and the piles and other timber for the temporary bridge was picked out at East Boston and sent down. A large gang of laborers is building the temporary structure on the site of the old one, and it is expected to be finished by the close of the week. A permanent iron bridge will probably be built over the temporary one as soon as possible. A few of the through trains were delayed about an hour, and the eight o'clock Bangor train Tuesday night came only as far as Portsmouth, the Boston train remaining at Portland.

Not So.

[Chelsea Pioneer]

That the Eastern Railroad has had some heavy mishaps, during the past two years, is true; but the impression that generally prevails, in consequence, is a signal error. In spite of accidents, the comparison with other roads shows a very large per cent. in favor of the Eastern. A paragraph in the Portland Argus, giving the number of passengers carried during the year 1872, (the latest report made) and the number killed on the Eastern—Boston & Lowell—Boston & Providence—Boston, Hartford & Erie—Boston & Albany—Fitchburg—and Boston & Maine, shows that the percentage in favor of the Eastern Road was—

Over the Boston & Lowell,		124 per ct.
"	Providence,	110
"	H'rt'd & Erie,	60
"	Albany	256
"	Fitchburg	24
"	Maine	38

These figures prove that the Eastern has been decidedly the safest for passengers, of the seven large roads running from Boston; and the general confidence in the vigorous and careful management of the Eastern, is thus justified by the fact. It is admitted, that the best superintendent of all our Railroad lines, is Mr. Prescott, of the Eastern—and the confidence in him, which is too strong to be shaken, is vindicated by the testimony of the Railroad Commissioners—who, in their last report (1873) truly say, that no railroad in the United States exercises such vigilance to prevent accidents, as does the Eastern. They testify to the unstinted expense of the road in providing electric signals; the best modern appliances and modes of constructing rolling stock; and the thorough precautions used, in all ways and throughout the line. If, in spite of all this, accidents occur, it only proves that the weakest part of every plan, lies in faithless or foolish men; and men the superintendent must take, and the chances with them. But the efficiency of the organization upon the road, manifests itself in the low rate of fatal accidents; and when people speak of the danger upon this road, the figures of comparison with other roads, show, and that conclusively, that it is not so. On the contrary, the system on the Eastern, makes it, as we would reasonably expect, the safest for travellers in the United States.

A Lunatic Ball.

A ball was recently given in the Lunatic Asylum at Toronto, and the poor inmates took part in the festivities. The Globe, in its account of the ball, says: "Among the dancers who sped around the ball with 'flying feet' were many whose thoughts were spinning more wildly. And this was apparent in the grand dance of the evening, which was announced as the 'jig,' and designed exclusively for the patients. Twenty couples took the floor, ranged in two lines, facing each other; and stood still, in profound silence, waiting for the music. In this party the strangeness of the performers was most apparent. The men wore a look upon their faces of such resolution as one would expect on that of a brave face to face with some terrible danger. The women were more wandering in their glances, but nearly all serious too. The music burst forth and a simultaneous movement followed; all sorts of movements, some cultivated steps, but for the most part a mere violent shuffling exercise. Directly they all seemed to have forgotten that they had partners and settled down into dancing. There was some peculiarity about every individual, but in every one was observable a sort of estacy. One girl, with wild dark eyes, and her black hair hanging loose around her neck, would occasionally pause, as if trying to recollect where she had acted such a part in other scenes, but, glancing at the company all engaged around her, she would resume her motions. Some of them kept their gaze fixed on the ceiling, turning neither to the right nor left; others kept a watch upon their feet, which, to their bewildered minds were perhaps going sadly astray. Very soon the organization lost shape; the original partners had wandered hopelessly away from each other. But, with instinctive gallantry on the one side and gentle acquiescence on the other, the men swung and twirled whichever lady happened to be within their reach at the moment when they thought the music indicated "swing your partners." There was no covert and surreptitious flirtation going on, no squeezing of hands during this Terpsichorean achievement, which equalled for seriousness the highest devotional exercises of the Shakers. It must be confessed that at this stage of the entertainment our reflections of a short time before were rather shaken, and our serenity, in view of lunacy considered as an ailment, was disturbed to witness so much animation without gaiety, and what is a source of real enjoyment rendered seemingly by these patients in a manner that looked like enforced duty. Here were grave looking, intellectual men who, we were informed, had well known names in Canadian society, in literature and science, capering through the "Lancers" and introducing new and astonishing changes in quadrilles, while all around were massed groups of non-participants, nearly all quiet, or, tender-hearted people might think, filled with the deepest melancholy."

Readables.

At Bennington, Vt., Tuesday afternoon, the knitting mill of H. E. Bradford was burned. By a gasoline explosion, nine women were killed or burned to death, and many others were shockingly injured. The loss of property is estimated at $100,000.

Chang and Eng, the Siamese twins, died at their residence at North Alry, N. C., on Saturday. The death of Chang produced mental aberration, followed by a deadly stupor, in Eng, and he survived his brother but two hours.

At the editors' banquet, Gov. Straw referred to the region about Manchester as being sparsely settled, forty years ago, the dams of the water-power not being built. Editor Guild, of the Boston Commercial Bulletin, created much merriment afterward by asking if those present realized that forty years ago that region was not worth a dam!

Senator Sargent of California, who has successfully led the opposition to the confirmation of Caleb Cushing, is a native of Newburyport. Hence his intimate acquaintance with the personal history of Mr. C.

The report of the engineer of the Portland & Ogdensburg Railroad states that the grading and masonry between the Upper Bartlett station and the Crawford House are now nearly completed. The bridge across the Albany Brook in Upper Bartlett is erected, and the material for the three other most important bridges on this division, two for crossing the Saco and one for crossing Sawyer's River, is being prepared so that the track may be laid to a point within eight miles of the Crawford Notch summit, in season for next summer's travel. The line will pass close to the Crawford House, directly in front of the Fabyan House and within a stone's throw of the Twin Mountain House. Thence it runs through Carroll, Jefferson and Whitefield to Dalton. From the Twin Mountain House to the new Fabyan House the road bed will be made wide enough to accommodate also the track of the Boston, Concord and Montreal Railroad Company.

Decorated China Sets Cheap.—We recently called the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Richard Briggs, 137 Washington street, Boston, who is offering decorated dinner and tea sets at greatly reduced prices. The plan which he has adopted for the first time in this country, of offering really desirable China sets at very low prices, is meeting with great success, and we advise all to avail themselves of the rare opportunity to supply their tables with a handsome service for about the usual cost of ordinary white China.

A Reanimated System.

Nervous, debilitated and desponding, the sufferer from indigestion and billiousness deserves the kindly sympathy of every man and woman whom heaven has blessed with a vigorous stomach and a regular flow of healthy bile. While in this forlorn condition let him commence a course of that supreme restorative, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. At the end of four or five weeks ask him how he feels and regard him attentively. You will see a new man, you will hear a new voice. Health and vigor will have returned to his frame, his words will be cheerful in purport and in tone, his eye will be clear and its expression untroubled, and he will tell you that he is free from pain, has a good appetite, sleeps soundly, and that his habit of body is natural and regular. We have seen this wonderful change effected in hundreds of instances by a faithful, persevering use of this incomparably mediated stimulant, which is among tonic remedies what Mount Washington is among the surrounding acclivities, it over-tops them all.

VEGETINE is the great health restorer—composed exclusively of barks, roots and herbs. It is very pleasant to take; every child likes it.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver or "Biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. 708

—This is the experience of a woman in Bridgeport, Conn., who believes readily all she reads in the papers. She had read in half a dozen different journals the following recipe, and had resolved to give it a trial. We refer to the recipe which says that "a table-spoonful of sawdust placed in each boot will keep the feet both dry and warm." The husband of this Bridgeport woman was always complaining about cold feet, and so the other morning she poured two tablespoonfuls of sawdust into his boot. The result rather surprised her. He slipped on his boots, ate his breakfast, and started for his place of his business. He had not gone 25 yards from the house before he retraced his steps and commenced to orate on profane history. He then assisted one of his boots off with the toe of the other, and kicked it against a $10 mirror, while its mate struck his seven year-old son on the head and made him yell lustily. His wife, seeing that something ailed her husband, asked, "What's the matter dear?" He said something that sounded like "Jam it!" gathered up his boots, and after emptying out the sawdust, replaced them on his feet, and shot out of the house, with his feet warm clear up to the roots of the head. His wife thinks maybe she used the wrong kind of sawdust.

Local Matters.

Laconics.

An item from Chelsea, Mass., says that Mr. B. P. Shillaber is still confined to his residence, and, to the regret of every one, was unable to lecture, as announced, in the Broadway Methodist Church.

In its desire to make fun, the Times casts many unmerited imputations on the Navy Yard workmen. From reading its issues of late, intended for political effect, were we unacquainted in Portsmouth we should judge that nearly all the men employed at the yard are thieves; and half of the employes are Portsmouth men. Fun is fun—but bearing false testimony against one's neighbors is not fun.

Court came down from Exeter on Wednesday, once more resolved to try Jeff C. Rowe's suit against the Eastern Railroad. Counsel for plaintiff had amended the original declaration, which amendment was accepted by the court. Counsel for defence was irritated, and demurred; so the case goes over again. Nice game of shuttlecock!

The Indians advertised to appear in conjunction with other celebrities at Washburn's Sensation are the real persons advertised and no humbug. Theatre goers will remember that Mr. Washburn had one of the best of the travelling shows visiting this city since last year. Since then other attractions have been added to the entertainment.

The miserable exchange wrestler who puts the mucilage brush in the ink bottle, and slices copy paper into bits and leaves them on our desk when we are absent for an hour, is once more convalescent, we regret to say. If there is any spare fiend from the infernal regions who has a leisure hour, we invoke his services in following the intolerable nuisance to some solitary bone-orchard.

After a dearth of good amusements come Buckley's Serenaders, who advertise one of their entertainments for this evening. G. Swaine Buckley is the manager, and that assurance should suffice for the minstrel and burlesque operatic performance to be worth enjoying. "La Somnambula" is on the programme. The orchestra has some fine selections.

The Aldermanic Board having voted to exempt from taxation for a term of ten years the capital stock of a leading shoe firm, a petition is being circulated asking that the vote be rescinded.

The fall of snow on Wednesday improved the sleighing, covering the bare spots in the country roads.

"Break! break! break! O! shell that imprisons me. Hatch! hatch! hatch! O! chicken that is to be." Again—"And the old hen wearily goes to her nest just under the hill, to wait for the 'peep' of the coming chick, for a sound of the voice that is still." These lines betray genius—genius, somehow or other, is always being betrayed.

Asa Dean from Bladensburg is in town.

"Let Him Without Sin," etc.

The Kittery correspondent of the Maine Standard, (popularly supposed to be the same "Agent, etc.," who used to give our neighbor the Times a weekly column of information concerning the indignation of the republicans of Kittery at the CHRONICLE'S withholding its admiration of the superhuman virtues and abilities of the aforesaid "Agent, etc.,") has considerable to say of the "nepotism" at the navy yard. He feels particularly bad because five persons of one family, one of whom at least did gallant service on the right side during the democratic slaveholders' rebellion, held positions there and draw $22 per day. We like to help on a good cause, and furnish the Standard's correspondent with the following list of persons belonging to or connected with a single family who hold positions on the navy yard or in the navy under Andrew Johnson, hoping he will use it as the basis of his next article on "nepotism" on the navy yard.

Andrew J. Stimson, naval storekeeper, $1800 per annum; Charles Stimson, foreman carpenter, $1400; John Stimson, Wm. O. Stimson, carpenters in the navy, $1200 each; Melvin O. Stimson, assistant engineer in the navy, about $1000; Martin V. B. Stimson, writer, $3 per day; David Stimson, joiner, $3 per day. That's all the brothers there were, and as there wasn't enough to go 'round the brothers-in-law were looked after as follows: O. H. Gerry, carpenter in the navy, $1200 per year; Sylvanus McIntire, asst. eng. in the navy, about $1000; H. Amazeen, calker, $3.50 per day; Capt. Storer, writer, Thomas Rice, rigger, M. Tobey, carpenter, Joshua Gerry, carpenter, Jotham Gerry, carpenter, Albert Gerry, carpenter, each $3 per day; Frank Roberts, C. Achorn, A. Bowden, H. Bowden, N. Bowden, fasteners, each $2.50 per day; David Grogan, (father-in-law,) $2.25; S. Quin, (son-in-law to O. H. Gerry,) sailmaker, $3 per day.

We think the Standard's Kittery correspondent should be able to do a good thing with the above list,—to spread himself out very thin, over a large sheet of paper; and we place it also at the service of our neighbor, the Times, as a text when it feels like preaching a sermon on "nepotism,"—which never was or could be in vogue under a democratic administration.

The Scouts of the Plains.

This excellent company will appear at the Temple next Tuesday evening, Jan. 27th, with attractions which cannot fail to draw immensely. The company is said to be much superior to the organization of last season, and the sensational drama produced gives much better satisfaction to the audiences, if such a thing be possible. We clip the appended notice from the Cleveland Leader of recent date:

The "Scouts of the Plains," whose other names are Texas Jack, Buffalo Bill, and Wild Bill, drew a very crowded house last evening at Brainard's Opera House, and gave a very pleasant entertainment. Buffalo Bill, the king of border men, the dashing Texas Jack, and the great plainsman, humble scout, and law-preserver, Wild Bill, created quite a sensation in the drama, and gave a realistic rendition of scenes in the Western wilds that called forth enthusiastic plaudits from the entire assemblage. They gave an entertainment far superior to their previous visit, and the experience acquired is evidenced by their every action. They are extraordinary specimens of superior physical manhood, which coupled with the romance of their deeds, their "dangers by flood and field," justly entitles them to the position they hold in the estimation of the masses. They remain to-night only, and the thrilling scenes and startling situations through which the drama leads them, will ensure them a crowded farewell. The performance is highly enjoyable and worthy a visit. The dramatic company, in connection with Mr. Maeder, the author, is unexceptionably good.

Mistaken Identity.

A ludicrous case of mistaken identity occurred in Montreal a day or two ago, through the unfortunate resemblance of two young gentlemen, residents of that city, one of whom was recently married, while the other remains a bachelor. The married person went to a dinner party. The unmarried one, as it so happened, was similarly occupied on the same evening, but, unluckily for his reputation, he made a miscalculation as to his capacity for native wine, and spoiled his night's amusement. While a glimmer of reason remained, he endeavored to get home without attracting attention. By the time the poor young man reached a cab-stand, his mind had become so confused that he was unable to remember either his own name or the name of the street in which he lived. As he was engaged in gesticulating somewhat wildly to the cab-driver, a friend of the married young gentleman, happening to pass, noticed his plight, and confounding his identity with the latter, pushed him into a cab, whispered to the driver, and continued on his way. The result of this friendly act was the conveyance of the unmarried man to the house of the married man, where his lamentable condition, as may easily be supposed, created anything but a pleasant surprise. The young wife was, of course, deeply mortified at the figure he cut in her father's house. Subsequently, as he lay asleep upon a sofa, the father-in-law entered the room to remonstrate with him. After wasting much good advice, the father-in-law suddenly discovered the mistake that had been made by his daughter, and was in the act of trying to persuade the latter, probably much against her will, that the intoxicated young man was not her husband, when the real husband put an end to the dispute, and greatly increased the embarrassment of the household, by letting himself in at the hall-door with a latch-key.

Quaggs says marriage is like a flaming candle-light placed in the window on a summer night, inviting all the insects of the air to come and singe their pretty winglets there. Those who are out butt heads against the pane; those who are in butt to get out again!

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brushy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions disease of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

The Last Official Act of Governor Noyes of Ohio.

A Cincinnati paper tells the following story of the last moments of the official life of Governor Noyes of Ohio: While an immense crowd of people was collecting about the State house to witness the inaugural ceremonies (for it began to assemble early in the day), an affecting incident was taking place in the executive chamber, of which there were but one or two eye-witnesses. Hundreds of guests had called, and scores were calling, to say good-byes to Governor Noyes. Among those who entered the chamber, however, was an old man, thin, wrinkled, pale and gray-haired, and much bent by age and manifest suffering. He timidly asked to see the governor, who stepped aside to a window with him. The old man said he would have called before, but had been sick. He came at that late hour to make an appeal for the pardon of an erring son, who had been confined in the penitentiary for seven years, and who had three more to stay. "What is the name of your son?" asked the governor. The old man gave it. Governor Noyes then, without making him any definite reply, requested him to step into his private room and wait till he was at leisure. The fact was, the pardon had been granted early that morning, and the old man's daughter had already gone to carry the pardon to her brother and accompany him from the penitentiary to the governor's office. In a few moments the liberated man arrived with his sister, neither expecting to find the father there, and the father not dreaming that the pardon had already been granted. One can readily imagine the scene as the governor conducted the two to his private room. The son flew to his father and embraced him, and then flinging his arms around the governor's neck, covered his face with kisses. The old man, overcome by the great happiness of the moment, sank into his chair, sobbing like a child. There were no dry eyes in that room, and those who, a few minutes later, were talking and chatting with the retiring governor in the reception-room, little imagined in what a touchingly pathetic scene he had been a participant. The liberated man has a wife and child eight years old, a sister, and aged parents. It will be a pleasant reflection during his lifetime to General Noyes that it was the last act of his executive power to fill one household with the sunshine of happiness, and restore the beloved one long separated from them who had fearfully condemned for his crime.

—Lapeer, Mich., has had a dramatic entertainment. The "Union Spy" was produced, and the local editor's ecstatic feelings on the occasion may be inferred from his allusion to "a billowy ocean of foaming skirts, which, in their virgin and uncontaminated purity, rolled and surged and puffed in the gaslit air."

—The stringency in the egg market is painful. There has been a large falling off in deposits of late, many of the hens having entirely suspended, while others are holding on to their reserves. It is thought, however, that nearly all will be able to resume in the spring, when the crops begin to move.

—The amount of honey gathered in Aroostook county the past season, exclusive of the amount required to carry the bees through the winter, is estimated at upwards of twenty tons—more than any three counties in the State of Maine.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color. It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

Makes The Weak Strong,

PERUVIAN SYRUP

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an albuminous food, which readily assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, from the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Humors, Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot do wrong in giving it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

The BAZAR is edited with a contribution of tact and talent that we seldom find in any journal; and the journal itself is the organ of the great world of fashion.—Boston Traveller.

The BAZAR commends itself to every member of the household—to the children by their dress, pretty pictures, to the young ladies by its fashion-plates in endless variety, to the prudent matron by its patterns for the children's clothes, to paterfamilias by its tasteful designs for embroidered slippers and luxurious dressing-gowns. But the mainspring-matter of the BAZAR is uniformly of great excellence. The paper has acquired a wide popularity for the fireside enjoyment it affords.—N. Y. Evening Post.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1874—SEVENTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

An Illustrated Monthly Journal, universally admitted to be the handsomest Periodical in the world. A Representative and Champion of American Taste.

NOT FOR SALE IN BOOK OR NEWS STORES.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, lightsome and refreshing character, and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it has been bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—the only high combination in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes FOR TEN TIMES ITS COST; AND THEN, THERE ARE THE CHROMOS, BESIDE!

ART DEPARTMENT, 1874.

The illustrations of THE ALDINE have won a world-wide reputation, and in the art centres of Europe it is an admitted fact that its wood cuts are examples of the highest perfection ever attained. The common prejudice in favor of "steel plates," is rapidly yielding to a more educated and discriminating taste which recognizes the advantages of superior artistic quality with greater facility of production. The wood-cuts of THE ALDINE possess all the delicacy and delicate finish of the most costly steel plate, while they afford a better rendering of the artist's original.

In addition to designs by the members of the National Academy, and other noted American artists, THE ALDINE will reproduce examples of "the best foreign masters, selected with a view to the highest artistic success and greatest general interest. Thus the subscriber to "THE ALDINE will, at a trifling cost, enjoy in his own home the pleasures and refining influences of true art.

The Christmas Issue for 1874 will contain special designs appropriate to the season, by our best artists, and will surpass in attractions any of its predecessors.

PREMIUM FOR 1874.

Every subscriber to THE ALDINE for the year 1874 will receive a pair of chromos. The original pictures selected by the publishers of THE ALDINE, by Thomas Moran, whose great Colorado picture was purchased by Congress for ten thousand dollars. The subjects were chosen to represent "The East" and "The West." One is a view in The White Mountains, New Hampshire, the other gives The Cliffs of Green River, Wyoming Territory.

If any subscriber should indicate a preference for a figure subject, the publishers will send "Knights of Home," a new and beautiful chromo, 14x 20 inches, representing a little Italian exile to whose speaking eyes learn the longings of his heart.

TERMS.

$5 per annum, in advance, with Oil Chromos free.

For 50 CENTS EXTRA, the chromos will be sent, mounted, varnished, and prepaid by mail.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rate; nor for additional copies to be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsible Agents for the publication, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON & CO.

CANVASSERS WANTED.

CATARRH!

A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years. Cured.

And Droppings in Throat, Choking, Stranglings, Pains in the Side, Loins, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the

CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY.

To MESSRS. LITTLEFIELD & CO., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.:

I reside at Manchester N. H., and previously resided at Henniker, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 19 years old; I had it all the time. It run all that period, and nights it would fill up and drop down in my throat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I would spring up bed to save myself from strangulation. It affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headaches at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had foul pains in shoulders, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians; I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.

MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.

Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.

I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, choknigs and stranglings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.

Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left, Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

CRUMBS OF COMFORT

Are a modern stove polish, far better than any other in existence. Are better because they give a finer gloss than any other polish.

CRUMBS OF COMFORT

Are a neat and cleanly article, making no dirt nor dust when used. Can be used even in the parlor without the trouble of removing furniture or carpets.

Has no disagreeable sulphurous or strong acid smell when prepared for use, but are pleasant and harmless.

CRUMBS OF COMFORT

Are put up in neat style and in a form more convenient for use than any other polish. In each box are 12 sticks; 1 stick is sufficient for any stove, thus all waste is saved.

Are the cheapest polish in the market, because one box at 10 cents will polish as much surface as 25 cents' worth of the old polish.

CRUMBS OF COMFORT

Have just taken the 1st premium at the Indianapolis Exposition, in competition with several of the best of old stove polishes.

BUY CRUMBS OF COMFORT of your storekeeper, if he has them, or will procure them for you; if not, send us one dollar, your name, and the name of your nearest express station, and we will send you ten boxes, and samples of Bartlett's Blacking and Pearl Blueing, free of cost.

CRUMBS OF COMFORT can be had of all Wholesale Grocers and Dealers in the United States, and Retail Dealers will find them the most profitable, from the fact that they are the fastest selling article of the kind in the market.

THE OLD KITCHEN FLOOR.

Far back in my musings my thoughts have been cast
To the cot where the hours of my childhood were passed.
I loved all its rooms the pantry and hall,
But that blessed old kitchen was dearer than all.
Its chairs and its tables none brighter could be,
For all its surroundings were sacred to me;
To the nail in the ceiling, the latch on the door,
And I loved every crack in that old kitchen floor.

I remember the fire-place, with mouth high and wide,
The old-fashioned oven that stood by its side,
Out of which each Thanksgiving came puddings and pies,
That idrly bewildered and dazzled my eyes.
And then too St. Nicholas slyly and still,
Came down every Christmas our stockings to fill;
But the dearest memories I've laid up in store,
Is the mother that trod on that old kitchen floor.

Day in and day out, and from morning till night,
Her footsteps were busy, her heart always light,
For it seemed to me then that she knew not a care,
The smile was so gentle her face used to wear;
I remember with pleasure what joy filled our eyes,
When she told us the stories the children so prize;
They were new every night though we heard them before
From her lips at the wheel on the old kitchen floor.

To-night these old visions come back at the will,
But the wheel and its music forever are still;
The band is moth eaten the wheel laid away,
And the fingers that turned it are mould'ring to clay.
The hearth stone so sacred is just as 'twas then,
And the voices of children sing out there again.
The sun through the window looks in as of yore,
But he sees stranger feet on the old kitchen floor.

I ask not for honor, but this I would crave
That when the lips speaking are closed in the grave,
My children will gather their own at their side
And tell of their mother who long ago died.
'Twould be more endearing, far dearer to me,
Than inscription on marble or granite could be—
To have them tell often as I did of yore
Of the mother who trod on the old kitchen floor.

How to Write for Papers.

"Will you give me some hints in regard to writing for the papers?" asked a friend the other day. Certainly, I replied, with my wonted suavity; and if the professional journalist does not think my suggestions sensible, he will tuck them into his buck-basket just as ruthlessly as he did these articles you are wisely seeking to improve. What a world of nonsense he keeps us from seeing. But to my hints:

1. Never write for the papers unless you have something to say. Thoroughly good newspaper articles are only written when a man feels: "Necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me if I write not this article." If you have nothing to say, by all means say nothing.

2. Don't undertake to say what you have to say unless you are in your best mood. If you were a minister, I should say to you, explicitly, "never write for the papers on Monday." Those of us who are not ministers have our "Mondays"—though they often come in the middle of the week. It is, I have sometimes fancied, the custom of most amateur journalists to do their newspaper work when they are too much fagged mentally or physically, for "serious business." The minister, for instance, who is off the hooks, so he can't prepare a sermon for an audience of five hundred, rushes, incontinently (or would rush, but for the buck-basket) before an audience of fifty thousand or so. Ought this to be thus?

3. Jot down the points that you wish to make (at least mentally) before you begin to write. See the end of your article from the beginning. If you have no points to jot down, you have really nothing to say.

4. Put your points in the clearest and sharpest way possible. Don't cover them up with verbiage. Let them stick out.

5. Say what you have to say in the fewest possible words, and simplest possible manner. Never make use of an allusion, a quotation or a figure of speech, which does not distinctly promote the impression that you are seeking to make.

6. Stop when you are done. That is, possibly the great secret of the true journalist. He does not think that he must follow everything out to its last analysis. He contents himself with suggestive hints which his readers are competent to follow out, and love to follow out, for themselves. He realizes, now-a-days, articles are read, and prized, in proportion to their brevity. Of editorial matter:

A two column article has one reader in one hundred.

A column and a half, one reader in seventy-five.

A column article one reader in fifty.

A three-quarter column, one reader in twenty-five.

A half column, one reader in ten.

A quarter column, one reader in one.

Boil yourself down, then, before you write for the papers. Ask yourself with every fresh page of copy, "Am I not really through?"

7. Cultivate vivacity of style and variety of expression. Abound in crisp, terse, epigrammatic sentences. What Blair says of preachers is pre-eminently true of journalists: "Their first duty is to interest their audience." Here is where the "born, not made," comes in.

8. Write always with a realizing sense of the fact that every sentence—nay, every word—will be subjected to the severest criticism of ten thousand hostile eyes. Throw yourself into the attitude of a cynical, captious, ignorant adversary, and carefully criticise what you have written after it gets cold. You will be amused often, to see what nonsense you have written—what loopholes you have left invitingly open for attack.

9. Be courteous, even when fealty to truth compels you to be severe. Remember that you are a gentleman, whatever the advocate of rival opinions may prove himself. Keep out of controversy as far as possible. It rarely pays. Never, in any circumstances, be betrayed into a controversy with the editor of a paper. He has got you too entirely at his mercy.

10. See to it that what you send to a newspaper be paragraphed, spelled, and capitalized as it should be. Write on one side of small sized paper in a neat, clear hand, and shun abbreviations. Take time to spell out all words that will have to be spelled out in print.

11. Make up your mind to acquiesce cheerfully in any disposition which the editor may, in his wisdom or folly, make of your articles. Ten to one, his judgment of your lucubrations is more trustworthy than yours. Certainly he knows better than you, quod decet (as Cicero, Horace, and Quintilian would say); that is, what hits the very highest grace of journalism—adaptation.

Readables.

The U. S. Senate confirmed Hon. Morrison R. Waite of Ohio to be Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, on Monday, sixty-three Senators voting in favor of and not one against him.

The house committee on public lands has agreed to report a bill abolishing pre-emption, and retaining the homestead method, settlers securing land free of cost. It requires an actual residence of five years. The bill, however, does not interfere with rights secured to soldiers and sailors under the late law, allowing them to enter a quarter section of land.

The committee on ways and means has agreed to a bill fixing the limit of currency at $400,000,000, and legalizing the issue of legal-tender reserve, which will swell the volume to that figure.

L. Q. Sherwood, who had been very dissipated for many years, who had given all his property to his wife, who had a divorce suit on his hands, and, to cap all, was a member of the Indianapolis city council, has withdrawn from the battle of life and gone to an insane asylum.

The new Globe Theatre will cost $65,000 exclusive of stage and fixtures.

State News.

Edwin Sargent of Grantham was thrown from his team, loaded with wood, on the 19th, and when found was dead.

A few days ago, a gentleman in Concord purchased a black horse, and took him to a livery stable for keeping. The proprietor has a white cat which strays about the stable, but on Monday night nothing was seen of her. On going into the stall of the black horse, Tuesday morning, the cat was found cuddled up on the horse's back, sound asleep. She was taken off, and made persistent efforts to get back again, but was prevented from doing so. The horse became restive, and the cat was permitted to go back again, when she immediately went to sleep and the horse became quiet.

The Patriot at Concord has heard a good description of Washington pies which will bear publishing. It seems that a man, who lives not a thousand miles from Concord, had his first experience in Washington pies recently, and shortly afterward in conversation with a friend, said: "They were the best flap-jacks I ever ate. They were about an inch thick, with two crusts, and bad Peruvian syrup spread all over between them."

The Nashua Telegraph says, "One touch of nature" was beautifully illustrated by three little girls who not long since lost their mother by death. Hearing that a lady friend of the family was dying, these three little children went to their grandmother, called her aside and whispered in her ear: "Mrs.——is dying, and we want you to tell her to give our best love to our mother."

The Concord People expresses itself like the remainder of the New Hampshire press in saying that nobody knows exactly how to make suitable acknowledgments for the manner in which the recent banqueting and the *et cetera*s were carried on at Manchester.

The Dover democrats propose to discard the Dover Democrat and establish a new paper.

Oliver Cotton has been appointed postmaster at East Northwood.

A sash and blind factory in Goffstown was burned on the evening of the 20th. Loss $6000; no insurance.

The stockholders of the Manchester Print Works have unanimously voted to sell the property.

The Nashua Telegraph thinks there is a good opening at Dover for "any democratic editor out of a job, out of principles, and out of funds." We think we could name one for a cent.

We are pleased to learn that Hon. Austin F. Pike is so far recovered from his recent illness that he is able to return to Washington and resume his seat in Congress.

James Hobbs, of South Berwick, administrator of the estate of Mary A. Hobbs of the same town, has brought a suit for damages against the Eastern railroad company for killing Mary A. Hobbs, at South Berwick in November, 1872. Mrs. Hobbs went from North to South Berwick, Nov. 6, 1872. It is alleged that at the South Berwick station, a portion of the train ran by the platform before stopping and Mrs. Hobbs, who was in the rear of the train, attempted to alight, not knowing the train would back up, and was thrown down between the platform and cars, that one arm was crushed and severed from the body. She died shortly after the accident. Her administrator now brings suit for $10,000 damages.

The "License Alliance," composed of hotel keepers and liquor dealers, met at Concord on Friday and held a secret session. We understand that they voted to call a delegate State convention to nominate an independent candidate for Governor. A separate meeting of druggists was also held at the same time, and Mr. Chas. A. Tufts of Dover was elected president. They desire a modification of the prohibitory law but will take no part in politics except to advocate the election of representatives favoring their views.

Boston Boot and Shoe Market

(Shoe and Leather Recorder.)

The buyers have been pretty numerous during the week, and represent many of the heaviest jobbing houses of the West. Samples had previously been sent to that section, and resulted in several sales, but not such important ones as had been anticipated. The buyers now here have put in rather a late appearance. For some years past the rule has been to place their orders in December, and manufacturers have been somewhat disappointed at their failure to do so this season. Still as the proverb says, "Better late than never," and, on the whole we think the delay will be rather beneficial than otherwise, as the outlook is certainly brighter to-day than it would have been if the orders had been placed earlier. Some of our manufacturers are now pretty busy, especially the producers of brogans, and although the general prospect cannot be described as brilliant, there is no ground for discouragement, so far as we are able to forecast the future. The consumption of boots and shoes is going on all the time, and the crops of all kinds are enriching the country. Indeed, there is enough of agricultural produce after all our domestic wants are provided for to keep all the available tonnage between Chicago and Liverpool fully employed, and the state of the European markets, especially for our cereals, is quite favorable. We think that this ought to be borne in mind by all parties interested in the shoe trade. It affords a reasonable ground of hope to manufacturers of boots and shoes that there will be an early recovery from the slight depression that at present prevails; but, in general, they are able to take care of themselves, and need no lecture from us. There are, however, some of the weak-kneed who may derive benefit from an occasional word of encouragement. The rubber factories are mostly shutting down for the season, but a good many of them are getting up their new lasts for the summer and fall trade. Our jobbers are doing a pretty fair business at satisfactory prices. The New England trade is rather quiet, and will probably remain so for five or six weeks longer. The city retail trade has been dull, and there is no immediate expectation of an improvement.

A New Lincoln Anecdote.

Col. Lewis D. Campbell, under the skillful playing of a reporter's fingers, recently gave forth the following anecdote: He called upon President Lincoln during the war, and was kindly received with the question, "What can I do for you, Lew.?" "Informing him of my wish to go with McLean to Fort Lafayette, I said I desired him to give me a permit to do so." "Is that all?—most certainly will I;" and picking up a blank card, he wrote on it in pencil:

"Allow Col. Lew. D. Campbell to enter Fort Lafayette. A. LINCOLN."

I read it, and thanking him, said, "All right, Mr. President, as far as it goes; but I would much prefer to have you add one thing more." Taking the card again and reading it aloud he inquired, "What more do you think necessary?" "Please add the words 'also to come out.'" Catching the idea, he stretched out his long legs, and leaning back in his chair he again laughed loud enough to be heard all over the mansion. After adding the words, which he said were very important in those days, he inquired, "Lew., why did you not remain in the army?—you ought to be there." I replied, "My health failed, and I could not have lived until now in the service; but why do you think I should have remained?" "Because," said he, "you seem to have the natural elements for successful military service. Whilst you are disposed to push forward, you have at the same time the prudence to guard the rear and provide for a safe retreat if necessary."

—Fine State, Nebraska. A journal of that region remarks: "Who says farmers can not get rich in this State? Fifteen years ago, a young man came to the State, without a dollar in the world. Last week he went out of the State, carrying with him the sum of one dollar and thirty-eight cents, the savings of fifteen years of frugal life. Come West, young man, come West!"

—Florida already rejoices in green peas and new potatoes.

Contempt of Court.

Mr. Rawley walked in, and close at his heels stalked Bitters. Both seated themselves; the one on a chair, and the other on end, directly in front of the Surrogate. Mr. Jagger looked at the dog with the solemn eye of a Surrogate, and shook his head as only a Surrogate can shake it.

"Are you the witness?" inquired he of the dog's master.

"I am, sir," replied Mr. Rawley. "I was subpœnaed to testify."

"What's that animal doing here?" demanded the Surrogate.

"Nothing," replied Mr. Rawley. "He comes when I comes. He goes when I goes."

"The animal must leave the court. It's contempt of court to bring him here," said Mr. Jagger, angrily. "Remove him instantly."

Mr. Rawley had frequently been in attendance at the police courts, and once or twice had a slight taste of the sessions; so that he was not so much struck with the Surrogate as he otherwise might have been; and he replied:

"I make no opposition, sir; and shall not move a finger to prevent it. There's the animal; and any officer as pleases may remove him. I said nuffin agin it. I knows what a contempt of court is; and that ain't one." And Mr. Rawley threw himself amicably back in the chair.

"Mr. Slagg!" said the Surrogate to the man with a frizzled wig, "remove the dog."

Mr. Slagg laid down his pen, took off his spectacles, went up to the dog, and told him to get out; to which Bitters replied by snapping at his fingers, as he attempted to touch him. Mr. Rawley was staring abstractedly out of the window. The dog looked up at him for instructions; and receiving none, supposed that snapping at a scrivener's fingers was perfectly correct, and resumed his pleasant expression toward that functionary, occasionally casting a lowering eye at the Surrogate as if deliberating whether to include him in his demonstrations of anger.

"Slagg, have you removed the dog?" said Mr. Jagger, who, the dog being under his very nose, saw that he had not.

"No, sir; he resists the Court," replied Mr. Slagg.

"Call Walker to assist you," said Mr. Jagger.

Walker, a thin man in drabs, had anticipated something of the kind, and had accidentally withdrawn as soon as he saw that there was a prospect of difficulty; so that the whole Court was set at defiance by the dog.

"Witness!" said Mr. Jagger.

Mr. Rawley looked the Court full in the face.

"Will you oblige the Court by removing that animal?" said Mr. Jagger, mildly.

"Certainly, sir," said Mr. Rawley. "Bitters, go home." Bitters rose stiffly and went out, first casting a glance at the man with the wig, for the purpose of being able to identify him on some future occasion; and was soon after seen from the window walking up the street with the most profound gravity.

A Word of Warning.

(Providence Journal.)

All defalcations and betrayals of trust of every kind usually begin with very small beginnings. He who takes the first step in this direction loses his integrity, and is pretty sure to travel on to final ruin as fast as his opportunities shall invite him. Nothing is more dangerous in such matters than for a man to calculate the chances of the discovery of what he has done that is wrong. So soon as he does this his honesty is gone, and he may set himself down a knave in spirit and character, even though no one suspects him. Equally dangerous is it for a man to govern himself by what he imagines to be the practice of others. He who excuses himself in an act of fraud by saying that "it's what everybody does," owns himself to be utterly destitute of principle, and not worthy to be trusted for a moment. If it is true that his associates do such things, that is a reason why he should quit them forever, but no shadow of a reason why he should imitate them in what they do.

Healing Lung Diseases.

We find the following reported and give it for what it may be worth. So many cures for consumption have been advertised, that it is well to be skeptical: "Dr. William Kock, of Berlin, well known to specialists from his investigations in the domain of surgery, and from his treatise on gunshot fractures, has discovered a new method of treatment for consumption. It consists in healing up the affected portions of the lungs by injections of iodine, so as to check the process of festering, which is the origin of the disease. The treatment has been tested in the great hospitals of Berlin within a short time, among others at the Royal Charity, in the presence of the most eminent surgeons. All the reports of the cases in which this treatment has been administered are favorable, and hold out a promise of a complete cure. For years Dr. Koch has been trying the experiment with animals, having tested it with more than three hundred, at a vast outlay of time and money."

Little Sins.

Henry Ward Beecher says: "I know men who wouldn't shave on Sunday, but would black their boots. Then I know some who would shave on Sunday, but wouldn't black their boots. And I know of others who wouldn't do either on Sunday, but would shave their neighbors awfully on Monday. When I went to school I boarded with Dr. Langbein, and he was a good man; for an icicle can be good. I could hook it down his back stairs, go off hunting, return, and recite my lesson from a slip in my hat. Now, the bread that was left over at the communion service in church was sent over for Dr. Langbein's table, and, while I could deceive him, as I have told you, I couldn't eat a morsel of that bread."

Decorated China Sets Cheap.—We recently called the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Richard Briggs, 137 Washington street, Boston, who is offering decorated dinner and tea sets at greatly reduced prices. The plan which he has adopted for the first time in this country, of offering really desirable China sets at very low prices, is meeting with great success, and we advise all to call themselves of the rare opportunity to supply themselves with a handsome service for about the usual cost of ordinary white China.

A Reanimated System.

Nervous, debilitated and desponding, the sufferer from indigestion and billiousness deserves the kindly sympathy of every man and woman whom heaven has blessed with a vigorous stomach and a regular flow of healthy bile. While in this forlorn condition let him commence a course of that supreme restorative, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. At the end of four or five weeks ask him how he feels and regard him attentively. You will see a new man, you will hear a new voice. Health and vigor will have returned to his frame, his words will be cheerful in purport and in tone, his eye will be clear and its expression untroubled, and he will tell you that he is free from pain, has a good appetite, sleeps soundly, and that his habit of body is natural and regular. We have seen this wonderful change effected in hundreds of instances by a faithful, persevering use of this incomparable medicated stimulant, which is among tonic remedies what Mount Washington is among the surrounding acclivities, it over-tops them all.

VEGETINE is the great health restorer—composed exclusively of barks, roots and herbs. It is very pleasant to take; every child likes it.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver or "Biliousness," and nothing will cure you speedily and permanently as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. 708

The only Unfailing Specific for diseases of the Kidneys, Bladder, and the organs affected by vicious habits, is Helmbold's Extract Buchu. This medicine cures. Dr. Helmbold is the only physician who has succeeded in obtaining the full virtues of Buchu. His is the original and only truly valuable preparation. It is confided in by physicians and patients alike. It is important that sufferers should obtain the genuine. Therefore ask for Helmbold's Extract Buchu, with the Doctor's signature on the bottle. For sale by all druggists.

Portsmouth Gymnasium Association.

At a meeting held at the office of Dr. A. P. Stevens, Monday evening, a gymnasium association was organized with the following officers: President, Dr. James R. May; Vice Presidents, Dr. A. P. Stevens, Edward D. Kimball; Secretary, Israel Kimball, Jr.; Treasurer, A. C. Hoyt; Directors, James B. Parrott, Plumer D. Norton, Dr. E. B. Goodall, Dr. Brainard Dearborn, Chas. A. Hazlett, Maj. Daniel J. Vaughan, Col. William H. Sise, Shirley B. Cunningham, Chas. O. Tiffany, C. Percy Lamprey, Frank Hatch, Dr. John W. Parsons. The President and Vice Presidents were made ex-officio members of the Board of Directors. Dr. A. P. Stevens, Plumer D. Norton and Geo. W. Marston were appointed a committee to draft a constitution and by-laws. Messrs. Parrott, Lamprey and Cunningham, with the President and Secretary, were chosen a committee to report a suitable hall for the association, which adjourned to Dr. Stevens' office next Monday evening at half-past seven o'clock.

Laconics.

The People understands that the deputy-collectorship of the port of Portsmouth has been tendered to a gentleman of Concord.

We regret to learn that Col. William H. Sise, aid to Gov. Straw, fell on the ice at Manchester and broke one arm below the elbow on Wednesday.

The democrats of the second ward of Dover have resolved that whereas Joshua L. Foster, editor of Foster's Democrat, being a member of the democratic committee of Ward 2, by his repudiating the nominations made by the recent State convention held at Concord, and, furthermore, by denouncing the resolutions there unanimously adopted, has forfeited the confidence of every democrat in the city, and they confidently believe throughout the entire State; and Joshua L. Foster is deposed as a member of said committee.

Wake up, oh! Board of Trade! You are expected to meet the Dover Board and make an excursion to Boston, free gratis, when the P. & D. R. R. is christened, Feb. 1st.

The Times says it is not aware that it has misrepresented the navy yard workmen. We wish to ask our neighbor if it considers the following extract from its issue of the 20th true: An order requiring navy yard employes to remove the covers from their dinner kettles and to turn the kettles bottom side up as they leave the yard after the P. M. roll-call, went into effect last Saturday. * * * Notwithstanding the many tricks practiced and the large number of kettles that were emptied of their contents before the guards were reached, we learn that the pile of stuff that was emptied from the dinner kettles at the landing, filled a horse-cart three times, heaping full.

Busby's Iron Wedding.

[Max Adeler.]

Busby, of Trenton, celebrated his "iron wedding" one day last week, and he invited about one hundred and twenty guests to the wedding. Of course each person felt compelled to bring a present of some kind and each one did. When Mr. and Mrs. Smith came they handed Busby a pair of flatirons. When Mr. and Mrs. Jones arrived, they also had a pair of flatirons. All hands laughed at the coincidence. And there was even greater merriment when the Browns arrived with pairs of flatirons. But when Mr. and Mrs. Robinson came in with another pair of flatirons the laughter became perfectly convulsive. There was, however, something less amusing about it when the Thompsons arrived with four flatirons wrapped in brown paper. And Busby's face actually looked grave when the three Johnson girls were ushered into the parlor carrying a flatiron apiece. Each one of the succeeding sixty guests brought flatirons, and there was no break in the continuity until old Mr. Curry arrived from Philadelphia, with a castiron cowbell. Now Busby has no earthly use for a cowbell, and at any other time he would have treated such a present with scorn. But now he was actually grateful to Mr. Curry, and he was about to embrace him, when the Walsinghams came in with the new kind of double-pointed flatirons with wooden handles. And all the rest of the guests brought the same articles excepting Mr. Rugby, and he had with him a patent stand for holding flatirons. Busby got madder and madder every minute, and by the time the company had all arrived, he was nearly insane with rage; and he went up to bed, leaving his wife to entertain the guests. In the morning they counted up the spoils, and found that they had two hundred and thirteen flatirons, one stand, and a cow-bell. And now the Busbys have cut the Smiths, and Browns, and Johnsons, and Thompsons, and the rest entirely, for they are convinced that there was a preconcerted design to play a trick upon them. The fact, however, is, that the hardware store in the place had an overstock of flatirons, and sold them at an absurdly low figure, and Busby's guests unanimously went for the cheapest thing they could find, as people always do on such occasions. Busby thinks he will not celebrate his "silver wedding."

Preparing Poultry for Market.

A firm of commission merchants give the following directions for preparing poultry for market:

Secure plump, well-fatted birds. Bleed them in the throat. Scald enough to make the feathers come off easy; pick both feathers and pin-feathers all off nicely, taking great care not to bruise or break the skin in any way. If one or two in the lot should accidentally get bruised or have the skin broken, sell or use at home, as they will hurt the sale of the whole lot. Leave the legs and feet on. After they are dressed, hang them in a cool place, where they will dry off and get stiff before packing. Pack in boxes or barrels in nice, clean rye straw; if this cannot be obtained, dry oat straw may be used. Be sure and pack solid, so they will not bruise in transit. Pack with breasts down. Poultry prepared in this way always find a ready market, while poor half-dressed, swatty (caused by packing while warm) and bruised lots will not sell well at any time.

Many farmers make a practice of feeding their half-starved fowls all they will eat just before killing, and then send them to market with full crops, in order to get the price of poultry for corn. In this they make a mistake; the crop being swollen to an unusual size, turns black after being packed a while, and not only shows clearly the dishonest intentions of the packer, but injures the sale of the fowls a great deal more than is gained in the weight. Feed meal only for at least two days before killing.

Remember, it is the appearance of goods that sells them. Nice, large, fat, plump, white turkeys, ducks, chickens or geese, always bring outside prices.

—Young ladies are now creating artificial dimples by sacrificing their four molars.

—A Sacramento dealer in hair-oil, who sold on the principle of "no cure, no pay," has sued one of his bald-headed customers, and the latter demands a bald-headed jury, in order that he may be tried by his peers.

—Umbrellas for the fashionable young women of the period are of navy blue serge-silk with ivory handles cut in the form of a cross. They are not ornamented in any way with silver or gold, and for that reason are very genteel and "nice looking."

Dr. O. Fitzgerald, the wonderful clairvoyant physician and surgeon, will visit Portsmouth and be at the Franklin House Tuesday, January 27th, remaining two days only. Don't fail to see him,—his cures are truly wonderful.

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair regrows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is prized for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Old Time Chronicles, No. 103.

BY UNCLE JOSEPH.

Stratham was a part of Exeter, so was included in what was called the Squamscott Patent. Exeter was settled in 1638, Newmarket a part of it about 1650, and probably the part now Stratham not far from that time, or not much later, for in 1697 there were 35 families. In 1709 there were 60 families. That year a petition was sent to the Provincial Governor and Council for a charter. The first reason urged was, the distance to meeting, some of them being obliged to travel four, others five, others six miles to Exeter. [Rev. John Odlin was the minister of Exeter then.] Another reason was, they wished a school, not having at that time ever had the benefit of one.

The number of signers to the petition was 51. A few of the names will be given with the spelling. Some of them are there now, and probably a portion of them have been, all through the time since. Jonathan Norris, Ephraim Levitt, Andrew Wiggin, Wm. French, Samuel Piper, Richard Crockett, James Runlett, Benj. Rawlins.

But there was opposition. The Council put it thus, "The following desire in obstruction of this petition was put in at this Board." The substance of it was a desire that the petition be denied, as the generality of the petitioners were poor people, and several of them, instead of defraying any town charges, are rather likely to be town charges themselves. Pretty hard thrust this.

The counter petition was signed by nineteen. The prominent names afterwards known in the place were John Clark, Charles Runlett, Benj. Tailor, Edward Fifield, David Robinson, Nath'l. Stevens, Joseph Moses and Thomas Robins.

In the action of the Council, the intention of the subscribers to sustain the worship of God was commended, and directed them to make a subscription of what each man would pay for the support of a minister, and bring the same to the next meeting of the Governor and Council.

There is no record of any thing of this kind being done. Six years passed and April 21, 1715, another petition for a charter was presented. It was signed by Andrew Wiggin, Simon Wiggin and others. The record is, that it was read in the Council and sent down to the Representatives. Nearly a year passed before the request was was granted. There was still opposition; as early in 1716, Mr. Smith appeared before the Council with names against a charter being granted. But March 14, 1716, it was granted. One condition was that a meeting house be built within half a mile of midway or the King's great road between Exeter and Greenland, and a learned orthodox minister to preach within one year be obtained.

we shall continue our business the same. Having met with good succes s the past year, by having a good share of the patronage of the city and vicinity, we hope, by being faithful and prompt in our business, to build up a

We shall continue to keep on hand a variety of Carriages, Sleighs, Harness, etc., which we shall sell as cheap as can be bought elsewhere of the same quality. We return thanks to our friends for past patronage, and hope for a continuance of the same.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.

It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND RHUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated as the healthy blood corpuscles. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the system. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its strengthening effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

Note that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

The BAZAR is edited with a contribution of tactand talent that we scarcely expect to meet in any journal; itself is the organ of the great world of fashion.—Boston Traveller.

The BAZAR commends itself to every member of the household—to the children by droll and pretty pictures, to the young ladies by its fashion-plates in endless variety, to the provident matron by its patterns for the children's clothes, to paterfamilias by its tasteful designs for embroidered slippers and luxurious dressing-gowns. But the reading-matter of the BAZAR is the wonder of present literature. The paper has acquired a wide popularity for the fireside enjoyment it affords.—N. Y. Evening Post.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1874--SEVENTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

An Illustrated Monthly Journal, universally admitted to be the handsomest Periodical in the world. A Representative and Champion of American Taste.

NOT FOR SALE IN BOOK OR NEWS STORES.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely character characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it has been bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The excellence of a complete volume cannot be duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shade or number of volumes FOR TEN TIMES ITS COST; AND THEN, THERE ARE THE CHROMOS, BESIDE!

ART DEPARTMENT, 1874.

The illustrations of THE ALDINE have won a world-wide reputation, and in the art centres of Europe it is an admitted fact that its wood cuts are examples of the highest perfection ever attained. The common prejudice in favor of steel plates, is rapidly yielding to a more educated and discriminating taste which recognizes the advantages of superior artistic quality with greater facility of production. The wood-cuts of THE ALDINE possess all the delicacy and elaborate finish of the most costly steel plate, while they afford a better rendering of the artist's original.

In addition to designs by the members of the National Academy, and other noted American artists, THE ALDINE will reproduce examples of the best foreign masters, selected with a view to the highest artistic success and greatest general interest. Thus the subscriber to THE ALDINE will, at a trifling cost, enjoy in his own home the pleasures and refining influences of true art.

The Christmas issue for 1874 will contain special designs appropriate to the season, by our best artists, and will surpass in attractions any of its predecessors.

PREMIUM FOR 1874.

Every subscriber to THE ALDINE for the year 1874 will receive a pair of chromos. The original pictures are now in office the publishers of THE ALDINE, by Thomas Moran, whose great Colorado picture was purchased by Congress for ten thousand dollars. The subjects were designed to represent "The East" and "The West." One is a view in The White Mountains, New Hampshire; the other gives The Cliffs of Green River, Wyoming Territory.

If any subscriber should indicate a preference for a figure subject, the publishers will send "Spring or Home," a new and beautiful chromo, 14x 20 inches, representing a little Italian exile whose speaking eyes betray the yearning of a heart.

TERMS.

$5 per annum, in advance, with Oil Chromos free.

For 50 CENTS EXTRA, the chromos will be sent, mounted, varnished, and prepaid by mail.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; each subscription must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases of false issue of notices given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON & CO.

CANVASSERS WANTED.

Any person wishing to act permanently as a local canvasser will receive full and prompt information by applying to

CATARRH!
A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years, Cured.
And Droppings in Throat, Chokings, Strangulings, Pains in the Side, Loins, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the
CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY.
To MESSRS. LITTLEFIELD & Co., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.:
I reside at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Hennicker, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 19 years old; had it bad all the time. It run at that period, and slight at times would fill up and drop down in my throat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I would spring up in bed to save myself from strangulation. It affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely, so bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies without any particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.
MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.
Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.
I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, chokings and strangulings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.
Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left, Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or think too loud or honestly that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

A Romance of the Treasury Department.
[N. Y. Graphic.]

On the top-most floor of the Treasury building at Washington, in the low-ceiled rooms directly under the roof, in the midst of the machinery, working with a cheerful vigor that gives heart to the dispirited ones toiling beside her, is a beautiful woman, twenty-three years of age, who has shone with the brilliancy her many fascinations evoke at European courts. About three or four years ago a German lady of high birth made what was supposed to be a very distinguished marriage with the Secretary of Legation of an American embassy at one of the continental courts. Her remarkable beauty, many accomplishments, but, above all, her quick intelligence and sunny disposition, at once won for her a conspicuous place in the society to which she was transferred. But it was not for long. Her husband possesses the single merit, for which he is in no wise responsible, of being an eminently handsome man. He has no other desirable qualification, and soon proved himself so unworthy a member of his legation that his chief dismissed him. He returned to this country last summer with his lovely young wife and two beautiful children. The wife is a true woman, loving to the last her husband. Until her arrival in this city she scarcely understood how unworthy was the man to whom she was bound. It was not until he had pawned her jewels to obtain money to throw away in gambling-houses, and had deserted her, the children, and a nurse in an uptown hotel, with an unpaid bill for board to a large amount, that she began to comprehend the situation. Her trunks were seized, and she was left in August with but one dress. Her husband is understood to have very wealthy relatives in this city and Brooklyn, of such high position that to mention their names would be to astonish all who know them, by revealing the fact that they have not given assistance to one so nearly connected with them as is the wife of the ex-secretary of legation. They offered, indeed, to pay the noble little woman's passage and that of her children back to Germany, but she refused, saying she would rather work for herself and little ones than return to her family a deserted wife. She heard that women were employed in the Treasury at Washington, and she at once set about securing a place for herself. At first she was discouraged, but finally she triumphed and removed to Washington, where she now occupies a small room at the top of a boarding-house, and tells for her children in the Printing Bureau of the Treasury. She is always bright and cheerful, and has already won for herself a host of friends. Her salary in the Treasury would not suffice for her board, so she has secured some German and French scholars. About ten days ago she was able to redeem her trunks and changed her outer garments for the first time since August.

A Long-Eared Metamorphosis.
(New York Sunday Mercury.)

Almost any reader can point out among his acquaintances a "regular donkey," but the genuine metamorphosis of a man into a long-eared animal of that kind somewhat resembles the romances we meet with in the "Arabian Nights." The following narrative of such a change is rather laughable, and the adventures may be called comical of the man who was turned into a jackass.

"Jackass!" exclaimed my employer to me one day, angrily. "Jackass!" yes, my mother used to say so, but she didn't like to hear any one else say so. "Well, I wouldn't mind if I were a jackass in good earnest," I replied. "I surely couldn't be more a beast of burden than I am now." Suddenly I began to feel something very queer about my ears. They appeared to be shooting up. They were acquiring the power of motion too. My fingers fell off, and the palms of my hands seemed turning into hoofs. My head began to get long, and to terminate in a protruding jaw. I felt something growing out behind, which commenced to swing and slash in a variety of evolutions. I was in truth a jackass. I ran rather helplessly down the street, in the hope that some one would claim me. At length I was taken, out of mere pity, I suppose, by a man, who put me in the stable with his pig and his cow.

In the morning my master came to see me. I was so delighted at the prospect of human sympathy, that I commenced to kick and rear, and tried to speak, but found, alas, I could only—bray. "What the divil's got in the crathur!" exclaimed my master, astonished. Remembering that such extraordinary demonstrations might be looked upon as viciousness I restrained my feelings. "Isn't it sathisfoid yez are wid yez quarthers?" inquired my master, stooping over, a hand on either knee, and looking up into my face. I bowed my head three times in assent, wagging my ears, and endeavoring to give him my right hoof. "Ochl its a moighty intilligent baist, it is!" exclaimed my master, in astonishment. In short, on further acquaintance, he concluded to turn showman. So, with a halter about my neck, I was led forth, and commenced my professional life as stroller.

I used to tell the time of day by lifting my right foot for the hours, and my left for the minutes; would pick out the prettiest in the crowd with a profound reverence; play at cards, etc. We rose rapidly to distinction, my master and I, and in short, I acquired a fortune for my master. One day while performing at a side-show, I had the misfortune, I thought it then, to fall in love with a very beautiful young lady. I was a little staggered at first, when I remembered that I was only an ass; but reflecting on the number of fair damsels already won by donkeys, I took courage. My master and I had come to so thorough an understanding of one another without the aid of language, that I soon succeeded in communicating to him the state of my feelings, making known at the same time the object of my affections. Either appreciating the joke himself, or looking for some personal benefit, he led me to my adored one's father, who burst into such a loud haw-haw on hearing the statement, that I hung my head and dropped my ears in veriest mortification. The young lady herself was horrified at the suggestion, and I, like the most ardent admirer, viewed her objections as very unreasonable.

After much difficulty I succeeded in giving my master to understand that it would be necessary for him to pour over my entire body the contents of a can of kerosene. I then took a match and, holding it between my teeth, used all my eloquence to persuade the fair lady to set me ablaze. In the attempt I should have unquestionably failed had I not, in my ardor, approached so near her beautiful new suit as to completely disfigure it with the oil. Angered, enraged, she seized the taper, exclaiming: "Dirty beast! You shall burn," and set me a-fire. Then seeing me writhing in torment, she buried her face in her hands. She looked up at the sound of her name. "Linda, my beloved," said I, and she saw at her feet no longer a jackass, but the form of a handsome youth, who clasped his hands, and exclaimed in rapture: "Fair maid, accept the lifelong devotion of the captive you have freed." "Am I dreaming?" replied the maiden; "where is the jackass?" "Here, at your feet," I answered. In short, I prevailed. The father was won over without difficulty, as half the profits of my exhibition had been placed to my credit, and I had a large bank account. My former master regretted my loss, yet could not but rejoice at my good fortune, for his wealth was also simple, and we formed a plan to exhibit me as "the man who had been a jackass," but finally decided upon "the jackass who became a man."

I have now lived very happily with my wife for five years. My old master, through his wealth, has become a distinguished politician. I have but one source of regret, and that is, that my ears, not being thoroughly saturated with the oil, have retained too much of their original shape and proportions. My friends still accuse me of being over-ridiculous at times, and say that my wife, in particular, takes advantage of it; but she will be the special object of my eternal devotion for deigning to marry a "jackass."

Farming on a Large Scale.

The December number of Frazer's Magazine has a rather suggestive article on the business of agriculture, as it will be followed by the farmers of the future. People have been accustomed to regard farming as a quiet and somewhat poetical vocation, removed in a great degree from the stronger and faster currents of social progress, and tending to exclude the efforts and chances that wear out the lives of men in other modes of industry. The georgics and pastorals of the poets have greatly helped to give us those ideas of a country life; and under the older conditions of society their descriptions had a good deal of truth in them. But, a little thought would tend to show how that "land-question," as it may be called, was, from the beginning, a source of strife and turbulence. There is no need to recall the agrarian troubles of the ancients—those of the Roman Gracchi for instance—or point to the rural population of Ireland so long engaged under Captain Rock in expostulating, with a blunderbuss, against the unreasonableness of the landlords—to say nothing of the Sioux and Modocs wondering on what part of the habitable continent they may be allowed to kill their buffaloes and raise a little corn. In the nature of things, the land will continue to be a cause of much controversy and unrest everywhere, though, of course, the elements of disturbance will change with the change of the world.

The business of farming will fall more and more under the laws of mechanical industry and commerce, losing all its old associations of poetry or war, and coming down to the hard level of political economy. Evidences of such a result are making themselves visible every day, and among them we may set down the nine thousand "granges" or so, the farmers of which certainly mean business and not bucolics. The system of modern production on a large scale in all departments of human industry must include those granges or farms, and do away in time with those little holdings which contented the ideas of agriculturists in by-gone times when every roof of ground maintained its man—a praiseworthy state of things, in the opinion of the old philosophers. Statesmen, too, held the same opinion; and one of them, a Roman Consul, declared that the man was a dangerous citizen of the commonwealth who held more than seven acres of land. In our time, however, the increase of population makes a larger amount of food production necessary and profitable, while the helps of chemistry and the facilities of the railways will open the minds of the farmers to "possibilities" existing in the ground they cultivate. All our industries tend to aggregation; and it would be curious enough to speculate on the time when the needs of economy and large manufacture will do away with the smaller centers of production. We see how the principle works already in a number of our industrial departments, and how impossible it would be to check it, if any one were so unwise as to attempt it. It is the natural law of commerce, and all the improvements and discoveries of the time tend to maintain it. It is, therefore, not unreasonable to think that the production of food for the increasing millions will be governed by the same law, making large farms the rule, and abolishing the small ones.

Such a result would come sooner to the countries of the Old World, where the land is worn out in a great degree, where the populations are very dense, and where science and economy are more needed, than to a land of large fertile spaces like ours. The above mentioned writer in Frazer elaborates the idea for the benefit of his countrymen. He looks to a time when farming will be a commercial speculation, like other branches of enterprise, and carried on by large joint-stock companies, issuing shares of £10, £5, or £50, and working on large areas, say of 3,000 or 10,000 acres. All the aids of modern science, the discoveries of Davy, Leibig, and other chemists, would of course be brought into the system. Every great idea involves other great ideas, and this vast model farm would help to solve the problem at present perplexing the large cities and towns—that is, the disposal of their sewage. It would contract with its nearest town for such a valuable auxiliary; and the latter would be gathered into tanks on the most elevated part of the ground, whence it might be most easily distributed. It was recently objected against this drainage, that it gave an unpleasant flavor to the vegetables and milk produced by its means; but the discussion that ensued in the journals showed that such a result came of bad management and over-dosing, and that, when properly diluted and mixed, the sewage was a very excellent fertilizer.

Then those great farms would have their steam-engines to grind cake and corn, and crush vegetables. They would have their own butchering departments, and would send their meats direct to the cities, and still more directly to their own agents or salesmen in those cities, lessening the prices for the public benefit. Along with all these appliances and means, say of a meat farm, they would have refrigerators, enabling them in summer to send out their merchandise in the best condition. There would also be milk and cheese farms, and other specialities of the sort. The cultivators of such farms would be able, with the help of manures and irrigation, to increase the number of their crops of grasses and vegetables—to stimulate nature, as it were. The writer in Frazer suggests a cheap sort of sugar as a manure for certain vegetables, and also shows how vegetation may be helped or forced by the application of electricity. This last carries us, of course, somewhat beyond the agricultural experience of the present day; but a number of observations and experiments tend to show that electricity, which is sometimes applied with benefit to the bodies of human beings, can modify the growth of vegetables, and yet revolutionize all our ideas of matter, motion and growth. Everything, in fact, seems to indicate that farms will increase in size as the world increases in population, and that the profit of cultivating the earth will be as great as that of any other kind of industry or trade. The Jewish rabbis have, or had, a saying, that 100 shillings in trade will give a man meat and wine, while 100 shillings in land will give him only cabbage and salt. But the change of the times will tend to put that proverb out of countenance, and a lot of ground in the country may come to be as valuable as one in the city. Farms will become factories. They will no longer be portrayed in georgics and bucolics, but indicated in prices current, and quoted on the Stock Exchange.

The Milk in the Cocoa Nut.

The Boston Herald tells the following story concerning Senator Sargent of California, which explains that gentleman's aversion to Caleb Cushing:

Twenty-odd years ago a young man employed in the Newburyport Herald office got out a broadside containing a history of something that Caleb Cushing had done which seemed to be a subject for criticism. He posted copies on all the dead walls of the city on a Saturday night, and Sunday morning they appeared to the curious citizens. This made it rather warm for this young man in his native place, and he went to Washington where he became a reporter for the Congressional Globe. Making the acquaintance of Gen. Fremont in Washington, he was induced to accompany him to California in the early days of the transcontinental emigration. He soon became disgusted with Fremont, and separated from him before they saw the Pacific. In the course of time that young man was elected Representative to Congress and afterward Senator. When Caleb Cushing was appointed Chief Justice he took an active part against his confirmation and unearthed the letter of Jeff Davis which prevented it. We forgot to mention that the young man's name was Aaron A. Sargent.

The Black Martin.

A writer in "Our Dumb Animals" says: "We often wondered, when reading the history of birds, why so little is said about the black martin, the most beautiful and the most interesting of the swallow family. We should like to ask for information in relation to providing houses for them—how they should be built, and how many rooms in one house. If others were like us in their love of birds, there would be few birds killed, and much more attention would be given to the building of houses, and in many other ways providing comfortable places where they can build their nests and rear their young. Two years ago we erected a martin-house with five rooms, on a cedar pole twenty-five feet high, in the yard near the house for the accommodation of any birds that might choose to occupy it. Bluebirds were the first to take possession, and were not disturbed in their new home that year. Last year the bluebirds came again, but had been there but a few days when four pairs of black martins put in an appearance, and remained several days. They examined every martin house in the village, but finally made war on our poor bluebirds, drove them off, and took possession, remaining till about the last of August, and taking with them quite a large family. Last spring one pair of common swallows occupied one room in the house, and in a few days six pairs of black martins arrived, and wished to take possession of their home of last year. But the swallows were not to be driven off, and they held possession of the tenement they had taken, leaving but four tenements for the martins; consequently but four pairs remained. In due time our house was filled with martins; and they attracted the attention of the whole community by their music, which could be heard for half a mile, from morning until night. Other parties in the village erected large, elegant martin houses, but no birds came. Next season, probably, the whole flock will be back; and we want to provide the best accommodations for them, that they may all stay with us; so we write the above for information. We have many different kinds of birds about our premises, and do not allow any one to frighten them; and they are always very tame. They are so musical that we want to do all we can to encourage them to stay with us. Our home, without the company and music of birds in summer, would be a lonely, unpleasant home, indeed."

Cooking Apples.

The great English physician, Sydenham, says the Rural Home, allowed no other ailments to his patients in the febrile stages of quinsy, erysipelas, and small pox than could be found in boiled apples. There are a great many ways of using apples for food, and doubtless some novel way is yet to be discovered. The French, who excel in culinary matters, are said to have 365 ways of cooking an egg. Why should not a similar enterprise be shown in regard to the apple? An estimable lady of my acquaintance makes some very palatable dishes and deserts in this way: Apples of uniform size are selected, and simply wiped and cored. This last operation is quickly performed by punching them through the middle with an apple corer; thus removing the stem, seeds, and tougher part, and making an opening for the introduction of sugar in the cooking operation which follows. After dipping them in water, they are placed in any deep pan or baking dish, and sprinkled with sugar, about a teaspoonful to each apple, and a teacupful of water turned on around them. They are then baked with a slow, steady fire till soft, when they should be removed from the baking pans for cooling and the table. When served with cream, this is a dish fit for the Queen. Every part of the apple can be eaten, the sugar having neutralized the acidities in the fruit, and the cooking making tender the skin. It is a substitute for strawberries. There is another very good way of treating sweet apples. Stew them in a porcelain kettle, with just enough molasses and water to prevent their burning on, till cooked through, and then transfer them to the oven with all the liquid residuum, to dry brown. This gives a baked apple, half jellied, delicious in flavor and moisture, that any one can love. Sweet pickles, by some considered superior to the old-fashioned apple-sauce, are made by partly baking sweet apples and then saturating them in a pickle of vinegar, sugar, and spices. This is easier to make than apple sauce, which must be smothered in boiled cider.

—Two men working five hours, at fifty cents an hour, can clear off the snow from a moderate-size pitched-roof. There will average about ten first-class snow storms a year. Eight horses will run away on account of the falling snow, and four teams will be smashed up; five hats will be ruined, two hundred and thirty-seven will lose their tempers on account of the impediment offered to travel by these same lumps of snow. This gives us the cost of a pitched roof each year, according to the present calculation, following: Hire of men, $50; damage to eight horses, $75; damage to four teams, $237.50; five hats, $35; loss of temper at five cents a person, $11.85. Total, $409.35.

—"The arrangements of nature are admirable," exclaimed a young lady during the late high winds. "The same wind which disarranges our dress blows dust in the eyes of would-be observers."

The Jubilee Singers.

The Exeter News Letter says of the Portsmouth Jubilee Singers' concert in that town: The singers, thirteen in number were gifted with excellent voices, the parts were well balanced, the style was new and characteristic, their drill as to time was perfect, and as a whole reflected great credit on the ability and carefulness of their conductor. Some of the solos were very good indeed, but the chief merit of the entertainment lay in the chorus. We remember nothing, in our experience, so weird and perfectly unearthly as some of the crescendos. Beginning with a scarce audible pianissimo, increasing gradually, gradually, until the forte is reached, and withal sweet and musical as a quartette of French horns. Was it the character of the voices, the rythm, the music, or what? We cannot say, but it was perfectly unique. It has been said that America has no music; we may, however, safely challenge Europe to produce anything resembling this, or, in its way more effective. It may be rude and unscientific, but it contains the germs of what will eventually mark the type of American music, as distinguished from that of the Germans, French or Italians.

Protection vs. Free Trade.

The diminutive size of the lobsters which have been exposed for sale in our markets for some years past has been remarked by many,—by all who remember the good old times when half-pounders would not be taken as a gift, and when three and four-pounders were not scarce in the Piscataqua and its branches, during the season. Now, instead of one lobster furnishing a good meal for two or three persons, it takes two or three average lobsters to furnish a meal for one moderate man. One reason of this deterioration is that lobsters so small as to be of no value in the general market are bought up for canning, and consequently all taken, however small, are landed. Formerly all too small for the market were thrown overboard as soon as captured, and had another chance given them to increase in size and multiply their species; and for years the fisheries caused no perceptible diminution in the numbers or size of those taken.

The Anglers' Association of Massachusetts has taken steps to secure from the legislature of that State such action as will tend to prevent the extermination of the lobster in Boston bay and along the Massachusetts coast, and will also endeavor to move the Maine legislature to take similar action regarding lobster fishing along the shores of that State. The facts collected by the Association's committee having the matter in charge, with communications from prominent wholesale dealers in lobsters, shows that the vast destruction of those crustaceans within a few years has reduced the average size so much that lobsters which formerly would not have been honored with a place on the table of a fish-stall, on account of their small size, are now regarded as worthy a place on top of the heap; and that the lobster fisheries of Massachusetts and Maine are well nigh played out in consequence, several large canning establishments having been removed to the British Provinces, where lobsters somewhat larger than shrimps can yet be procured. The law asked for by the Anglers' Association is one to prohibit the having possession of or offering for sale any lobster less than eleven inches in length; a lobster of this size will weigh from one and a half to two pounds, and the society believe such a law will give the creatures a chance to again become plentiful in number and big enough to eat.

Trawl fishing, by destroying the young of those species of fish which take the hook, has greatly thinned out their number and lessened the size of those captured off our coast; and with each succeeding year the fishermen have to go further and fare worse. This indiscriminate destruction of young fish for a trifling present advantage, is the modern illustration of killing the goose which lays the golden egg; but it is not easy to suggest a remedy, for in the case of trawl fishing, unlike the lobster fishing, every very small fish taken is a present loss to the fishermen,—for the minnow is wholly worthless, and possibly prevents a larger fish from getting on the hook. The unmarketable fish found on a trawl are immediately thrown overboard, but they are dead, and throwing them back into the water does not do them much good; we are informed that from one quarter to one third—in some instances as much as one half—of all the fish taken on a trawl are thus thrown away on account of their small size. Is is evident that this style of fishing must be ruinous to prospects of future success on the grounds where it is carried on; but it is profitable as long as the fish last, and so long as it is profitable it will be pursued. By-and-by, when lobsters and cod become as scarce along the New England coast as salmon are in our rivers, fishing for the shrimps and minnows will not pay; then it will be partially abandoned, laws for the "protection of the fisheries" will be formed, and after awhile the shrimps and minnows may again develope into lobsters and cod-fish.

The President's Adviser.

It has not been generally known what motive inspired the President in the final nomination of a candidate for the Chief-Justiceship. The secret has at last been disclosed, however, and the history of the case is made perfect by the discovery of this missing link. It is popularly believed that the President finds in the Cabinet, long as, a competent advisory board. This is true, as far as most minor matters are concerned, but in questions of State, involving serious considerations of National or International polity, he naturally seeks some great mind, unbiassed by narrow political prejudices, qualified by an instinctive love for, and a life-long and intimate association with, the pure principles of a dignified statesmanship. In these degenerate days, such qualities are indeed rare, but not therefore impossible. This fact has been especially cheering to the administration, in the dilemma occasioned by the vacancy in the Supreme Court, but from which dilemma it has been miraculously delivered. With a modesty which has long been its most prominent virtue, the Portsmouth Daily Times advanced to the breach and unhesitatingly bringing its astute editorial mind to the task proved itself equal to the emergency. Gen. Grant, in consulting such eminent talent, betrays a desire to abandon the stupid policy which has hitherto prompted his "outre appointments," (we use the word advisedly,) and his nomination of Chief Justice Waite, at the suggestion of the Times, while showing a faint adherence to his oft-expressed principle of deference to the will of the people, is also a graceful recognition of the profound political acumen and disinterested public spirit of that sheet. Such a service to the administration, and, indeed, to the country, rendered by a less modest journal, would have prompted a pardonable verbal redundancy; but the quiet announcement of its share in the elevation of Judge Waite, in Thursday's Times, adds dignity to the service, and will have immense weight in relieving the tears and sorrows of a wretched and grief-stricken country.

Laconics.

Rev. O. O. Wright of Salisbury Point, Mass., will preach in the Court street Christian chapel to-morrow at the usual hours. All are welcome.

Mrs. Emma E. Weston of East Boston, Mass., so well and favorably known as a first-class Test Medium, and who gave such general satisfaction last winter and spring in this city, will give a public seance at the new Mechanic's Hall, Congress street, to-morrow afternoon and evening. Admission 25 cents. Doors closed at 3 o'clock P. M., and at 7 1-4 o'clock evening.

The Bishop of New Hampshire is spending a few days with Rev. Dr. Bingham, and will preach at St. John's church on Sunday in the morning at half-past ten, and in the evening at 7.15.

The Times published, on Friday, last year's report of the Eastern Railroad Directors—and in the same issue asks if the CHRONICLE has not heard of the order requiring men to uncover their dinner kettles when they come off the navy yard! We published this same Eastern Railroad report Feb. 4, 1873, and made mention a year ago last Spring of the dinner kettle order, which was promulgated while Capt. Fairfax was executive officer at the yard. Don't criticise till you are posted, neighbor!

We are indebted to Mr. Marcellus F. Berry of the American Express company for Chicago papers.

Mr. Deblois W. Penhallow of this city was mate of the ship Panther, reported lost at sea with all on board. Mr. Penhallow was a most estimable young man, being possessed of sterling and admirable qualities of mind and heart. We, in common with his more intimate friends, hope more favorable news may be obtained from him.

Our neighbor of the Times pays the CHRONICLE the best compliment possible in suggesting that it has a half-dozen editors. The establishment pays not less than $1000 a year to any editor, and there is always a handsome dividend left for its proprietors.

The concert by Buckley's Serenaders was a fine one and worth hearing again. The quartet of voices blended harmoniously, the travestie on "La Somnambula" was well sung, the jokes were new and good, and the dancing A 1. A larger audience would greet Mr. Buckley's return.

The Board of Mayor and Alderman of 1870 suspended constable and night watchman Shannon for leaving his beat with permission from the City Marshal while on duty. The Times with its usual veracity endeavors now to injure Mr. Shannon by saying that charges were preferred about two years ago against him "for taking hush money." Yet the Times claims it misrepresents no one. Wouldn't it be better for its editor to get better posted before writing such slanders?

The real estate on Islington street on which the houses of Messrs. Thomas and L. Edwin Martin now stand has been held in the Martin family for 164 years, having been deeded in 1710.

Dolly Bidwell is to retire from the stage.

Hot Sand Baths.

One of the most attractive therapeutical novelties for some time past in London—recently introduced from the continent—consists in the erection of establishments for administering hot sand baths as a remedy for rheumatism, recent cases of nervous disorders, affections of the kidneys, and all cases where heat is needed as the chief remedial agent. The advantages claimed in behalf of this method of treatment are, that it does not suppress respiration like the hot water bath, but rather increases it, and does not interfere with the respiration after the manner of the steam bath of Turkish bath. It is found that the body can endure the influence of this kind of bath for a much longer time, and a much higher temperature can be applied.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brassy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair recovers with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

WOODBURY SEAVEY & CO.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

Rough on the Boys.

At Lee, Mass., recently, about two dozen young men of the town gave a mock serenade to a crony who had recently gone out of town and returned with a wife. Horns, tin pans, and other uncouth instruments made half an hour of the night hideous, and the crowd were rewarded by an invitation to walk in and refresh the inner man. The host was constrained to apologize for the paucity of the cheer he had to offer—it was only lemonade. In that pleasant beverage the health of the happy couple was drank, and the serenaders took their leave. There was a sequel and a speedily occurring one, and the whole party, under the influence of the pieces which had diffused itself in the simple refection of the evening, had an idea of how those feel who, on the vasty deep, consign to Neptune that which Neptune demands.

—Spurgeon is trying to recover his health on the Continent. It is one of the articles that people generally try to find at a distance from the place where it was lost.

—According to Dr. Holland, "the average American, in the average American restaurant, eats his dinner in the average time of six minutes and forty-five seconds."

—Bonnets have undergone a material change in shape since autumn. The real French model—something in the Maud Muller style—is being generally adopted by the leading ladies of fashion, and as a rule is very becoming.

—Certain wicked newspapers are printing the following: "Seventy-eight newsboys of Indianapolis were on Christmas presented by some staid old citizens with savings-bank pass books, each one having a small account opened. The day after Christmas those seventy-eight accounts were drawn, those seventy-eight pass books sold for old paper, and seventy-eight newsboys might have been seen at the theatre, on the proceeds."

—A pretty mantlepiece ornament may be obtained by suspending an acorn, by a piece of thread tied around it, within half an inch of the surface of some water contained in a vase, tumbler or saucer, and allowing it to remain undisturbed for several weeks. It will soon burst open, and small roots will seek the water; a straight and tapering stem, with beautiful, glossy green leaves, will shoot upward and present a very pleasing appearance. Chestnut trees may be grown in the same manner, but their leaves are not so beautiful as those of the oak. The water should be changed once a month, taking care to supply water of the same warmth; bits of charcoal added to it will prevent the water from souring. If the little leaves turn yellow, put one drop of ammonia into the utensil which holds the water, and they will renew their luxuriance. Another pretty ornament is made by wetting a sponge and sprinkling it with canary, hemp, grass and other seeds. The sponge should be refreshed with water daily so as to be kept moist. In a few days the seeds will germinate, and the sponge will soon be covered with a mass of green foliage.

CARRIAGES.

MR. HUNTRESS having sold his interest in the late firm of Hunntress, Bryant & Co. to Mr. ELLIOTT, of Concord, who served his time with the well-known firm of Abbott, Downing & Co., and has had experience in some of the best shops in Massachusetts in

Carriage Building,

we shall continue our business the same. Having met with good success in the past year, by having a good share of the patronage of the city and vicinity, we hope, by being faithful and prompt in our business, to build up a

FIRST-CLASS CARRIAGE ESTABLISHMENT,

where people can order new work of all kinds, and have the old carriages repaired, without being obliged to go out of town. We shall continue to keep on hand a variety of Carriages, Sleighs, Pungs, etc., which we shall sell as cheap as can be bought elsewhere of the same quality. We return thanks to our friends for past patronage, and hope for a continuance of the same.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.

It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so efficacious or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion, if is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, scarching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by depressing reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy; from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY RE-PICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1874—SEVENTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

An Illustrated Monthly Journal, universally admitted to be the handsomest Periodical in the world. A Representative and Champion of American Taste.

NOT FOR SALE IN BOOK OR NEWS STORES.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the result of years of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it has been bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with levels of a similar class, THE ALDINE is unique and original conception—alone and unapproachable; absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes FOR TEN TIMES ITS COST; AND THEN, THERE ARE THE CHROMOS, BESIDE!

ART DEPARTMENT, 1874.

The illustrations of THE ALDINE have won a world-wide reputation, and in the art centres of Europe it is an admitted fact that its wood cuts are examples of the highest perfection ever attained. The common prejudice in favor of "steel plates," is rapidly yielding to a more educated and discriminating taste which recognizes the advantages of superior artistic quality with greater facility of production. The wood cuts of THE ALDINE possess all the delicacy and elaborate finish of the most costly steel plate, while they afford a better rendering of the artist's original.

In addition to designs by the members of the National Academy, and other noted American artists, THE ALDINE will reproduce examples of the best foreign masters, selected with a view to the highest artistic success and greatest general interest. Thus the subscriber to "THE ALDINE" will, at a trifling cost, enjoy in his own home the pleasures and refining influences of true art.

The Christmas issue for 1874 will contain special designs appropriate to the season, by our best artists, and will surpass in attractions any of its predecessors.

PREMIUM FOR 1874.

Every subscriber to THE ALDINE for the year 1874 will receive a pair of chromos. The original pictures were painted in oil for the publishers of THE ALDINE, by Thomas Moran, whose great Colorado picture was purchased by Congress for ten thousand dollars. The subjects are the companion pieces of "The East" and "The West." One is a view in The White Mountains, New Hampshire; the other gives The Cliffs of Green River, Wyoming Territory.

If any subscriber should indicate a preference for a figure subject, the publishers will send "Snowdrop—o Home," a new and beautiful chromo, 14x 20 inches, representing a little Italian exile whose speaking eyes betray the yearning of her heart.

TERMS.

$5 per annum, in advance, with Oil Chromos free.

For 50 CENTS EXTRA, the chromos will be sent, mounted, varnished, and prepaid by mail.

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signatures of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

CATARRH!
A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years. Cured.
And Droppings in Throat, Choknigs, Strangtings, Pains in in the Side, Loins, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the CONSTITUTIONAL
CATARRH REMEDY.
To MESSRS. LITTLEFIELD & CO., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.:
I reside at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Henniker, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 19 years old; had it bad all the time. It run all that period, and slunk I would fill up and drop down in my throat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I would spring up in bed to save myself from strangulation. It affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.
MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.
Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.
I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, chokings and strangulings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.
Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left, Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

"Curfew Must Not Ring To-Night."

[Who is the Author?]

England's sun was setting o'er the hills so far away,
Filled the land with misty beauty at the close of one sad day;
And the last rays kiss'd the forehead of a man and maiden fair,—
He with step so slow and weary, she with sunny, floating hair;
He with bowed head, sad and thoughtful, she with lips so cold and white,
Struggled to keep back the murmur, "Curfew must not ring to-night."

"Sexton," Bessie's white lips faltered, pointing to the prison old,
With its walls so tall and gloomy, walls so dark and damp and cold,
"I've a lover in that prison, doomed this very night to die,
At the ringing of the Curfew, and no earthly help is nigh.
Cromwell will not come till sunset," and her face grew strangely white,
As she spoke in husky whispers—"Curfew must not ring to-night."

"Bessie," calmly spoke the Sexton,—every word pierced her young heart
Like a thousand gleaming arrows—like a deadly poisoned dart;
"Long, long years I've rung the Curfew from that gloomy shadowed tower;
Every evening, just at sunset, it has told the twilight hour;
I have done my duty ever, tried to do it just and right,
Now I'm old, I will not miss it; girl, the Curfew rings to-night!"

Wild her eyes and pale her features, stern and white her thoughtful brow,
And within her heart's deep centre, Bessie made a solemn vow;
She had listened while the judges read, without a tear or sigh,
"At the ringing of the Curfew—Basil Underwood must die."
And her breath came fast and faster, and her eyes grew large and bright—
One low murmur, scarcely spoken—"Curfew must not ring to-night!"

She with light step bounded forward, sprang within the old church door,
Left the old man coming slowly, paths he'd trod so oft before;
Not one moment paused the maiden, but with cheek and brow aglow,
Staggered up the gloomy tower, where the bell swung to and fro;
Then she climbed the slimy ladder, dark, without one ray of light,
Upward still, her pale lips saying "Curfew shall not ring to-night."

She has reached the topmost ladder, o'er her hangs the great dark bell,
And the awful gloom beneath her, like the pathway down to hell;
See, the ponderous tongue is swinging, 'tis the hour of Curfew now,—
And the sight has chilled her bosom, stopped her breath and paled her brow.
Shall she let it ring? No, never! her eyes flash with sudden light,
As she springs and grasps it firmly—"Curfew shall not ring to-night!"

Out she swung, far out, the city seemed a tiny speck below;
There, 'twixt heaven and earth suspended, as the bell swung to and fro;
And the half-deaf sexton ringing (years he had not heard the bell),
And he thought the twilight Curfew rang young Basil's funeral knell;
Still the maiden clinging firmly, cheek and brow so pale and white,
Stilled her frightened heart's wild beating—"Curfew shall not ring to-night."

It was o'er—the bell ceased swaying, and the maiden stepped once more
Firmly on the damp old ladder, where for hundreds years before,
Human foot had not been planted; and what she this night had done,
Should be told long ages after,—as the rays of setting sun
Light the sky with mellow beauty, aged sires with heads of white
Tell the children why the Curfew did not ring that one sad night.

O'er the distant hills came Cromwell; Bessie saw him, and her knee,
Lately white with sickening horror, glows with sudden beauty now:
At his feet she told her story, showed her hands all bruised and torn,
And her sweet young face so haggard, with a look so sad and worn,
Touched his heart with sudden pity,—lit his eyes with misty light;
"Go, your lover lives," cried Cromwell: "Curfew shall not ring to-night."

The Hand-in-Hand Club.

[Liverpool Eng. Albion.]

Nearly two years ago it occurred to several Liverpool gentlemen, among whom Mr. W. F. Caing and Mr. Samuel Smith were prominent, that the workingman was drawn to the public house not merely by the drink, but by the light, the warmth, the comfort, the society, and the amusement which were to him procurable nowhere else. The idea, it will be truly said, was an old one, but there are times when old ideas come into contact with a high enthusiasm which warms them into a new life, and what has been a platitude becomes an inspiration. It was so in this case. It appeared to these gentlemen that if the varied attractions of the public house could in any way be presented to the workingman without those concomitants which had proved themselves so dangerous, there might be found in the attempt something approximating to a solution of a most perplexing problem. The idea did not remain long in this hypothetical shape. Premises were taken in Parkroad, and were fitted up with billiard tables, bagatelle-boards, and other popular means of amusement. A reading-room was provided with various newspapers and periodicals, and arrangements were made for the supply of tea, coffee, and other refreshments, both liquid and solid. The institution was entitled the Hand-in-Hand Club, and the workingmen of the neighborhood were entitled to enroll themselves as members by the payment of a subscription which seemed merely nominal. The enterprise was in every way a success, and the originators soon began to think of extending their operations. They turned their minds to the northern end of the town.

and finding at the higher end of Great Crosshall street a building which seemed suitable, it was at once secured. It had been a Welsh chapel, and was in every way admirably adapted to the purpose. The necessary preparations were made, and on the 13th of March last the new Hand-in-Hand Club was opened in a portion of the town where certainly it was most needed; but where it would as certainly have to contend with the most formidable difficulties. We think that a little sketch of what is doing and has been done there will prove that it has not contended in vain.

The building is situated at the top of the street which has been mentioned, and the entrance is reached by turning two or three yards around the corner. The visitor first finds himself in a short, wide vestibule, on one side of which is the office of the manager, with a small window at which non-subscribers pay their penny for admission, and on the other a bar at which all the refreshments sold in the building can be obtained without payment of the fee for entrance. These consist of tea, coffee, cocoa, various drinks of the lime-juice and apple-wine order, meat pies, and various kinds of lighter confectionery. Inside, the bar; on which the various solids and liquids are arranged with an amount of taste and elegance which would do credit to the most fashionable restaurant in the town. Mrs. Williams, the wife of the manager, who presides over this department, has abundant reason to be proud of the appearance it presents, and the quality of what is sold is equally commendable, if we may judge from the tea, coffee and cocoa, each of which we were kindly permitted to taste when we paid a recent visit of inspection. Half a pint of any of these beverages can be obtained for three half-pence, and we mournfully remember that we have paid four times the price for very inferior fare. The cleanliness and taste exhibited in the refreshment department are shown throughout the room. To say that the Hand-in-Hand Club is merely comfortable would be to give it faint praise. Comfort does indeed reign everywhere; but, in addition, there is throughout a measure of elegance and refinement which a few workingmen are unable to appreciate; and, which doubtless, does its part in softening the manners and humanizing the nature. As we enter, the refreshment bar is immediately to the right, while to the left is the office of Mr. Williams, the manager, and further on a well-fitted-up laboratory. Down the centre of the room are three full-sized billiard-tables of good make, and on each side of these, running the whole length of the room, is an elevated bench of some light wood comfortably upholstered with leather, on which sit those who are watching the games, or awaiting their turn to play. Behind these seats the bagatelle-players are accommodated, and on the left side there are also two ordinary tables for those who prefer the less scientific game of dominoes. Advancing to the extreme end of the room we find a staircase leading to what we suppose was once the school, but is now converted into a skittle-ally and American bowling-ground. Here, as everywhere else, we saw nothing but order and good humor, the preservation of which is doubtless owing to the strict enforcement of the rule which prohibits any and all gambling under pain of expulsion. This is almost the only restrictive law, and no one will deny that it is an absolute necessary one. Returning to the large room, we ascend another staircase, and find ourselves on a gallery which runs round two sides and one end of the building. Here is another billiard and bagatelle table, and here also is one of the main features of the club, a capital reading-room—light, snug, comfortable, and well supplied with the best local and metropolitan newspapers and periodicals. Tempting arm-chairs appeal to the tired workman, and on the tables is to be found food for the mind which is as attractive, wholesome and nutritious as the food for the body which is supplied below.

Some idea of the wide-spread influence of this club may be gathered from the fact that, since the 19th of March, nearly 2,500 monthly tickets have been disposed of, in addition to the yearly tickets and the pennies which have been paid by casual visitors. Some hundreds of pounds—we are not in possession of the exact figures—have been paid to Mr. Groom for the use of the billiard and bagatelle tables, and from facts communicated by Mr. Williams, it is evident that the institution has been self-supporting from the outset.

The regular decrease in value of the imports at New York of dry goods has been observed all throughout the year 1873, as compared with those of 1871 and 1872,—though after the September panic the decrease became still more positive and manifest. It is now stated that upon all foreign dry goods entered at that port, in 1873, the decrease is sixteen and one-half per cent. as compared with 1872, which is a very handsome assistance to our foreign exchanges, as well as so much encouragement to American manufactures; while upon such luxuries as silks there is a decrease of over twenty-five per cent. in the import, which is a compliment to those for whose benefit such superfluities are supposed to be intended, and is a signal of economy in a department of trade in which the popular belief is that there has been a great increase of extravagance in late years.

Whenever he converses he closes the orifice at the neck with his hand, and is able to speak without much difficulty, though in a lower tone than before the wound.

A New Discovery.

[Manchester Mirror.]

This is the age of new discoveries and the latest one is by the democratic politicians and press that Foster's Democrat is a cheap sheet, of no account, and without circulation or influence. It increased our administration for Mr. Foster to learn this fact. A man who can, as the democratic papers inform us he has done, start without capital and publish a daily and weekly newspaper for two years, without subscribers and without readers even, must be a brick. And a man who, having neither friends nor influence, could write up Judge Roberts, so as to require Mr. Weston's friends to vote three times each to beat him, must be a genius. We understand a committee of democrats is now canvassing this city to induce Mr. Foster's subscribers to drop the pestilential sheet. A court martial has decided that the deserter must be shot.

The Season Of It.

[Courier-Journal.]

They say that Governor Moses, of South Carolina, recently stole two-thirds of the message of the Governor of New Hampshire, and the Detroit Free Press thinks it a wonder that he didn't steal it all. The Free Press may be sure that the other third was valueless, for it has been several years since a South Carolina official neglected to steal anything worth stealing.

A Tough Customer.

[Detroit Free Press.]

Saturday morning, a young man about twenty years of age, named Fred. Range, alias Smith, entered Ives' pawnbroker's shop, on Congress Street, and wanted to dispose of three revolvers. Mr. Ives had been informed that a burglary had been committed at Cunningham's gun shop three or four nights before, and he suspected that the revolvers were part of the plunder. He said they would go out, and got some disinterested party to appraise the revolvers, and after reaching the street he suggested that they call on Cunningham. "Call and be ——!" shouted Smith, and he started off like a deer. Ives gave the alarm and pursued, a crowd running with him, and the burglar was headed off and driven into an alley off Brush Street. Not being able to climb the high fence, and being about to fall into the hands of his pursuers, the fellow dropped down and crawled under a small frame house. The joists were so near the ground that he could hardly squeeze under, but he worked himself to the centre of the house and then bade defiance to the police. Officer Bailey threatened to shoot him, and was told to fire away if he wanted to see some fun, Smith having three revolvers to the officer's one. Then they tried to coax him out, but through the semi-darkness they could observe a sarcastic smile creeping over his countenance. It was suggested that they get a length of hose, attach it to a hydrant and wash him out, but he said that water was to thin. Bailey then got a long pole and jabbed at him, and he seized the pole and jerked the officer down on his little stomach in the snow. For about an hour the fellow enjoyed the anxiety of the crowd to lay hands on him, and then he said he would come out and go to the station. He was as good as his word, and made no further resistance. The revolvers were identified by Cunningham as his property, and Smith's chances of going to Jackson are first rate.

Pay Up.

[Brandon Republican.]

Lives there a man with nose so red, who never to himself hath said, "I'll pay before I go to bed, the debt I owe the printer?"

[Panola Star.]

Yes, there are some I know full well, but they, I fear, will go to—well—the place where there's no winter.

[Topeka Journal.]

You're blind, Star, you're reason's dim, or you'd not argue such a whim; o'er Satan bad would not have him, who fails to pay the printer.

[Land Owner.]

We're glad that now the means are found to bring the back subscribers round—so when you've run your course of years, pay then at last your full arrears; but—no arrears to have to pay is better far, we think and say.

If such language as those, some printers propose to offer, and get their back pay, the Republican-Star-Journal-Land-Owner men may—we sure they're not "making hay." We regret it—it's sad you see for us to say! But we say it without arrogation; if delay is incurred in sending their bills, their collection is but a vexation. No arrears with those whose noses are red—none with those who don't go to heaven; be firm in your spine, brother quills, as it were—and mingle no "beats" with your leaven.

The British Parliament Dissolved.

Premier Gladstone has issued an address to his constituents at Greenwich, asking for reelection, and announcing that the Queen has been pleased to accept the advice of her ministers to dissolve the present Parliament immediately and summon a new one, to meet on the 5th day of March, 1874. In his address Mr. Gladstone gives as a reason for this measure that since the defeat of the government upon the Irish higher education question by the concurrent efforts of the leader of the opposition and the Catholic prelacy in Ireland, the government has not been possessed of sufficient authority for great legislative measures. The advantage of a dissolution at the present moment is, that the estimates are so far advanced that the government is able to promise a surplus of five millions sterling, with which it intends to abolish the income tax and to relieve local taxation. Among the matters likely to come before Parliament are the readjustment of the educational act, the improvement of local government, and of the land, game and liquor laws. The address promises a large measure of relief from duties on articles entering into general consumption, and expresses a hope for the speedy assimilation of the county with the borough franchises.

E. O. Perrin as a Cat-Exterminator.

The General Clerk of the Court of Appeals when "at home" resides at Jamaica, on Long Island. Long Island has always been famous for its immense crop of cats. Each year's crop beats its immediate predecessor, and the multiplicity of cats is fearful to behold; and almost as fearful, in fact, as the fearful concerts to which the people are nightly subjected. For some reason or other Mr. Perrin was favored with more than his share of these free concerts, much to his delight, of course, and to the disgust, of course, of his less fortunate neighbors. At length this favoritism became unendurable, and Perrin hit upon a happy expedient to return the compliment with interest. Some snow remained on the roof, and Perrin pretended to wash it off by sluicing three or four tubfuls of hot water over the shingles. The consequence was that in an hour the entire roof was as slippery as anything in this world can be. That night, while Perrin was sitting at his bed-room window, gazing out into the moon-light, he saw a cat suddenly dash downward through the air, with a paw stretched toward each point of the compass, its fur elevated, and its lungs emitting a terrible yell. In a minute down came another. Then a third went rousing past, and before it reached the ground a fourth came pelting down, and then a fifth, doubled up and clawing at the other and the moonlight for a hold and so on until about one hundred and fifty had descended. Then Perrin thought it about time to investigate the phenomenon. He ascended to the garret and looked out through the trap door. There he saw a procession of six hundred or seven hundred cats, reaching in single file from the yard up over the shed and the back building to the crown of the roof of the house. They were all moving; and as the cat at the head of the procession reached the peak of the roof it would look around for a minute and wonder where its predecessors had gone. Then its feet would slip. It would clutch and claw and grab at the ice; but still it would go sailing down with increasing speed until it reached the edge, when it would shy out into space and dash off toward the pavement. It was interesting to Perrin to observe this procession. He never before realized the beauty of the law of nature which attracts bodies to the earth. Those cats never climbed his roof again. Eighty-four died on the spot, and it is believed that four hundred of them broke their legs and abandoned the nocturnal serenading business permanently.

Perrin, being a great humanitarian, desires publicity made of this sad catastrophe, to the end that in future these musical innocents, when they go abroad, may avoid slippery places.

Cash Instead of Credit.

If the lesson could be permanently learned that the cash system is better than the credit system, all the suffering entailed by this momentary crisis would not be a dear price to pay for it. People who buy for cash always buy cheaper than those who buy on credit. They buy too, more closely, and select more carefully. Purchases which are paid for when they are made are limited more exactly to the purchaser's want. There is nothing like having to count the money right out when the article is bought to make people economical. The amount of indebtedness incurred is not much considered when the pay-day is put afar off. Persons who do all their business on a cash basis know just where they stand and what they can afford. Consequently they never find after-occasion for regretting, in a turn of times, that they have indulged in this luxury or that, which they would have foregone had they seen what was coming. Real wants are few and can be gratified for cash. At all events, they should always be limited to what can be paid for in cash. How much anxiety, how many sleepless hours, how many heart-burnings, disappointments and regrets would be avoided if this rule were always strictly adhered to.

A Reanimated System.

Nervous, debilitated and desponding, the sufferer from indigestion and billiousness deserves the kindly sympathy of every man and woman whom heaven has blessed with a vigorous stomach and a regular flow of healthy bile. While in this forlorn condition let him commence a course of that supreme restorative, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. At the end of four or five weeks ask him how he feels and regard him attentively. You will see a new man, you will hear a new voice. Health and vigor will have returned to his frame, his words will be cheerful in purport and in tone, his eye will be clear and its expression untroubled, and he will tell you that he is free from pain, has a good appetite, sleeps soundly, and that his habit of body is natural and regular. We have seen this wonderful change effected in hundreds of instances by a faithful, persevering use of this incomparable medicated stimulant, which is among tonic remedies what Mount Washington is among the surrounding acclivities, it over-tops them all.

Reform Needed.

We might have written reforms needed, without spreading the truth out any too thin; for that there is room for reform in more than one department of our city affairs is potent to every one who has eyes to see with, and uses them. Our High Schools, which once stood high, and deservedly so, are now as deservedly sneered at; and the acceptance of Miss Morgan's resignation of the position of assistant teacher of the "consolidated" concern will not tend to raise the standard any. We have heard many parents whose children attend the High School, and scores of the pupils themselves, speak in terms of superlative contempt of that institution as an educational agency; and if any change in the management of the school should result in the pupils leaving something more solid and useful than a namby-pamby sentimentalism, we have no doubt it would be considered by the parents generally as a genuine reform. But that is not the reform referred to at the head of this article as being needed.

Then the water—or rather, lack of water—business; that needs reforming,—but it won't get it yet awhile. It may be said that the city has nothing to do with the water question; that it is in the hands of a corporate monopoly. But the city is mightily interested in it, anyway; the insufficient supply of water for the fire department increases the danger of great conflagrations and consequently the rates of insurance; and when the abundant lack of water to which the city is subject in seasons of drought causes wives to scold and husbands to swear, and makes thirsty men go out to saloons to drink whiskey and beer, an increased supply of water would evidently be a reform in the interests of temperance and morality. But this is not the reform we commenced to write about, either; and after the energetic and sustained efforts of the Board of Trade have done so little, it is not likely the city could do much if it tried. Come to think of it, though, the first steps have been taken in the direction of buying out the water monopoly; and if this business only goes ahead as fast as some other municipal affairs have, there may be persons now living who may yet last long enough to see Portsmouth well supplied with water.

But there is one reform—this is the reform—which could be instantly carried out by the city authorities; which would require no issue of bonds nor any perceptible increase in the rate of taxation; which would conflict with no one's pet schemes, shock no one's prejudices and interfere with no one's "vested rights;" which is demanded by considerations of health as well as common decency, and would be approved by almost the entire community without distinction of age, sex, color, religion, party or previous condition of servitude. The reform spoken of is the discontinuance of the practice of removing the contents of privies during the day,—a practice tolerated in no other city that we know of (or want to know of) except our own. The vehicles used in transporting nightsoil, let them be made and managed ever so carefully, are always offensive to the smell even in the coldest weather; and when pedestrians are compelled to leave the sidewalk (as they not unfrequently are) to circumnavigate one of them while being filled—faugh! language fails to express the disgust experienced; and the passage of the carts along the streets by daylight is an insult to civilization and an outrage upon decency. The cleansing of vaults is a necessity, but the cleansing of them by daylight is not; and this work should be done only at night, even if a dollar or two more had to be paid for having it done at that time. As a sanitary measure (leaving decency entirely aside,) this should be insisted upon, for eminent authorities assure us that certain infectious diseases—typhoid, typhus, etc.,—can be spread as surely by the contents of vaults as by any other instrumentality. The subject is an unpleasant one,—even disgusting, and we gladly take leave of it; but it is far less disgusting than the practice which has caused this writing, and which we would still more gladly know was brought to an end.

A Coincidence.

The reported death of Mr. DeBlois P. Penhallow of this city, mate of the ship Panther of San Francisco, by the wreck of that vessel, happily proves untrue, all the ship's company, twenty-three in number, having safely reached Salt River in the vessels' boats. The Panther started from Narasino, Washington Territory, in tow of the steamtug Goliah, bound for San Francisco with 1700 tons of coal. When fifty miles from starting point a terrific gale was encountered and the ship was driven on the rocks off Tilly Point, in Georgia Bay; the steamer was unable to render any assistance, and subsequently returned to Port Townsend, Oregon, and reported the total loss of vessel and crew, which was then believed to have occurred. It is a singular coincidence that Mr. Penhallow's father, the late David P. Penhallow, made his first voyage (or one of the first of his voyages) in a ship called the Panther, which was engaged in the California trade, and that he came very near losing his life by shipwreck while in her. This occurred about 1822, at which time California was a terra incognita to all save a few traders in hides, tallow, etc., and a California voyage meant a two or three years' stay in some harbor of that then distant country, while small vessels picked up a cargo for the ship, in small lots, wherever it could be procured along the coast. On the Panther's return, when in the vicinity of Cape Horn, she was knocked over on her beam ends and was for some time in great danger; but a generous quantity of oil having been thrown overboard so far smoothed the sea as to enable the crew to take action which resulted in righting the ship, and she finally brought her crew safe into port.

S. J. Court.

The court commenced its session here on Wednesday for the purpose of trying the case of Jefferson C. Rowe vs. the Eastern Railroad. Before proceeding to trial the plffs. offered an amendment to their declaration, which the court allowed. This gave the defendants the right for time to plead, and upon consultation with the counsel the case was adjourned by agreement, to be tried here in April. Marston and Frink for plffs.; W. H. Y. Hackett, Hatch and Lincoln for defts.

On Thursday the whole day was taken up with a trial of the suit in equity Nathan F. Mathes and John R. Poor vs. Christina J. Haley, admx., and Lemuel B. Caswell and others, heirs at law of the late Origen S. Caswell. The suit was brought to obtain the conveyance for $6,500, of the Goaport house and other real estate of said Origen S. Caswell, on Star Island, which he had bonded over to plffs. but which had not been conveyed at the time of his death. Decision reserved. Frink for plffs.; W. H. Y. Hackett for defts.

On Friday was tried an action of replevin, Frederick W. Rogers vs. John A. Lamprey, for four cows taken doing damage in defendant's fields. The case was transferred to the law term upon some question as to the validity of the notice to the plff. Goodall for plff.; W. H. Y. Hackett for deft.

A divorce was decreed in case Caroline Rodrick vs. Frank Rodrick. W. H. Hackett for libellant.

Charles W. Shannon vs. city of Portsmouth was tried, and transferred on a question of law. Goodall for plff.; W. H. Hackett for city.

The New Hampshire Sardine.

In one of the cities of New Hampshire, some years since, a man named H—— was elected Mayor, and very important he thought his position. During his term of office a fire company sent word that it would visit the city and remain several days. The Mayor called a meeting of the City Council to see what should be done toward entertaining the firemen. He wanted to show the hospitality of the city in its most munificent form, and proposed that a collation should be given to the strangers.

'And what,' asked one of the Aldermen, 'do you propose to put on the table for the collation?'

'We will give them,' said his honor, in reply, 'hot coffee and sardines.'

One of the Council thought that sardines and hot coffee were hardly up to the mark for hungry firemen.

'I know better,' said the Mayor, in an angry tone, 'sardines are hearty, and will be just what the men need.'

'Perhaps,' said an Alderman, 'his Honor does not know what sardines are.'

The Mayor sprang to his feet, angry all over. 'I know,' he shouted, 'what sardines are as well as you do, or any other member of the Board; I've eaten enough of them in my life—they are easily prepared. Just take two pieces of bread and put a piece of ham between them and then your sardine is made.'

His Honor sat down amid a roar of laughter.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brittle, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors and keeps the scalp cool, clean and healthy—under which conditions disease of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

The Best Citizens' Duty to be Politicians.

[New York World.]

The shallow talk of well-to-do selfishness in private life, which decries politics as a pursuit, and politicians as a class, has not often been more justly or vigorously reprobated than in a recent speech by Senator Bayard, the gallant, high-toned and able Senator from Delaware. The small modicum of truth in that shallow talk issues from the fact that many men seek public service for private plunder. But that very fact would dwindle to smaller proportions, such men would be more and more rare in public life, if men who 'wash their hands of politics,' and scout 'politicians' as a class had anything like a vivid sense of their own duty as citizens, had enough public spirit to give some part of their labor and energy to the benefit of society at large, instead of expending it all in the increase of their own wealth, their own culture and their own ease. Senator Bayard said:

'One of the chief dangers of our day and country is the devotion of citizens to their private pursuits to the neglect of their public duties. If this country shall go down, if this experiment for human self-government shall fail, there will be few more to blame than those intelligent men who have grown rich in their private pursuits and allowed places of high public trust and honor to be filled by men less worthy and able than themselves, but who were willing at least to give their time to the public service.

'Who does not know of the frequent advice to young men of talent and character?

'Keep out of politics, stick to your business, to your profession, to your ledger, to your office, to your studies. Keep out of politics.'

'This is the common cry which is accepted as wise, as just, as commendable, in a country which must depend for the elevation and the continuance of its government upon the best efforts of its most intelligent, its most able, its most conscientious men. What is the consequence of all this un-American, worldly-wise advice to the youth of our country—advice too often followed by them?

'They have sought to make the name of politician disreputable. They have sought to make attention of public duties suspicious. And what has been the result. Senators! Has it not been a lower tone of public service? I say that to a certain degree it has; for I believe if there should be an increase in honorable competition between men of intellect and character for public position, it would tend largely to the elevation of the tone of our service, and to the benefit of the whole country. This Government is not an automatic machine. It is not to run itself. It calls for the efforts constantly, and oftentimes the self-sacrificing efforts, of the ablest and the purest and the bravest to guide it on in the right direction, and keep it in the paths of honor and safety.'

CARRIAGES.

MR. HUNTRESS having sold his interest in the late firm of Huntress, Bryant & Co. to Mr. E. LIOTT, of Concord, who served his time with the well-known firm of Abbott, Downing & Co., and has had experience in some of the best shops in Massachusetts in

Carriage Building,

we shall continue our business the same. Having met with good succes s the past year, by having a good share of the patronage of the city and vicinity, we hope, by being faithful and prompt in our business, to build up a

FIRST-CLASS CARRIAGE ESTABLISHMENT,

where people can order new work of all kinds, and have the old carriages repaired, without being obliged to go out of town. We shall continue to keep on hand a variety of Carriages, Sleighs, Pungs, etc., which we shall sell as cheap as can be bought elsewhere of the same quality. We return thanks to our friends for past patronage, and hope for a continuance of the same.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color. It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,

LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

And Droppings in Throat, Choking, Strangling, Pains in the Side, Loins, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the
CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY.
TO MESSRS. LITTLEFIELD & CO., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.:
I reside at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Henniker, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 19 years old; had it bad all the time. It ran all that period, and nights it would fill up and drop down in my throat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I would spring up in bed to save myself from strangulation. It affected my ears so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work, and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.
MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.
Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.

I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, chokings and strangulings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.
Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left, Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

Vestol's Grit.

[Nashville (Tenn.) Banner.]

The following interesting account of a young Quaker who could not be induced to fight in the late war, though conscripted, is from the pen of a prominent citizen of this State—a leading member of the bar of an adjacent county, and an ex-Judge Advocate and ex-officer of the Confederate States army in the late war. It is a faithful narration of one of the most interestiing and curious events of the war:

I have just read in the Banner of the 16th inst. a fragment of Gov. Foote's reminiscences, headed, "How a Quaker Refused to Fight." As I am familiar with the facts and circumstances alluded to, and as the case greatly interested me at the time, I have thought it might be of some interest to your readers to go into details more than is done in Gov. Foote's brief allusion to the case.

The young Quaker alluded to is Tilgham R. Vestol, who lived near Columbia, Tenn. When Gen. Bragg's army was at Shelbyville, Tenn., young Vestol was conscripted and sent to that place; he was assigned to duty in the Fourth Tennessee regiment, commanded by Col. McMurray, of Nashville. He reported to the regiment as required to do, but utterly refused to perform military duty of any character or description. Neither by threats nor persuasion could he be induced to alter his determination. The officers of the regiment were as humane as they were true and gallant, and after every effort had failed to induce Vestol to perform the duties of a soldier, they gave the matter up in despair, and told him to leave and go home, which he did. But shortly thereafter another conscript, and ordered to report at Bragg's headquarters. Not being ready just then to leave his home, he asked and obtained the time of two weeks within which to report, some citizen of Columbia—Chancellor Fleming, as I now remember — going his security that he would report at the end of the time. Before the two weeks had expired, Gen. Bragg had fallen back to Chattanooga. All alone and on foot, Vestol went to Chattanooga, and reported at Bragg's headquarters. By a most singular coincidence, he was again assigned to the Fourth Tennessee. Col. McMurray, from his Shelbyville experience knew he had a tough customer to deal with. He concluded he would try the force of moral suasion, so one day he sent for Vestol to come to his quarters, and undertook to convince him from the Scriptures that he was wholly wrong in his ideas and position. But the young Quaker was rather too much for the gallant Colonel in the Scripture argument, and the Colonel sent for his Chaplain to talk to Vestol and convince him that he was altogether wrong in his refusal to fight or to perform military duty. The Chaplain came and opened the argument after this wise: "I wouldn't give a cent for a religion that is opposed to my country." Said Vestol, "I wouldn't give a cent for a country that is opposed to my religion." The argument lasted for some time, but left the young Quaker unconvinced, and determined to do no military duty of any description. He refused to police the camp, or do the least thing that could be tortured or construed into military duty. At last, Col. McMurray, wholly unable to do anything with Vestol, sent him to brigade headquarters. Here he was reasoned with, and every effort made to induce him to go and perform the duties of a soldier, but he was firm and inflexible as the everlasting hills. He was told that if he persisted in his course he would be subjected to severe punishment, and finally would be shot for disobedience of orders. He replied that they had the power to kill him, but neither the Federal nor Confederate army possessed the power to force him to abandon his principles, or prove false to his religion. I remember endeavoring to persuade him one day to pay the $500, which the law provided a Quaker might pay, and be exempt from military duty, and asked him if he couldn't raise that amount and pay it, and thus get rid of the troubles that I plainly saw ahead of him if he persisted in his course.

He said he could raise the money without any difficulty. "But," said he "suppose I pay the Confederate Government $500—that will enable them to employ some one else to fight, and it will be equivalent to my hiring another man to do what I think is wrong to do myself. I can't do that."

I then said to him: "Suppose I could get you the position of nurse in a hospital, to care for the sick, wouldn't you be willing to do that?" He said: "I regard it my duty to do all I can for the sick and afflicted in either army, but if I were to take the position of nurse in a hospital, I would thereby occupy the place of some other man who would go out and fight," and so declined to do that. Learning from him that he knew how to make pottery of earthenware, I told him there was a manufactory of that sort in Georgia. "Now suppose you could be detailed to work there, would you not be willing to go?" He replied: "If it is a private establishment I will go; but, if it is a Government establishment, and run in the interest of the war I can't go." Everything that could be construed, directly or indirectly, into military duty, he refused most emphatically to engage in. He was only about 18 years of age. I soon became satisfied that he acted from principle, and would go to the stake, or meet death in any shape it could assume, rather than swerve one particle from what he conceived to be his duty. It was the sublimest exhibition of moral courage I had ever witnessed, and it was the more remarkable from being found in a boy of only 18, away from his family and friends. I asked him one day if he had no sympathy in the contest—if he had no preference as to which should be successful. "O, yes," he said, "I would prefer to see the South victorious, as I live in the South and among Southern people." I heard a gentleman say to him, "Vestol, did you ever exhibit any emotion about anything in your life—did you ever cry in your life?" "O, yes," he said, "I have cried in my life." "Well," said the gentleman, "I would like to know what were the circumstances that caused you to cry." "Well, sir," he said, "when I left home to come here, my mother cried when she told me good-by, and I cried then." "Yes," said the gentleman, "and if your mother were here now, and could see how you are situated, she would tell you to take your gun and go out and do your duty as a soldier." "No, sir," he quickly replied; "the last thing my mother said to me was to be true to my religion, and I mean to do it." It was during his stay at Gen. Maney's headquarters that Vestol had his interview with Gov. Foote. Gov. Foote was at that time a member of the Confederate Congress, representing the Nashville District, and was a candidate for re-election, being opposed, as I now remember, by Col. Savage. The soldiers from Tennessee in the army were allowed to vote, and the Governor was out electioneering among the soldiers. While at Gen. Maney's headquarters some one pointed out Vestol to Gov. Foote, or introduced Vestol to him, as a Quaker who would't fight, when the following conversation occurred between them:

Foote—"What, young man, won't you fight—you are a stout, good-looking young man—is it true that you refuse to fight?"

Vestol—"Yes, sir."

Foote—"Why you are all wrong about that. Suppose you were to marry a beautiful and accomplished young lady, and some ruffian were to come into your house and grossly insult her, wouldn't you kill him?"

Vestol—"No, sir."

Foote—(jumping from his seat in a very excited manner)—"Why, I'd kill him in a minute."

Resuming his seat after a minute, the Governor surveyed Vestol, and again commenced a conversation with him.

Foote—"Young man, you are all wrong about this matter, even from a Scriptural standpoint. When Christ was upon earth he directed his disciples to pay tribute to Cæsar. The money thus paid went into the Roman treasury, and was used in carrying on the wars of the Roman people."

Vestol—"No, sir; you are mistaken about that. The Temple of Janus was closed at that time, and there were no wars going on."

Foote—"I believe he knows more about it than I do. I don't know whether the Temple of Janus was closed then or not."

Such was substantially the interview between this remarkable boy and this remarkable man. Perhaps two more opposite characters, in many particulars, never came in contact.

Gov. Foote, as before stated, was at that time a member of the Confederate Congress. Whether he voted for the conscript law, the officers appointed under which he denominates the "bloodhounds of the Davis despotism," I know not. It was passed during the time he was a member of the Confederate Congress, whether with his sanction or not, I have no means of ascertaining. One thing is certain—he used all his power of persuasion to induce Vestol to bear arms on the side of the "Davis despotism," and was seeking the votes of the soldiers who were bearing arms on that side, and obtained the votes of hundreds of them with the understanding—implied, at least—that he was in full accord with the South in her struggle. On no other ground could he have received a vote.

But to return to the young Quaker. His case was such an extraordinary one that Gen. Polk wrote the facts to the War Department at Richmond, but never received an answer, so far as I am advised. Vestol was ordered to Knoxville, and from that place he found his way to the Virginia army, and was assigned to the Fourteenth or Seventeenth Tennessee regiment—I do not now remember which. Here he was ordered to military duty, but firmly refused, as he had done before. The Brigadier in command, knowing nothing of his history or antecedents, ordered him to be bayoneted for disobedience of orders, and the bayonets were applied to him repeatedly. He bore it with the spirit of a martyr, and the soldiers, seeing that he would die willingly in preference to sacrificing his principles, refused further to punish him. No punishment or threats could shake the settled purpose of his soul for a moment. He was under arrest all the while. Frequently, on retreats, his guard would lose sight of him, but in a day or two Vestol would march up alone into camp.

He made such an impression on me that, after the war was over, I inquired of all those rebs I supposed would know what became of him, and whether he had survived the war, but none of them could tell me.

In the year 1871, I was sitting in my office one evening, when a young man walked in and spoke to me, and asked me if my name was not so and so. I told him yes, and asked him to take a seat, that I would talk to him in a few minutes, as I was engaged just then. He remarked that he didn't believe I knew him. I looked at him more closely, and told him I did not. He asked me if I remembered a Quaker at Chattanooga who refused to fight. I at once recognized Vestol, and was really glad to meet him, and made him give me a history of his ups and downs in the army after I parted with him at Chattanooga. He told me he was in Castle Thunder for awhile, at Richmond, but was finally permitted by the Secretary of War to go down to North Carolina to school, and was there at the time the war closed. Feeling that his education was not sufficient, at the close of the war he went to Rhode Island, and there continued his studies and taught school a portion of the time. He informed me that it was seven years from the time he left his father's house to report to Bragg at Chattanooga before he returned to his paternal roof. He had invented a mode for taking off and putting on wagon bodies, for which he had obtained a patent, and was selling the right when I met him.

I suppose he is still living in the neighborhood of Columbia, Tenn.

Chester Pike of Cornish, when about leaving for home, slipped and fell when entering the car at the Concord station, badly injuring his right knee. He suffered considerably on his way home, and on arriving, after dark, his wife noticed a man helping him to alight. In her alarm she hurried to his assistance, and stepping upon a small dog near the door she fell, breaking both bones in one of her arms near the elbow.

A young man named Harris, employed in Sargent's machine shop at Graniteville, near Nashua, had his back broken on Friday by a heavy case of machinery that fell upon him.

The Saturday Evening Dispatch is a new weekly just started in Manchester. M. S. Hunt is editor and proprietor.

The house of Mr. John N. Barr of Nashua was entered by thieves on Saturday night. Ether was administered to one of the inmates, and had not Mrs. Barr awoke the house would have been well rummaged. As it was the burglar decamped minus booty.

N. K. Leavitt has been reappointed postmaster at Exeter.

George Wright was killed by a train of cars near Nashua, Saturday night. He had run away from the house of correction.

Mr. Bartlett Campbell of Hudson nearly severed his foot at the instep on Saturday while cutting cord wood. He bled profusely and his life is despaired of.

—Red ink can be manufactured by rubbing carmine and silicate of soda together, and then adding a concentrated silicate solution till the whole is of sufficient consistency to write well. This mixture gives a brilliant ink when dry, and dries quickly. It should be kept from contact with air in a close vessel.

Uncle Jeff.

(Syracuse Journal.)

It was during the old days of turmoil and bloodshed, when the heart of the country was torn by battles and rumors of battles, and sad-eyed mothers watched and waited for husbands and sons that would never return, and listened for the sound of feet that were at rest forever. I was but a mere boy then, and had been attending school in Central Kentucky; but the raids of Morgan put a temporary check on my journey along the path of knowledge, and gave me a number of holidays that were not set down in the school calendar. It would be difficult for a person who has not been in the South to realize the wretchedness that prevailed there at that time. Families were broken up and ruined; people who had been reared in the midst of wealth and refinement found themselves plunged into the deepest poverty and want, and compelled to submit to the rigor of military rule, and the insolence of petty officers on both sides, who were profoundly impressed with the conviction that the eyes of the world were upon them, and that the destruction or salvation of the Union rested entirely with themselves. Kentucky, although it had not been brought down to the state of poverty and utter hopelessness that existed in some of the more southern of the States, was in a peculiarly difficult position. First, Morgan's raiders would sweep over the country, leaving behind a broad track of desolation and death; and after them would come detachments of Union soldiers in pursuit of the rebel chieftain, about whose prowess stories were told that would rival the tales related of the famous robber of the Rhine. Morgan undoubtedly had many qualities which would naturally charm such men as he had in his command; but the Southern people credit him with a wealth of chivalric impulses that there is no proof he was ever possessed of. Before the war he was a gambler and a libertine; during the war he ranked high as a horse-thief and a bugaboo for women and children. He was a Jack Sheppard sneaking around in the guise of a Marion.

School had been closed, for some time, and I was enjoying myself in consequence; for I am compelled to confess that I took a much greater interest in a game of base ball than I did in the salvation of the country. Of course, there were times when I was ambitious to enlist as a drummer boy and go around the country waving flags in the thickest of the fight, leading forlorn hopes, etc., thus demonstrating to the satisfaction of everybody, and especially of myself, that I possessed an unusually heroic nature. At that time it was the dream of every girl from eight to eighty, to be a nurse in the hospitals; and of every boy from six to the drafting age, to distinguish himself and preserve the Union.

One day I had been out from early morning and as the evening came on I made all haste to get home, for Morgan's raiders were on the road, and in spite of my occasional heroic spells I was very loth to meet them. As I was walking rapidly along, I heard my name called twice, and turning around I saw an old negro, standing in front of a miserable, dilapidated hut that stood some little distance back from the road, making frantic gestures for me to come to him. I stopped and asked him what was the matter.

"O, massa Charley, massa Charley," he cried, "she's goin' to die, and I mus' go fer de doctor. Won't yer come in an' stay till I done go? I can't leab her alone!"

"Who is it that is dying?" I asked.

"Little Missy Lilly," replied he, while the tears ran down his cheeks, "she's been sinkin' and afadin', and now de end is nigh."

I knew in a moment whom he meant. He had been an old servant in a family that had lived in that section for two or three generations. The mother had died at the beginning of the war, and all of their property had been destroyed by a wandering band of guerillas some time before. As I entered the hut I saw the dead body of a man lying in the corner of the room. The face looked peaceful and pleasant, in spite of the tired, weary look that was on it, and the waxen color that death brings; over his right eye was a red stain which looked like a spot of blood. The negro saw me looking at the corpse, and bursting into tears he wrung his hands in an agony of grief, and sobbed out the whole story in the single word "Morgan."

I turned and in another corner saw a rough bed, upon which lay a little girl, evidently about five years old. She was delirious, and tossed about in a restless manner, talking to herself in her baby talk and calling on her father.

"Papa, papa," she cried, "come and kiss me good night.

'Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord——'"

then she stopped, and sinking back wearily, she moaned, "Oh, papa, Lily so tired, so tired."

The negro sat beside her and sobbed as if his heart would break.

"Don't cry, Uncle Jeff, don't cry," whispered she soothingly, slipping her little wan hand into his great black one; "My head hurts me! oh, my head hurts! Oh, papa, come and kiss away the hurt!"

The negro started up suddenly.

"I mus' go fer de doctor," said he. "Please wait till I come back, Massa Charley," and putting on an old straw hat he hastily left the room.

"It was growing darker, and I sat there watching the evening shadows creeping up slowly, and the trees outside losing their shape. Lily had become quieter, and as the delirium gradually left her, she seemed to sink into a light sleep. The fire on the hearth flickered and flung a strange, weird light through the room, making the face of the dead man seem to move and change its expression. There was a strange fascination in it, and I could not turn my eyes away. The slightest blaze would show the red spot on his forehead which had been his death. A boyish terror filled my heart, and I trembled lest the dead man should arise; but the leaden limbs moved not, and the nerveless fingers crossed upon his breast lay stiff and cold as ever. Gradually I fell into a doze, and the fitful fire-light and my strange companions faded from my eyes until I was awakened by the voices of the doctor and Uncle Jeff.

The doctor came in and took Lily's little hand in his; there was an expression on his face which told that all hope was useless.

"Oh, doctor, do suffin' for her; do suffin' for her!" cried the negro, who had been watching the physician with painful eagerness; "she's too young to die. Oh, doctor, do suffin'!"

"She is in the hands of God, Uncle Jeff," answered the doctor, "and beyond the reach of human aid. I can do nothing for her but give her a medicine that will quiet and soothe her; as it is, I do not think she will live through the night."

"Oh, massa doctor, don't say so," groaned the negro. "I'se toted her in my arms since she was suffin but a baby, and I can't leab her now."

"The medicine will do her but little good and even if I should prescribe it, it would be impossible for you to reach Cynthiana to get it, for Morgan's raiders are on the road."

"Morgan's raiders are on the road." What a terrible meaning once lay in those few words. They meant murder, robbery and arson; sorrow and desolation. How many hearts that had broken beneath the weight of the anguish and misery he had heaped upon them, know and understood their bitter significance. No part of the unwritten portion of our country's history contains more dark tales of burning homes and ruined lives than that which tell of the days of blood when "Morgan's raiders were on the road."

But the negro had forgotten his fear of the rebel chief, and only thought of saving, if possible, the life of his little mistress.

"Len' me yer horse, doctor," he cried, "len' me yer horse, and I'll ride dar and back ef de road is full of 'em. Len' me yer horse, and I'll bring de medicine, suah."

Partly out of pity, perhaps, and partly out of a desire to quiet him, the doctor consented, and in a moment they had both gone out and I was left alone.

Uncle Jeff was a splendid rider; as, indeed most Kentucky negroes are, and especially those of the Blue Grass region. In a moment he was in the saddle and off. Klop-e-tee, klop-e-tee, klop-e-tee, went the horse's hoofs on the hard road, the sound growing fainter every moment until it was heard no more. Browning has sung of the riders who carried the good news from Aix to Ghent; the poet of the Sierras has chanted the praise of Kit Carson's ride before the tempest of flame, but only Bret Harte has told of one that will equal in poetry and pathos that of Uncle Jeff's ride to Cynthiana. The horse, of good Kentucky breed, darted along the road as if he knew that his errand was one of life and death. The broad fields flashed by like a moving panorama; the tall trees by the roadside looked with dignified astonishment at the dark-skinned horseman, who clutched the reins in one hand while he patted the horse encouragingly with the other. The sky was darkening rapidly; great, jagged clouds would pass across and hide the moon, which was smiling the same old silvery smile it has had since the creation. Three, four, five, six, seven miles, and he was in the town. The stores had not closed yet, and the streets were full of people discussing the probability of a descent on the town by Morgan's men. But without a moment's pause, Uncle Jeff darted into a drug store, procured the precious mixture and in an instant was on horseback. As he darted out of the place he passed a man riding at full speed.

"Look out," cried the stranger, "Morgan is encamped below. His raiders are on the road."

Not a word answered Uncle Jeff, but urged the horse on faster. Again the panorama flashed by him—trees, houses and fields. There was a terrible silence brooding over everything. He heard no sound but the clatter of his horse's hoofs. The houses he passed looked dark and gloomy, and the single stranger was the only person he had, as yet, seen. No sign of Morgan yet, and as he neared his journey's end he became more hopeful. He had almost forgotten his fear of attack, when suddenly the horse shied. He looked ahead and standing by the roadside were half a dozen men.

"Hold on, you nigger," cried one of them, "ride here and give me that horse."

Uncle Jeff saw that his only hope was in strategy, and he checked his horse and rode slowly until he came up to them, then sudden ly giving the horse full rein he darted past. For a moment the men stood irresolute, being taken off their guard by the rider's daring; then they began to fire. Bang, bang, bang, report after report rang out in the clear night air, but still the negro rode on and still the panorama flashed by. At last he reached the hut and I, hearing him, ran out to help him dismount. I saw that he was weak, and as he entered I was startled to see blood all over his face and clothes.

"It's in my pocket," he gasped, "de medicine for Miss Lily. I met 'em on de road and dey shot me."

"Uncle Jeff," cried Lily from the bed, "come to me, Uncle Jeff."

I helped the negro to the bedside, and as I did so I saw that she was dying.

"Uncle Jeff," said she, "I feel so much better now, for while you were gone God bent down and kissed all the hurt away, and I am going to mamma and papa. Forgive me, Uncle Jeff, if I have ever been cross to you."

"Lord bless you, Missy Lily," sobbed the negro, "you've been a angel to me when I was suffin but a triflin' nigger. My life's been one long sunshiny day till dis war, and den de rain came up and it was all dark. But de end is comin' now; de end is comin."

"What makes you so bloody, Uncle Jeff," asked Lily next.

The negro told her through his sobs of the midnight ride.

"Kiss me, Uncle Jeff," was all she said, when he had finished.

He stooped over and pressed her lips. Then she slipped her hand into his, saying:

"Hold my hand, Uncle Jeff; I would so much like you to lead me into heaven where there won't be any more soldiers or war."

I held the faithful negro up, for he was growing very weak.

Then Lily sank back and murmured a soft "good bye."

The negro leaned against me heavier and heavier.

"Uncle Jeff," I cried, becoming alarmed. There was no answer, and a moment later I knew I was holding up a dead man. The negro's wounds had been mortal, and he must have died almost at the same time the child did. Perhaps her wish had been realized, and he had led her into the realms of the shadowy unknown to the feet of Him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me."

As I moved Uncle Jeff over to the side of his dead master, something fell on the floor. I picked it up and saw that it was a little bottle of medicine, and on the label was a stain of blood.

Speaking of nuisances, one on Congress street is worthy a passing notice. We refer to the bay-windows of the block occupied by Dr. Goodall, Mr. Burleigh and others, which project over the sidewalk. When a thaw occurs passers-by are sprinkled by water; and when the temperature is low this water freezes and makes dangerous walking.

Says the Transcript: "Boston has a large number of bank officers who have been in the same institution for more than thirty years." We have a bank in this city, three of whose Directors (Wm. M. Shackford, Ex-Gov. Goodwin and Wm. H. Y. Hackett,) have served about forty years each; and one of them (Hon. W. H. Y. Hackett) has been President more than thirty years.

The New York Herald basely attempts to transfer the credit of having first named Judge Waite for the Chief Justiceship of the United States Supreme Court, from this metropolis to that suburban village, asserting that Samuel L. M. Barlow, a member of the New York bar, was the first to suggest the name of the successful candidate, to a reporter of the Herald, which paper published the result of the interview and thus gave the President his cue. This envious attempt to rob our genial neighbor, the Times, of its well-earned laurels, we regard with the contempt it deserves.

Glasgow Shipbuilding.

The building of iron steamships on the Clyde has been falling off for several years, while that of iron sailing ships has been rather on the increase. The number of vessels of different descriptions built on the river in 1873 was 94, against 227 in 1872 and 231 in 1871,—though the vessels of last year were generally of a larger size than those of other years. The contracts of last year showed a greater falling off, and many of those which were then built were contracted for one or two years previously; and at the same time the iron sailing ships built showed an increase of 7,000 tons over 1872 and 9,000 tons over 1871, though the total of both sailing vessels and steamers is 11,000 tons less than in 1870, and the orders on hand at the end of the year by the shipbuilders on the Clyde were much below those held at the end of the two previous years. There are under contract and not out of the builders' yards, at the present time, 130 vessels of 216,000 tons,—being 55,000 tons less than the aggregate tonnage under contract in 1872 and 93,000 less than 1871.

The Spinster's Chance.

It is generally the case that the more beautiful and the richer a young female is the more difficult are both her parents and herself in the choice of a husband, and the offers they refuse. The one is too tall, the other too short, this not wealthy, and that not respectable enough. Meanwhile, one spring passes after another, and year after year carries away leaf after leaf of the bloom of youth, and opportunity. Miss Harriet Selwood was the richest heiress in her native town, but she had already completed her twenty-seventh year, and beheld almost all her young friends united to men whom she had at one time or another discarded. Harriet began to be set down for an old maid. Her parents became really uneasy, and she herself lamented in private a position which is not a natural one, and to which those to whom nature and fortune have been niggard of their gifts are obliged to submit; but Harriet, as we have said, was handsome and very rich.

Such was the state of things when her uncle, a wealthy merchant in the north of England, came on a visit to her parents. He was a jovial, lively, straightforward man, accustomed to attack all difficulties boldly and coolly.

"You see," said her father to him one day, "Harriet continues single. The girl is handsome; what she is to have for her fortune, you know; even in this scandal-loving town not a creature can breathe an imputation against her."

"True," replied the uncle; "but look you, brother, the grand point in every affair in this world is to seize the right moment; this you have not done. It is a misfortune, but let the girl go along with me, and before the end of three months I will return her to you as the wife of a man as young and as wealthy as herself."

Away went the niece with her uncle. On the way home he thus addressed her:

"Mind what I am going to say. You are no longer Miss Selwood, but Mrs. Lumley, my niece, a young, wealthy, childless widow; you had the misfortune to lose your husband, Col. Lumley, after a happy union of a quarter of a year, by a fall from his horse while hunting."

"But, uncle——"

"Let me manage, if you please, Mrs. Lumley. Your father has invested me with full powers. Here, look you, is the wedding-ring given you by your late husband. Jewels, and whatever else you need, your aunt will supply you with; and accustom yourself to cast down your eyes."

The keen-witted uncle introduced his niece everywhere, and everywhere the young widow excited a great sensation. The gentlemen thronged about her, and she soon had her choice of twenty suitors. Her uncle advised her to accept the one that was deepest in love with her, and rare chance decreed that this should be precisely the most amiable and opulent. The match was soon concluded, and one day the uncle desired to say a few words to his future nephew in private.

"My dear sir," he began; "we have told you an untruth."

"How so? Are Mrs. Lumley's affections—"

"Nothing of the kind; my niece is sincerely attached to you."

"Then her fortune, I suppose, is not equal to what you told me?"

"On the contrary, it is larger."

"Well what is the matter, then."

"A joke—an innocent joke which came into my head one day when I was in good humor; we could not well recall it afterward. My niece is not a widow."

"What! Col. Lumley living?"

"No, no; she is a spinster."

The lover protested that he was a happier fellow than he had ever conceived himself, and the old maid was forthwith metamorphosed into a young wife.

About a Hog.

Mr. McGinnis, of McGinnis Station, at the mouth of Six-Mile Canyon, has a hog which, though quite young, stands about 3 1-2 feet high, and is as slender as a racehorse. It not only has astonishingly long and slender legs, but rejoices in the possession of a snout about half as long as its body. It is peculiarly marked, being as black as coal from its fore legs to the end of its nose, while the remainder of its body is snow-white. It is a great pet, and never is so happy as when in the house playing with the children. By running with the children and dogs it has learned to do many things a hog is seldom seen to do, as to jump fences and the like. The owner says he has not a fence on his ranch that the hog cannot jump. The hog takes great interest in strangers, and likes to get acquainted with them and have them play with and notice him.

A funny thing happened to a couple of citizens—James Kelly, the soda man, and Tommy Quinlan—who were down the canyon and stopped for a short time at McGinnis' place. They saw but little of the hog till they were driving away, and knew nothing of his playful habits. Great was their surprise, therefore, to see a long-legged, long-nosed beast start after them on a keen gallop, but when the creature came up with them and at a single bound landed himself in the rear of the soda-wagon, our friends thought the beast was possessed of a devil, and concluded their time had come. As the hog landed in the wagon Quinlan landed out, tumbling into a big mud-hole, but Mr. Kelly did not dare let go the reins, and so was left alone with the enemy. He opened a rapid fire on the animal with soda-bottles, and the playful porker considering this rather rough treatment, bounded out of the vehicle as gracefully as a greyhound and galloped back to the ranch, where a crowd of men stood laughing at the pranks of piggy.

—Hair-cutting is one dollar in Prescott, Arizona, by licensed barbers. The Apaches charge nothing, and make a clean cut.

—Carbolic acid turns out to be a deadly poison to snakes, a few drops being sufficient to cause the almost instant death of the much-dreaded cobra.

—The free-love community in Lorraine county, Ohio, has proved a complete failure in spite of determined efforts to give it sufficient vitality to enable it to live.

—It is said that Mrs. Benj. Wood wore $140,000 worth of diamonds and lace at the recent orphan asylum ball in New York. That must be very comforting to the orphans.

—American ladies who have recently returned from Paris wear in their bonnets a long feather of four or five different and distinct colors. They say that this feather is all the rage in the French capital.

—A young lady in Indiana sought to demolish an unfaithful lover by publishing some verses addressed to him, in which, after prophesying her immediate dissolution, she said: "come gaze upon my dust, false one." But the compositor spelled dust with a b.

—It costs the traveller but a few cents per mile to go on a railroad as far as the conductor agrees to take him, the ticket being the contract, and it may be a very expensive thing for the road if it gives the passenger a longer ride than the contract stipulates. The Washington, Virginia, Midland and Great Southern Railroad took Mrs. Mary E. Norris two miles past her station, and the conductor refused to back her up. He agreed, however, to take the passenger to the next station and send her back by the next train going that way. This did not suit Mrs. Norris, and she walked home in the mud and snow and slush, took a bad cold and had a bad spell of sickness. She sued the road for $3000 damages. The case was tried in Washington, and the jury gave her $800 only. That is $200 a mile for her too long ride and wet, unpleasant walk, and the anger which heated her and the cold she caught.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately, restores often removes the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair regrown, with lively expression, falling hair is checked and permanently established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, from is the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form or quantity, and containing no ingredient which can possibly produce intoxication, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs,

NO. 78 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States, also, in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers in Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessary for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring Inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for PATENTS, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN EGG ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if it condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

Now, don't let anybody make you believe that we can't do this and give you a GOOD article of FLOUR at the same price they can; because if you do, you will be deceived. We bought these pictures in New York at such prices that we can afford to do it.

Why? 1st, because it so increases our sales that even with a small profit on the Flour, we can make day wages. 2d, because when people come to buy Flour they see the prices of other goods and buy them. 3d, because everybody knows we always do just what we advertise to do.

CATARRH!
A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years, Cured.
And Droppings in Throat, Chokings, Strangulings, Pains in the Side, Loins, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the CONSTITUTIONAL
CATARRH REMEDY.
TO MESSRS. LITTLEFIELD & CO., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.:
I reside at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Henniker, and am a native of Weare, this state. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 18 years old; and it had all the time. I run all that period, and nights it would fill up and drop down in my throat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I would generally be led to save myself from strangulation. It affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headaches; at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had lame pains in shoulders, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering, and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.
MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.
Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.

I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, chokings and strangulings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.
Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left, Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

Faith Murray's Vow.

Not an ungenerous girl was Faith Murray by any manner of means, and her honest blue eyes were very pleasant and kindly to look into. A part nevertheless, of Faith's inheritance from her high-headed Scotch ancestry, had been a somewhat hasty and jealous disposition, and a goodly share of their own unyielding obstinacy. As her mother was apt to remark at times, "Faith is a dear girl, but she needs management, and it isn't everybody that knows how."

Not "everybody," indeed; and assuredly not such a bluff, frank, straightforwardly up-and-down fellow as Curtis Howland.

Tall, broad shouldered, curly-headed, dark eyed, was Curt, and his white teeth were perpetually gleaming, through his heavy mustache, in a smile that betokened good will to every soul he met, male or female.

That was very much the way in which he came so utterly to grief in his "management" of Faith Murray. He was as true as steel, and she knew it; but his universal popularity had shaped itself, strangely enough, into one of her pet grievances, and this she had nursed into such strength that its evil energy burst forth, at last, just at the wrong time and place.

Openly, angrily, and in the hearing of others even, had Faith told Curt, on their return from the last picnic and boating party of the season, that "she would never put her foot into a boat of his again."

Curt had replied with a laugh, "Then I'll always have to borrow one for you of somebody else;" but Faith learned afterward that from that day forth, the square nosed but light-built and handsome skiff, which had carried so merry a party to the picnic, had never since that day been loosed from its chain at the head of the little cove where the Howland farm came down to the river.

When winter approached, the boat had been taken out, of course, and carefully carted to its customary shed near the great barns, but Faith felt very sure that no other female foot since her own had been permitted to step within it.

As week followed week, and month after month went by, Curt Howland's broad and merry face had seemed to grow a trifle graver and thoughtful; but his thoughts however serious they may have been, had taught him little additional wisdom. If they had, he would have known better than to say what he did to Faith when he made his first out-and-out effort at reconciliation. He had refused all along to be on any other than "speaking terms," and had "left Faith to do her own quarrelling," in a way that was exceedingly impolite and exasperating.

She had fairly longed to see him show some signs of temper or sentiment, and she had derived no small degree of satisfaction from the manner in which he had treated his boat. She had fairly warmed toward him, one day, when she learned of his borrowing a skiff to go duck-hunting, and yet she had muttered:

"He said he would borrow a boat to take me out in, but I'll teach him a lesson yet!"

Perhaps Curt thought he had learned all the lesson that was necessary, but, at, all events, one fine December day, he decided to call for Faith Murray and ask her to go with him on the grand sleighing party to the "quilting-bee" across the river. There would be such a magnificent drive on the ice, and such a splendid opportunity to make up, and Curt had laid the matter very close, indeed, to his heart and hopes.

And yet, even when he went after her, he blundered, just like himself from the very beginning. Instead of dashing up in his gay little cutter, with "just room for two," the sleigh he drove was the biggest of all the half dozen or so that was hitched in front of Squire Murray's ample doorway, and Faith had said to herself, as she looked at it from the window:

"Looks as if it was going to carry all the girls in the neighborhood!" and her blue eyes had darkened, and her fair cheeks had flushed with fresh vexation. She was, every bit, ready to take fire, therefore a few minutes later, when her too open hearted admirer asked:

"You'll step into my sleigh, won't you, Faith, even if you won't put your foot into my boat?"

And she answered sharply:

"No, indeed, sir. I don't care to ride in an omnibus. You will, doubtless, have plenty of company without me."

If Curt Howland had seemed to make light of his rebuff at the summer picnic, it was very different now, and there was something in the pained, hurt, disappointed expression of his manly and really handsome face that would have carried the day in his favor under any other circumstances. Every girl in the room was on his side in a moment—but Faith's rosy cheeks burned only the hotter for her consciousness of that fact—and the only person present who felt any real satisfaction was Sile Herring, the village lawyer, who was now sure of his good fortune to officiate as Faith Murray's escort to and from the quilting.

As for Curt himself not a word said he, but turned steadily and dignifiedly toward the door, and in another minute the quick sharp jingle of his bells told Faith that his sleigh was, like his boat doomed to go empty of lady passengers until her own feet came back to it.

Up to that moment Curt's mind had been occupied only with joyous anticipations of reconciliation with Faith, and of the fun he would have on the sleigh ride, going and coming as well as at the quilting. Now, however, as his fleet team drew him swiftly along the river road on his lonely way homeward, his eyes wandered up and down the river, predisposed to discover anything that might appear to suggest an interference with the contemplated merry-making.

It is very strange how the world will look to a man in one frame of mind and another! That morning the sun had been cheery, the sleighing had been extraordinarily good, and Curt's merry eyes had discovered no flaws in the prospect; but now, as if his wits were sharpened by Faith Murray's rough reply, he began to discern that the snow was remarkably soft and "soggy;" that, although the first "freeze" of the winter had been a severe one, and the ice had formed thick and strong, there had now, for several days been altogether too much sunshine; and there was no such thing as telling what the effect of it might be.

Up and down the wide expanse he gazed, here and there he saw light cutters and even heavily-laden wood sleighs crossing and re-crossing, and the former now and then putting in an extra burst of speed over the smooth and glancing surface. Neither to the right hand nor to the left did he turn, and by the time that Faith Murray and her friends were on their way to the quilting, Curt Howland's team was safe in the stable, while his big sleigh stood empty by the back door of the house, with all his buffalo robes, blankets, clam-lines and disgrace, still clinging to its unoccupied spaces.

As for Faith herself, she had hardly ever seemed in such exuberant spirits as she displayed that evening, and Mr. Silas Herring assumed for himself a species of personal triumph, as he compared his own position and occupation with what he could imagine of Curt Howland's brooding at home over his defeat. The quilting was thronged with young people and old, from far and near, but good old-fashioned hours were kept, nevertheless, and all the more so, probably, because of the sleigh-ride afterward.

If Faith Murray had any remorseful promptings concerning her conduct, she certainly gave no external token thereof, and led the fun as if she had never heard of such a person as Curtis Howland. Perhaps a keen observer, like her own mother, if only that good lady had been present, might have inclined to the idea that Faith was overdoing something, but Silas Herring was not a keen observer, and the rest of the merry company neither thought nor cared what might be the source of her high spirits. When at last the quilting-bee broke up, those whose homeward way did not permit them to drive in the direction of the river, were half disposed to envy those whose better fortune was to lead them across its broad, smooth bosom. They little dreamed how much to be preferred were the rougher but more safe and solid roads that took them even among ragged hills and heavy-drifted valleys.

Somehow or other, instead of going to bed at his usual hour, Curt Howland had lingered and lounged in front of his glowing, log-heaped fireplace, long after every other soul in the house had gone to bed. He had pretended, at first, to occupy himself with a book, but by-and-by the volume dropped on the floor. Then, for a while, Curt seemed to be absorbed in watching the vivid changes wrought by the fire as the seasoned oak and hickory slowly yielded, and then, as the forestick snapped in two, and plunged among the coals with a strange crackling sound, he suddenly sprang to his feet, threw on his hat and overcoat, and strode out into the open air in front of the house. It was a clear, beautiful night, just the sort for a sleigh-ride, and not so cold but what there was a continual drip, drip, at the eaves of the house. The tinkle of the falling drops, however, with now and then the crash of a loosened icicle, fell on his ears with a painful jar. Could it be possible that such a man had nerves? But now, swiftly down the road there came a sound of bells, and the vision of a sleigh was halted for a moment by the gate.

"Howland!" shouted a deep, hoarse voice. "Ah, you are up, are you? Well, there's a big rise in the river, and it is coming in this way fast. I've been racin' down the road to warn folks not to try the ice, but I reckon I've come as far as I need. Can you give me a sleep and some breakfast?"

"Of course I can," promptly replied Curt, "and you've done a right-good neighborly thing. It's Jake Robinson, isn't it?"

"That's my name," heartily responded the stranger, "and I've only tried to do as I'd be done by."

"Well, then," said Curt, "you go into the house and go to bed. I'll hitch up my team and see if I can make out to keep the sleighing-party from mischief. There must be time enough for that, yet, seeing the quilting come first—"

"I'll stable my horses," replied the philanthropic Jake, "but I don't go into no bed, so long's there's anybody likely to be in danger. Drag out your sleigh. Is that it? Well, there's room into it for more'n two, there is."

Curt Howland's movements were always a good deal more rapid and decisive than they seemed, and it was marvelous how quickly he and Jake were whirling down toward the customary crossing. In one thing, however, Curt had been wofully mistaken, and that was in the probable hour for the quilting to break up. Even while he was putting the harness on his good team, there were terrible perils gathering around the gay sleigh-riders. Not only had the "bee" dispersed, but already had a dozen different sets of bells rung fast and far on the frozen river, and already the first symptoms of the coming "rise" were beginning to show themselves in the ominous groaning of the ice as the tide beneath it strained and lifted at its frosty fetters. Beyond a doubt they would be broken ere long.

"Hark!" exclaimed Curt, as he drove out from the shore. "Did you hear that? We shall hardly have time to get across, I'm afraid."

"Then they won't need no warnin'," coolly remarked Jake.

"Hark!" again cried Curt Howland, but hoarsely, this time, and with something like pain in the intensity of his utterance. "I did hear it! There's a team coming down the river at a run!"

Jake Robinson himself heard it now, and exclaimed:

"It does sound mighty like a runaway, I declare. Just hark to them bells!"

Curt's breath would have come even faster and his heart would have jumped more fiercely, if he had known the whole truth. The horses of the sleighing party had recognized the signs of approaching danger much more promptly than had their masters, nor had it been at all difficult, in most cases, for their skillful drivers to head the frightened but willing brutes toward safety and the shore. The single exception had been in the young and stylish but ill broken span over which Sile Herring held the reins, for the gay young lawyer was not only not a 'skillful driver,' but he had failed to understand the situation at first, and he had lashed his poor colts mercilessly for their trembling refusal to go forward. Even when he consented to wheel them, he had not been able to guide them landward, for a great heave and groan of the ice around him had just then nearly scared the senses out of both him and his quadrupeds. In a moment more the fright of the latter was a wild 'runaway,' right down the river, and certainly had one good result, for it bore the sleigh and its occupants swiftly away from what was fast becoming an angry tumult of cracking, tossing, grinding fragments. All this Curt Howland did not know, but, nevertheless, he drove straightforward instantly, with a dim idea of giving help to somebody. Well for him that he did so, for, in less than half a minute, he found himself spinning along at almost racing speed, behind a light sleigh, in which there shortly arose a female form, which he knew only too well, while a clear, firm voice exclaimed:

"O, Curt, the ice is breaking! Drive ashore right away!"

And he had shouted, in reply:

"Head 'em for the island, Sile; you can bring 'em in there. I'll follow right on. Don't be scared, Faith, I won't leave you."

And then another form had risen in the sleigh, and Faith Murray herself caught the falling reins as Sile Herring dropped them and sprang out upon the ice. It was a rash and foolish thing to do, and Curt reined in just long enough to say:

"That's it, Jake; jump out and drag him ashore, while I go on after the runaways."

Jake obeyed heroically, and he found that Sile Herring did indeed require "dragging" to get him ashore, after that wild spring and thump upon the ice.

Faith was alone in her sleigh now, and but little sorry for that, to tell the truth, or even that she had the reins in her own hands, for she knew how to manage them far better than the panic-stricken youth who had deserted her, while the colts themselves were getting the first frenzy of their fright somewhat raced out of them.

The brave girl knew very well what Curt meant by 'the island;' a low lying bit of duck-marsh and drift-wood hardly above the water's edge, not a great way farther down stream, but in the very middle of the river. She thought it a strange stopping place, at first, until she recalled how bluff and steep were the banks on either side of the river for miles below the accustomed 'crossing.'

Straight for the island, then, and Curt Howland's sleigh was close behind her; but, even as her wild young team sprang up the low acclivity, there came to Faith's ears a sharp, quick, snapping sound; the reins were jerked from her hands, and she found herself suddenly sitting still in her light cutter, while the colts went madly on, with the pole and its attachments banging at their heels. No uncommon thing for 'irons' to snap, under such circumstances, and, if Faith was dismayed for a moment, Curt Howland felt a good deal more inclined to a hearty thanksgiving.

"Jump in, Faith, jump in!" he shouted, cheerily, as he drove alongside the cutter. "Don't you see you'll be my only passenger?"

Even in that moment of awful peril, however, Faith's obstinacy yielded slowly and she was replying, half argumentatively:

"But, Curt, how will you ever get ashore? Don't you see that the ice is breaking? Won't we be safer on the island?"—when she found herself caught up in strong arms and lifted, with or without her will, to a snug place among the blankets and buffalo-robes at the bottom of the big sleigh.

"The river is rising. There is a great flood coming down!" exclaimed Curt. "In half an hour the island will be under water, and every thing on it swept away. I'd never have known if Jake Robinson hadn't waked me. I hitched up and came out as soon as I got the news. Thank God!"

Faith Murray felt a glow and a melting at her heart as she listened, but she made no reply. The situation certainly seemed hardly to favor much conversation, for Curt was driving fiercely up the river again, and everywhere the signs of the approaching 'breaking-up' were growing more and more fearful and threatening.

"Why don't you drive down?" she asked.

"The rapids are only half frozen,' replied Curt, 'and we should surely be lost if we got in them. Besides, the water is shallower up here, and the horses will find their footing sooner after we break in.'

"After we break in!" repeated Faith, to herself. "Why, the sleigh will go right to the bottom. He is terribly cool about it!"

It was a cool subject, perhaps, and Faith felt the icy shudders creep over her, in spite of her courage, as she noted how far they yet were from any possible landing place.

And now the booming, moaning sound that Faith had heard once before that evening, began to fill their ears, and the sleigh slid hither and thither on the undulating surface, and Curt lashed his faithful, powerful span to their utmost exertion. Every minute seemed an hour; but now, at last, Curt exclaimed, exultingly:

"Hurrah, Faith! We are beyond the deep channel, I think. Back there the current is swift, and the ice will break and pile. It's breaking now? See it!—see the great cakes go over and over?"

"But, Curt,' responded the almost shivering beauty, 'don't you see that the ice is parting from the shore ahead of us, just because it piles up out yonder? I can tell by the moonlight on the water. O, Curt, dear, it is dreadful to be drowned, but it's even worse to think that I've brought you out here too. Can't you swim ashore?—O Curt, I've been so very bad to you!'

"You wait a moment!" shouted the single-minded young athlete, as he gave his team the lash again. 'If we can only get a little nearer the edge of the ice—Ha! there it comes! Down in the bottom of the boat, Faith, I must use my oars!—now—quick—hurrah!"

Faith Murray had hid her face in the furs that almost covered her as she stopped, but she heard a wild, fierce, frightened neigh; a great splashing plunge, as the horses went into the water; the cracking of ice, mingled with the roaring sound of the flood; and then instead of the arctic bath for which she had prepared herself, she was conscious of an easy, rocking, floating motion and the music of rowlocks, as the oars were swung strongly back and forth by the sinewy arms of Curt Howland.

Then, at last, her astonishment got the better of her fears and she looked timidly out from her hiding place; but the color came fast into her cheeks again as she did so.

"The boat, Curt?' she said.

"Yes, the old boat herself,' he replied.

'I put it on instead of the sleigh-box, to come after you with, just for the fun of it, and covered it all over with robes and blankets. I only expected a good laugh, but now, it has saved both our lives. You didn't mean to put your foot in my sleigh and the boat at the same time, did you, Faith?'

'O, Curt, forgive me!' was all the answer that came just then, and Faith felt specially relieved at the remark which instantly followed.

'There are the horses—safe on their feet in the shallows and making for the shore. We'll be there, too, in five minutes. Just look at the lanterns along shore! There must be twenty men!'

Down went Faith Murray's head among the furs again, but in spite of the roaring water and the rattle of the rowlocks, she could plainly hear the exultant, happy, almost cooing tones of a deep musical voice, that repeated her name over, and over, and over, with other words that seemed to be fitted wonderfully well both to name and voice.

'The boat and the sleigh, both!'

How strangely her rash and cruel words had come to naught, and what a man among men was Curtis Howland!

When at last the square prow of the skiff grated on the ice and gravel at the margin, and the strong arms once more caught her up and bore her onward, Faith Murray's blushing face was ready to nestle close to Curt's shoulder, and she whispered:

'No other boat but your's if you'll forgive me—no, not as long as I live.'

Exports and Imports.

The Bureau of Statistics have recently published a detailed statement of the imports and exports for the eight months endidg Sept. 1,1874. They show a decline in imports of thirty-eight millions, and an increase in exports of fifty-eight and a half millions. In going through the list it appears the decline in imports has been in articles which we can well spare. A few articles have increased, and a part of them could be well spared. There was an increase of imports of steel rails of a million of dollars, an increase of leaf tobacco and cigars of a million, and an increase in tin plates of two millions. The decline has been in woolen dress goods three millions, carpets one million, shawls one million, wool and wool and hair of goats ten millions, watches half a million, silk dress goods four millions, other manufactures of silk five millions, kid gloves one million, pig iron one million, railroad iron five millions, old scrap iron one million, hemp one million, manufacture of flax three millions, cotton manufactures three millions, drugs and chemicals one million. These are not the exact figures but very near them and are given in round numbers.

The main articles upon which our exports increased were tobacco four millions, pork one million, cheese three millions, bacon and ham twelve millions, illuminating oils ten millions, leather one million, hides and skins two millions, cotton twenty-four millions, wheat twenty-one millions, flour two millions, boards and timber two millions. The export of corn diminished eight millions. The balance of trade for the whole year is from one hundred and ten to one hundred and twenty millions more favorable to us than for the preceding year.

Specie Payment

Specie payments and currency continue to be the theme for discussion in the Senate. Wise statesmen tell us that whenever we shall commence to resume, that nobody will want specie when they know they can get it; and otherwise statesmen tell us of the almost unsurmountable toils endured by commerce and industry from an irredeemable proper currency. Congress has been discussing these questions by the month and the public indefinitely. It may not be out of order therefore for me to take a hand at these subjects. Suppose two ships start from Liverpool with cargoes of the same value, and both intend to put them into wheat for a return cargo. One goes to St. Johns and sells out for $90,000 in gold and loads up with wheat at 90 cents, and the other goes to Portsmouth and sells out for $100,000 in currency and loads up with wheat at a dollar a bushel. Is there any difference in the quantity of wheat each vessel has for its cargo? Of course not. The only trouble was to know at what price to sell and how to make the gold value equal. But in case you should attempt specie payment in Portsmouth, how would it be then? When the captain got his $100,000 in currency in Portsmouth, and found he could buy wheat in St. Johns for ninety cents, he would just drop into your Rockingham Bank and call for specie and run his vessel down to St. Johns, and load up and by the operation put $10,000 in his pocket; and what would aggravate the matter is that Canada wheat would be marketed and our own would lay in store unsold. It would be by such operations that specie would take a double quick march out of the country, and everything would languish here, until it was ended.

Economizing.

The appropriation committee are at work cutting and paring down in every direction. When they are through it will be found there has been wholesale as well as wholesome economy. It is pretty evident from the debate and action of Wednesday that Congress will be liberal in its aid to the centennial celebration to come off at Philadelphia in 1876, and makes it certain to be a success. It is now certain there will be inflation to the extent of the balance of the reserve of $44,000,000; $25,000,000 has already been put out. That postpones specie payment for a long time. Inflation will only start speculation and ought not to be thought of any more than sharp contraction. It is safe to let a thing which is working well alone.

Chief Justice Waite.

The advocates of female suffrage are rejoicing over the appointment of Waite for Chief Justice. They claim him to be a firm believer in their rights to vote under the constitutional amendments.

Readables.

Judge Jeremiah Smith has resigned as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

Two express trains met on the Glasgow and Edinburg railroad, Scotland, Tuesday, and sixteen persons were killed.

The Secretary of the Navy declares that it would be unwise if not absolutely impossible to reduce his estimates and thinks the War department might be reduced, for if there is to be any trouble in the United States it will come from foreign governments, when the navy would be indispensible, since it would be our sole defence.

State News.

In accordance with Governor Straw's wishes, only the legal number of representatives will be admitted to witness the proceedings of the execution of Franklin B. Evans, the Northwood murderer, to take place at Concord on the 17th of February. Sheriff Odlin has already begun to make the arrangements.

The Haverhill Bulletin isn't far from right in saying of Joshua L. Foster: The record of that "secesh" editor is not so easily forgotten, and the sterling republicans of New Hampshire will prefer to fight out their battles on vital principles, and for a love of the past record of the party which has done so much for the country, rather than take any stock in such an individual.

Benjamin F. Hatch, the Gilford man who was killed by a gun accident on the 15th, slipped when carrying the weapon on his shoulder, the ball bringing the muzzle to his side. He walked and crawled three-fourths of a mile, when his strength failed. Had it not been for an intelligent dog which brought aid, he would have died alone out doors.

A confirmation has been received of the statement that the children of the dead Siamese twins have consented that the remains shall be sold to the medical authorities for scientific purposes, Dr. Hollingsworth having arrived from North Carolina with that object in view. Physicians in New York and elsewhere will contribute toward raising the sum required, which is believed to be about $10,000.

A dwelling-house and barn owned by George Johnson, near Pittsfield, was burned Sunday night. Loss about $2000.

A dog scared a Newmarket duck so badly that it took refuge in a drain and stayed there twenty-two days.

A fire occurred in James Baldwin & Co.'s bobbin shop, Manchester, Monday evening. Loss about $1000. Piper & Reynolds', axe handle manufacturers, damage is about $500. The buildings were owned by the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, and were damaged about $600. There was no insurance. James F. Phersons, foreman of steam engine Fire King, was run over by the hose carriage while attempting to get into the fire box. One of his legs was broken, and he was otherwise injured about the head.

A New Banking Bill.

The House committee on banking and currency will prepare a new bill and have agreed on the following features:

First, that restriction on the total amount of bank circulation shall be repealed, which is equivalent to authorizing free banking under the provision of the present law, except as modified by the committee's bill; second, that the requirement that banks shall keep a reserve of greenbacks in their vaults to redeem their notes shall be repealed, and that, instead, every bank shall deposit in the Treasury greenbacks amounting to five per cent. of its circulation as a fund for the redemption of its notes, and shall keep this reserve good; third, that banks shall not be allowed to pay or receive interest on deposits with each other; fourth, that country banks shall be required to keep their deposit reserves at home; fifth, that gold banks shall be allowed to issue notes to the amount of 80 per cent. only of their bonds, instead of ninety, as at present. It is understood that only three members of the committee voted against reporting a bill combining these features, and that these were Messrs. Hawley, Phelps and Mitchell. The committee subsequently agreed to report adversely upon the postal savings-banks bill, but in order to give the friends of the measure an opportunity to advocate it in the house, it was arranged that the bill, with the adverse report, should be put on the calendar for discussion in committee of the whole.

Fighting Roughs.

(Hartford Courant.

That was a sad mistake which occurred at Allyn Hall on Tuesday night. A few of our home-bred bummers thought it would be a good joke to pick a muss with a student. Not keeping a faithful run of the newspapers they did not consider that the occasion which had brought numerous college representatives here was not to organize a convention of pulmonary complaints, with a first-class consumptive patient for chairman. If they had taken in the whole object of the gathering and reasoned intelligently as to the class of students assembled, they would possibly have hesitated before beginning the attack. But ignorance was bliss, and they were bold. It was a little fellow who was selected as a good pupil to start on, and a muscular loafer was put forward for scientific work. And here is where the fun comes in. When the bummer got his mouth all ready to swallow the object of his regard, the said object threw out his right hand gently and closed the eye of the aforesaid. It was a cruel disappointment, and as the eye closed all the rest of the fellow's physical reliance went back on him, and he brought up on the floor, seeing stars not down in the programme of "The Knights of the Silver Star," whose ball it was.

Then the associate bummers wanted the university man to go outside and they would get even with him. He was accommodating, and went out into the street and knocked down two of them, and then, just getting his hand in, asked for two more. He couldn't bear the thought of leaving Hartford with having punished only three men. But there were no more mourners, and the scene closed. The lesson of it all to the loafing, fighting crowd is that the only road to success is in a nice discrimination always. The student who sits up till after midnight every night, studying by the light of a tallow-dip, and so exhausts himself that a boiled custard will grow tired in his presence, is always a safe fellow to hit; but those other students, who don't sit up nights, and who eat meat three times a day, and who get up many days early in the morning to make a gymnasium howl with pain, or get out on the placid waters of some congenial stream, to wrestle with a bow-oar, are not the kind that it is always pleasant to run against.

Policephobia.

The Times has recently had one of its periodical attacks of policephobia, Officer Shannon being the exciting cause of its last paroxysm. This would be easily accounted for had Mr. Shannon had any recent conflict with thieves or roughs and used "undue violence" to prevent their breaking his head or committing a felony; but no such episode has occurred, so we suppose our neighbor's late attacks on the officer were prompted solely by its notorious animosity to anything in the shape of a policeman,—to its faith in the doctrine that a police officer is the arch enemy of mankind, with no rights which anyone is bound to respect. Judging from its comments whenever the police have had any trouble with bullies or rogues, we gather that the Times' idea of a policeman's duty is that his first care should be to protect law-breakers from all possible harm, even though he, may himself be injured in so doing; but our idea of it is that the officer's first duty is to protect law-observers, and that it is a matter of secondary consideration whether or no he half kills or quite kills the law-breaker in effecting it,—we had rather the police broke the heads of all the scoundrels in Christendom than that one scoundrel should break ours. A specimen of the fairness of the treatment the police receive from the Times is shown in the following extract from an article in that paper in answer to an intimation from us that it had misrepresented facts in order to injure Mr. Shannon, by stating that he was suspended for taking "hush money;"

"Charges were preferred against Mr. Shannon by Ald. Nowell, in June, 1870, for receiving 'hush money,' and the matter was referred to a committee. Testimony in the case was taken in secret session and a brief report was made to the Board, the mayor stating that he considered the officer guilty and deserving punishment, and that there were other charges against the same man. On the 9th of July, 1870, Mr. Shannon was suspended from the police force by the Board of Aldermen, by a vote of 6 to 2, 'for visiting a house of ill-fame at 11 o'clock at night, when his beat was in another part of the city.' The officer was not suspended for receiving hush money, and in that statement the Times of last evening 'misrepresented' the case; but with our 'usual veracity' we repeat that charges were preferred against him."

So far as the explanation of the Times goes it is all very well; but a lie by insinuation, or a false impression purposely conveyed by suppressing a part of the truth, though no word save truth may be told, is in our estimation more contemptible than a point-blank lie, as it certainly is more harmful. If the Times meant fair play toward Mr. Shannon, why did it not give all the facts, and say that he was suspended "for visiting a house of ill-fame" to arrest a man known to be there, and that he acted by permission of the City Marshal? Simply because that would have precluded any unjust conclusion regarding that visit. Charges were indeed preferred against Mr. Shannon of taking "hush money," and the matter was referred to the committee on police and Mayor Adams, but the charges were conclusively disproved and the committee never made any report; and the language attributed to the Mayor is positively denied. Ald. Nowell preferred the charges, and also made the motion to suspend Mr. Shannon for being off his beat at a later date.—the aldermen appearing to be actuated by something very like personal spite against the officer. The latter asserts that he was not allowed a hearing nor to cross-question Cate, the only witness against him and who testified that Shannon was twenty minutes off his beat instead of five. Cate subsequently ran off with a single woman, leaving a wife and children behind him, which conduct leaves room for suspicion that he may have lied. But whether Mr. Shannon deserved suspension or not, the telling of just so much of the facts as would put the worst possible face on the matter is a "misrepresentation" and a mighty small piece of business to be engaged in.

Expenditures on Public Works.

From reports made to Congress, we glean the following statements of expenditures made in this vicinity from June 30, 1865, to June 30, 1873: Custom House at Portsmouth, $359; Light House at Whale's Back, $70,000; Life Station at Rye, $2000; Navy Yard at Portsmouth, $940,937.63; Fort Constitution, $129,822.47; Fort McClary, 124,093 24; Batteries, Portsmouth harbor, $3000; improving Cocheco river, $13,000. Total $1,285,212.34.

Laconics.

Who has not read the history of the early Indian wars, and of our ancestors? No school boy who has even a fair knowledge of reading has failed to do this, and the names of old Indian braves are still fresh in memory. Now we have the celebrated showman, Washburn, with his "Warm Spring Indians," with scars that send a chill over one's body, and painted cheeks, long straight hair, a guttural voice that owns to the ejaculation "ugh," and whose vocal music is as premature as it is harsh. They come to-morrow evening.

Last year, Mr. Lewis W. Brewster by favoritism was awarded the printing of the City accounts at $3.90 per page for about 70 pages. This year, bids were called for and Mr. Brewster's bid of $2.18 per page for the same number of pages was the lowest and was accepted. Last year, the matter was left with Mayor Marvin. The year previous Mr. Brewster had the printing at $8.90 per page, or thereabouts.

J. S. P. writes us that the hay window nuisance of Waldron block can easily be reduced to almost nothing by sweeping off, the snow from the projections immediately after a snowfall. A close observer can see that this is done by one or two of the owners.

The President of the Portsmouth Howard Benevolent society acknowledges the generous receipt of twenty dollars from Thomas M. Coffin, Esq., of Plymouth, Mass., for the benefit of the poor.

A temperance meeting was held last Sunday evening at the Franklin street church in Manchester, at which Mr. J. Horace Kent of this city and Mr. Samuel C. Knights of Cambridgeport made addresses. A mass meeting under the auspices of the N. H State Temperance Union will be held in Manchester next month.

Some persons, for want of better employment, indulge in the amusement of breaking the glass in the street gaslights. In some localities this is done as often as twice or three times a week, and is not only a great annoyance but a source of no inconsiderable expense to the city. The culprits are probably silly boys, who think it very manly to smash a pane of glass; but they will find it a serious business and not at all admired by the Police Judge, if they happen to get caught, which unhappily has not occurred yet, but probably will if they keep on.

The Journal of Jan. 24th says "Mr. George A. Hammond of Eliot has been awarded the contract for furnishing one hundred tons of hay at the navy yard for the present year, and has already hauled the first instalment." As Mr. Hammond's contract is to furnish hay for the year commencing July 1, 1873, and he commenced to deliver hay at the yard more than three months ago, we have no doubt that our neighbor's statement that he "has already hauled the first instalment" is correct.

The following is told of Mrs. Celia Thaxter's parrot, showing its appreciation of the use of swearing: This parrot once amused itself, while passing the afternoon with its mistress, by saying at intervals, "Dear Celia," which she bore very serenely. At last Mrs. Thaxter rose to leave the room, whereupon the bird swung itself in its ring and cried angrily, "Oh, damn! Oh, damn!"

A Good Selection.

Dr. J. F. Hall, of Portsmouth, formerly of this town, has been nominated for the State Senate. The Dr. knows something about hayseed, having had much experience among the farmers in this region, besides being somewhat of a farmer himself. His neighbors here can testify that his hay crops were equal to the best.

Business Notices.

Dr. O. Fitzgerald, the wonderful clairvoyant physician and surgeon, will visit Portsmouth and be at the Franklin House Tuesday, January 27th, remaining two days only. Don't fail to see him,—his cures are truly wonderful.

The Foremost Tonic of the Age.

Taking into consideration the character of its numerous cures, the history of its cures and its immense annual sales, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters may be fairly entitled the Foremost Tonic of the Age. It is not only a tonic but a constitution and blood alterative, and its tendency is to substitute healthy for diseased action throughout the system. If the stomach is feeble and torpid it produces a vitalizing impression upon its mucous tissues. No sooner has the dyspeptic swallowed a dose of it than he knows by his sensations that his stomach has received an accession of vigor. It increases the desire for food and the ability to digest and assimilate it. If the liver is derelict, it improves the condition of the organ and imparts to it a new and healthful impulse. The bowels being obstructed, it promotes the flow of bile into the intestinal canal and thereby relieves them and re-establishes their natural action. Nervous pains in the brain, the nerves and the kidneys are equally salutary. In short, it tones, alters and regulates the whole system.

Don't temporize with Piles.—Ointments, lotions, electuaries and all manner of quack nostrums are a waste of time and money. The only absolutely infallible cure for these painful diseases is ANAKESIS, discovered by Dr. Sisson. It has been pronounced by scientific men as the happiest discovery made in medicine for 200 years; it affords instant relief from pain in the worst cases and has cured more than 20,000 sufferers permanently. All doctors prescribe it—Price $1.50. Sold by druggists everywhere. Depot, 46 Walker st., New York.

Dr. Heimbold, the originator of Buchu, has the satisfaction of knowing that all his imitators have failed to produce the like for his preparation, insures. Heimbold's Fluid Buchu cures. The others disappoint. Persons suffering from Kidney Complaint, Gravel, Premature Decay, Loss of Vigor or any souvenir of indiscretion, cannot apply the remedy too soon. The great point is to get the genuine Buchu Extract, which is Heimbold's and no other. For sale by all druggists.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brushy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair regrown with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickened; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is prized for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

—The game of "squibbles" has been one-sidedly popular among Baltimore school-boys, who throw pieces of iron about the streets, regardless, as it were, until the authorities had to interfere. It is expected in the Eastern States soon.

— "Does this razor go easy?" asked the barber of a victim who was writhing under a clumsy instrument, whose chief recommendation was a strong handle. "Well," replied the poor fellow, "that depends upon what you call this operation. If you are skinning me, it goes tolerably easy; but if you are shaving me, it goes rather hard."

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the food as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron, in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs,
No. 78 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Extensts, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their application in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

PRICES THAT CAN'T BE BEAT.

PRIDE OF THE WEST	$10.75
RED JACKET	12.00
GENUINE	9.25
A	10.00
LILY OF THE VALLEY	10.50

These prices are less than the same brands or quality can be bought in this State, and we guarantee everything as we say, or you can return it at our expense.

With EVERY BARREL of Flour so sold, we shall give you

Your Choice of Two
SPLENDID STEEL ENGRAVINGS,
(Samples of which can be seen at our store,)
The Village Blacksmith,
AND
Signing the Compact in the Cabin of the Mayflower,
AS A PREMIUM PRESENT!

These Engravings are elegant again, and worthy a place in any house.

Now, don't let anybody make you believe that we can't do this and give you a GOOD article of FLOUR at the same price they can. Because if you do, you will be deceived. We bought these pictures in New York at such prices that we can afford to do it.

Why? Ist, because it so increases our sales that even with a small profit on the Flour, we can make day wages. 2d, because when people come to buy Flour they see the prices of other goods and buy them. 3d, because everybody knows we always do just what we advertise to do.

NOW TRY US. All we ask is for you to call, see and be convinced.

CATARRH!
A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years, Cured.
And Droppings in Throat, Chokings, Strangulings, Pains in the Head, Side, Joints, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the
CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY.
TO MESSRS. LITTLEFIELD & CO., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N. H.:
I reside at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Hamilton, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 18 years old; had it bad all the time. It run all that period, and nights it would fill up and drop down in my throat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I would sometimes get up in bed to save myself from strangulation. It affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuffs and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.
MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.
Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.

I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, chokings and strangulings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.
Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left, Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

How Butler Conquered His Prejudices.

[Speech in Congress.]

I got over my prejudices from the exhibition of like high qualities in the negro, but in a different manner from that in which, I have no doubt, many a prejudice was removed against the negro in the House yesterday. In Louisiana, in 1862, when our arms were meeting with disasters before Richmond, I was in command of the city of New Orleans with a very few troops, and those diminishing by the diseases incident to the climate, with a larger number of confederate soldiers paroled in the city than I had troops. I called upon my Government for reenforcements, and they could not give me any, and I therefore called upon the colored men to enlist in defense of their country. I brought together the officers of two colored regiments that had been raised by the confederates for the defense of the city against us—but which disbanded when we came there because they would not fight against us, and staid at home when their white comrades ran away—and I said, "How soon can you enlist me one thousand men?" "In ten days, General," they answered; and when the thousand men were brought together in a large hall, I saw such a body of recruits as I never saw before. Why, sir, every one of them had on a clean shirt, a thing not often got in a body of a thousand recruits. [Laughter.] I put colored officers in command of them, and I organized them. But we all had our prejudice against them. I was told they would not fight. I raised another regiment, and by the time I got them organized, before I could test their fighting qualities in the field, the exigencies of the service required that I should be relieved from the command of that department.

I came into command again in Virginia in 1863. I there organized twenty-five regiments, with some that were sent to me, and disciplined them. Still all my brother officers of the regular army said my colored soldiers would not fight; and I felt it was necessary that they should fight to show that their race were capable of the duties of citizens; for one of the highest duties of citizens is to defend their own liberties and their country's flag and honor.

On the 29th of September, 1864, I was ordered by the Commanding General of the armies to cross the James River at two points and attack the enemy's line of works; one in the centre of their line, Fort Harrison, the other a strong work guarding their left flank at New Market Heights; and there are men on this floor who will remember that day, I doubt not, as I do myself. I gave the center of the line to the white troops, the Eighteenth Corps, under General Ord, and they attacked one very strong work and carried it gallantly. I went myself with the colored troops to attack the enemy at New Market Heights, which was the key to the enemy's flank on the north side of James River. That work was a redoubt built on the top of a hill of some considerable elevation; then running down into a marsh; in that marsh was a a brook; then rising again to a plain which gently rolled away toward the river. On that plain, when the flash of dawn was breaking, I placed a column of three thousand colored troops, in close column by division, right in front, with guns at "right shoulder shift." I said, "That work must be taken by the weight of your column; no shot must be fired;" and to prevent their firing I had the caps taken from the nipples of their guns. "Then I said, "Your cry, when you charge, will be, 'Remember Fort Pillow!'" and as the sun rose up in heavens the order was given, "Forward," and they marched forward, steadily as if on parade—went down the hill, across the marsh, and as they got into the brook they came within range of the enemy's fire, which vigorously opened upon them. They broke a little as they forded the brook, and the column wavered. O, it was a moment of intensest anxiety, but they formed again, as they reached the firm ground, marching steadily on with closed ranks under the enemy's fire, until the head of the column reached the first line of abatis, some one hundred and fifty yards from the enemy's work. Then the ax-men ran to the front to cut away the heavy obstructions of defense, while one thousand men of the enemy with their artillery concentrated, poured from the redoubt a heavy fire upon the head of the column hardly wider than the Clerk's desk. The ax-men went down under that murderous fire; other strong hands grasp the axes in their stead, and the abatis is cut away. Again, at double-quicks, the column goes forward to within fifty yards of the fort, to meet there another line of abatis. The column halts, and there is a very fire of hell pouring upon them. The abatis resists and holds; the head of the column seems literally to melt away under the rain of shot and shell; the flags of the leading regiments go down, but a brave black hand seizes the colors; they are up again and wave their starry light over the storm of battle; again the ax-men fall, but strong hands and willing hearts seize the heavy, sharpened trees and drag them away, and the column rushes forward, and with a shout which now rings in my ear, go over that redoubt like a flash, and the enemy never stop running for four miles. [Applause on the floor and in the galleries.]

is the track of that charging column, and there, in a space not wider than the Clerk's desk, and three hundred yards long, lay the dead bodies of five hundred and forty-three of my colored comrades, fallen in defense of their country, who had offered up their lives to uphold its flag and its honor as a willing sacrifice; and as I rode along among them, guiding my horse this way and that way lest he should profane with his hoofs what seemed to me the sacred dead, and as I looked on their bronzed faces upturned in the shining sun to heaven as if in mute appeal against the wrongs of the country for which they had given their lives, and whose flag had only been to them, a flag of stripes on which no star of glory had ever shone for them—feeling I had wronged them in the past and believing what was the future of my country to them—among my dead comrades there I swore to myself a solemn oath, "May my right hand forget its cunning and my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth if I ever fail to defend the rights of these men who have given their blood for me and my country this day and for their race forever;" and, God helping me, I will keep that oath. [Great applause on the floor and in the galleries.]

Afloat on the Ice.

(Kansas City Times, 26th.)

The Kansas River, which every one knows divides Kansas City from its suburban neighbor, Wyandotte City, 'got upon a regular tear' yesterday, and for about half an hour was the scene of great excitement, rivalling in intensity the excitement prevailing on board the Ville du Havre after her collision with the Loch Earn.

The river has been frozen over for a few days past, and during this time has been the scene of great bustle and excitement. The ice-dealers—among them Vinquest, Eidemiller, Atwell, and other large dealers in ice—have been at work ever since the ice was three inches thick, busily saving all that could be cut. Here was a city of fifty thousand people depending upon them for the means of keeping cool, and the wherewithal to make mint juleps and cobblers next summer. Hundreds of men were at work on the thin surface of the tranquil Kaw. Day gangs gave way to night-gangs, who in turn went home to give way to day-light reliefs. Strings of teams came and went in constant procession. Tramways were built from immense warehouses on shore far out into the river. Horses plowed backward and forward, cutting out long layers of the valuable crystal substance, which was hourly becoming more valuable, as the rain of Sunday and the cold thaw of Monday threatened a dissolution. It was about the middle of Monday afternoon when the crisis came. A vast area of the river's surface had been cleared of ice; hundreds of men and teams were coming and going. The ice had reached a thickness of about six or seven inches, and the thaw of Sunday and Monday had made it rather rotten. Suddenly a loud cracking was heard above, below, and all around the working parties. The cracking increased with the loud cries of alarm from those upon the river. A general rush was made for shore, but too late, for all the ice which had been partially separated by cutting on both sides, separated with a loud crack, and almost immediately afterward a breach was opened between the men on the ice and the shore. Shouts and cries of alarm from those on shore and those who now perceived themselves going down-stream on a huge ice-cake, which was within a few hundred yards of the rushing, turbid waters of the Missouri River,—these, combined with the cracking of the immense mass of ice, made a scene of commotion as exciting as it was interesting. After the first alarm had somewhat subsided, a concerted attempt was made by those on shore to assist in rescuing the men and horses now on the floating cake of ice. It was plainly evident that if the vast sheet of rotten ice should reach the mouth of the river it would be broken up in the rapid current of the Missouri River, and men and teams must go down among the confusion of broken ice. Ropes, planks, and other appliances were brought into requisition, as the ice raft floated slowly toward the mouth of the river. But the men on this fragile raft were not to be lost. Man himself was powerless to restrain the vast sheet of ice, or to bridge over the smooth, placid chasm between it and shore. But providence came in at the last moment. The raft drifted so that its widest part came across the stream, reaching from shore to shore. This gorged the ice a few minutes, but long enough to allow the imperiled men and horses to escape to shore, which they lost no time in doing, all being saved just as the ice again broke up and went boomingout of the Kaw into the Missouri River.

A Flood.

A despatch from Fulton, on Oswego River, says the most extensive flood known there for twenty years is now devastating the lower portion of the village, occasioned by the high water in the river, and damming up of a large quantity of ice on both sides of the island channel. For about half a mile, and all west of the canal, water covers the ground from two to seven feet deep. Sunday evening about thirty families were obliged to leave their homes, and many more next morning were carried from the second story of their houses, where they had taken refuge, by boats. One instance is related where a whole family were taken from their upstairs retreat, and among them a very sick mother, carrying a tiny baby. Men were seen wading in the water to their waists, carrying the women of their households on their backs to a place of safety. A number of families have been cared for by the poor-master; some are looked after by charitable citizens, and many still need assistance. The damage done to business is great. The gas works are below water mark and there is no gas. Some of the flour mills are unable to run, and there is danger of work in all of them being stopped.

In Memoriam.

The following resolutions offered by Col. Hall, of Dover, at the late Republican State Convention and unanimously adopted, will meet a hearty response from every one familiar with the history of Mr. Hale and his manly efforts in behalf of the great political issue of the 19th century.

Resolved, That the Republicans of New Hampshire have heard with profound sensibility of the decease, on the 19th of November last, of the Hon. John Parker Hale, and that in discharge of a public duty, and in obedience to the dictates of our private feelings, we deem it appropriate to record our appreciation of his high character, ability, and services.

Resolved, That the pre-eminent services of Mr. Hale to the cause of impartial liberty in this country, can never be overestimated; that as the pioneer in the Senate of the United States of that noble band of Anti-Slavery Senators, whose fidelity to freedom, in conjunction with that of the great body of the Northern people, has finally redeemed the nation from the stain and dishonor of human bondage, in a crisist which demanded the wisdom of the wisest and the civic virtues of the best, he brought to the responsibilities of his position that rare combination of courage, fidelity to convictions, eloquence in debate, love of liberty, good temper, strong will and incorruptible integrity of purpose, which enabled him to break down the barriers of prejudice, to revolutionize public opinion, and to exert a vast and most salutary influence for the advantage of his country and the elevation of the human race.

Resolved, That we recognize in him the earnest and impassioned Champion of Liberty—the pure and high-minded patriot—the gifted orator and Statesman, whose eloquent voice at the bar, on the platform and in the halls of legislation, was ever at the service of the oppressed, and never recreant to the cause of Humanity.

Resolved, That by a long life of devotion to duty, and of useful and brilliant public service in a variety of official capacities, Mr. Hale has placed the people of this State, especially, under obligations to him that should never be forgotten—and that posterity will cherish his memory as one of the most illustrious of the many eminent men bred in New Hampshire, who have consecrated their genius to the good of mankind.

Resolved, That the Secretary of this Convention be directed to communicate to the family of Mr. Hale a copy of these resolutions, together with the respectful sympathy of the Republicans of New Hampshire.

Sent To The Penitentiary For Stealing Papers.

A man in Rochester, N. Y., was recently convicted of stealing a copy of the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle, which had been left at the residence of one of its patrons, and sentenced to the penitentiary for sixty days. That paper pronounces the sentence a righteous one, and very truthfully remarks:

"Whenever a subscriber misses a paper, and this is generally when there is more important news than usual, he naturally attributes it to the negligence or cupidity of the carrier, who gets the blame, when the fact is that in nearly all cases some fellow like this Forbes has walked off with the paper. It is an aggravation to the subscriber, an injustice to the carrier, and no unimportant thing in our business office where complaints come."

New Bantline as Curtius.

(Brooklyn Union.)

As already announced, the New York Olympic Theatre was opened on Monday evening as a 'variety' or vaudeville theatre, signalizing in its combination of first-class entertainment and low prices of admission the advent of what the management is pleased to denominate 'a theatrical millennium.' There is, unquestionably, a brilliant variety in its performances each evening, including farces, athletic contests, Japanese acrobats, musical specialities, educated dogs, Punch and Judy, and the redoubtable Ned Buntline at the head of a detachment of Iroquois warriors. These latter appear in a performance entitled 'Life on the Plains,' in which are embodied a number of illustrations of aboriginal savagery, including the appearance of Ned Buntline himself. His portion of the performance that evening came near doing extensive damage, and contributed some features of terror not provided for in rehearsal, and not mentioned in the papers. Mr. Judson's part was that of an old trapper, and he made his entry upon the stage mounted on a mustang, whose hind legs suddenly slipped down into the orchestra, leaving the struggling beast suspended about 'midships,' as Jack would say, over the footlights. The consternation of the musicians may be imagined. A general backward rush was made by the portion of the audience in the front rows, while one confiding individual, perched in a private box high out of harm's reach, called out lustily for all to keep their seats, as there was no danger! The tumult was eventually quelled by two of the aboriginal performers, known on their native heath as "Uso-ra-kwis-hen" and "To-ka-la-no-tee-ra," who availed themselves of their native equine knowledge to seize the kicking beast by the tail and hoist him up to the stage again. Ned Buntline never dismounted during the struggle, but preferred to remain in the saddle, where he presented the aspect of Quintus Curtius making a backward plunge into the yawning gulf. At the end, however, he seemed to be quite satisfied to retire to the role of the trapper.

State News.

Simeon Rowell has sued the Boston and Maine Railroad for damages caused by the railway burning the steam saw mill of Rowell at Newton Junction. Mr. Rowell has for many years served as station agent for the road at that point.

Readables.

The city government of Newburyport has decided to try the plan of having the expenditures of that city published quarterly, and not let them run until the end of the year.

At the recent election in Boston two ladies were chosen members of the school committee. The committee has voted that their seats are vacant, 45 to 42. Now the case goes to the Supreme Court.

City treasurer Alexander D. Hamilton of Jersey City has decamped with $100,000 or more.

The Hudson River Depot.

Some 140 trains arrive and depart daily, including the Central Hudson, the Harlem and New Haven roads, and hence the signal service is one of incessant activity. Each road has four starting bells, of different keys, all rung by means of electricity. Three started passenger trains, and one ordered out the cars as soon as emptied. "You see," said the operator, "this train which has just come in. The passengers are gone, and I want to know if the baggage is taken out." He touched a stop and rang a bell (as he said) 600 feet distant. In a moment a bell over head struck twice. "Baggage is out," he said, "otherwise he would have struck once, and I would have waited. I must order the train out. Do you see that locomotive just ahead? Well, now see it move." He touched a stop, and I saw the letter Z displayed at a window in a side building. "He hears a bell ring also," said the operator. The engine backed down and hitched to the empty train, and the Z disappeared. "I shall send him out," said the operator, as he touched another stop and the empty train at once moved forward and left the depot. The letters X Y Z, I may add, parenthetically, designate the locomotives of the Harlem, Hudson River, and New Haven roads, and are signals to back down and connect with trains.

"I am now about to send out a passenger train," continued the operator; "a half hour ago I struck twice to open the doors and let the passengers pass from the sitting-room to the cars. Now I shall soon close that very door; but first I must stop checking baggage." A small knob was touched by his finger. "Now," said he, "the next trunk that comes must wait for another train. There (another touch with the finger), the baggage-car is hauled out and switched into the right track. Five minutes more and she is off. Here goes the 'close-the-door bell' (a touch); no one passes in after this. Now I say all aboard" (a touch), and we heard the distant voice of the conductor echoing through the vaulted roof. "Now it moves" (another touch), and the rumbling motion was immediately perceptible, and in a few moments the train left the depot. As the cars go up the road they signal their progress by ringing bells in the same office until they have got through the city streets, and thus give assurance of a clear track for all that may follow. The depot will contain twelve trains of thirteen cars each, and by means of this wonderful system they are all managed with dispatch and safety.

The February number of WOOD'S HOUSEHOLD MAGAZINE is really a marvel of what can be furnished for only one dollar a year; considering the cost and the quality this is the cheapest magazine which comes to our table. The magazine contains three engravings—a pretty house design—also the New York Fashions (illustrated) prepared expressly for the HOUSEHOLD by Mme. Demorest. The publisher announces that hereafter the magazine will always be illustrated. Subscriptions may begin with any number. Only one dollar a year, or with Chromo Vase premium, $1.50. Address WOOD'S HOUSEHOLD MAGAZINE, Newburgh, N. Y.

The January number of BLACKWOOD, just republished by the Leonard Scott Publishing Co., 140 Fulton Street, N. Y., contains the conclusion of "The Parisians," which adds one more to the list of Bulwer's charming novels. Another serial, "The Story of Valentine and his Brother," is commenced in this number, and promises to be a narrative of great interest. We also find the second number of "International Vanities," treating of "Forms." It tells of the wording of diplomatic and other documents and the languages in which they are written, is interspersed with quotations, showing the style of royal letters, treaties, etc., and is written with a touch of humor that makes it quite an amusing article. Then we have "John Stuart Mill—an Autobiography;" "Note relating to the Story of the missing Bills," an entertaining story itself; "A Piece of Heather," a little poem with a dash of sentiment; "The Indian Mutiny; Sir Hope Grant;" and an account of the "New-Year's Political Aspect." The increased size of the type is a decided improvement, making the page larger and handsomer, and still more closely resembling the original.

American Industries.

(Boston Daily Globe.)

To the rapid strides of American inventive genius is to be greatly ascribed our leading position among the most productive nations of the earth. Where labor in all departments is so well paid, it is necessary to call in improved machinery as an auxiliary, in order to compete with the cheap labor of foreign countries. Without our mowing, reaping and threshing machines, and other improved agricultural implements, the vast Western grain prairies would be slowly developed, and both hemispheres would miss a large portion of our present immense cereal crop. So in other industries, and in all mechanic arts, the work of the inventor simplifies the labor of production, and multiplies the products of industry many fold. The increase in the business of the United States Patent Office, within a few years, shows the exhaustless ingenuity that is being constantly concentrated upon the elimination of ideas that shall meet the popular want with articles of use and ornament, at prices within the reach of all.

Inventors often fail of securing a patent for really valuable articles through exercising too little care in the selection of a solicitor to transact their business with the Patent Office; and many are put to much needless expense in striving to secure letters patent for articles or designs either unpatentable in their nature or merely resuscitations of something heretofore patented. Mr. R. H. Eddy of Boston, whose card appears in our paper to-day, is thoroughly conversant with all details necessary to speedily procure foreign and American patents, while his experience and success for more than thirty years in the business give him the confidence of all. Those wishing to file caveats, procure patents, extensions, or secure trade marks and designs, will do well to avail themselves of his great research in drawing specifications and avoiding conflicting claims.

The Foremost Tonic of the Age.

Taking into consideration the character of its vouchers, the history of its cures and its immense annual sales, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters may be fairly entitled the Foremost Tonic of the Age. It is not only a tonic but a constitutional and local alterative, and its tendency is to substitute healthy for diseased action throughout the system. If the stomach is feeble and torpid it produces a vitalizing impression upon its mucous tissue. No sooner has the dyspeptic swallowed a dose of it than he knows by his sensations that his stomach has received an accession of vigor. It increases the desire for food and the ability to digest and assimilate it. If the liver is derelict, it improves the condition of the organ and imparts to it a new and healthful impulse. The bowels being obstructed, it promotes the flow of bile into the intestinal canal and thereby relieves them and re-establishes their natural action. Its effect upon the brain, the nerves and the kidneys is equally salutary. In short, it tones, alters and regulates the whole system.

Don't temporize with Piles.—Ointments, lotions, electuaries and all manner of quack nostrums are a waste of time and money. The only absolutely infallible cure for these painful diseases is ANAKESIS, discovered by DR. SILSBEE. It has been pronounced by scientific men as the happiest discovery made in medicine for 200 years; it affords instant relief from pain in the worst cases and has cured more than 20,000 sufferers permanently. All druggists prescribe it.—Price $1.00. Sold by druggists everywhere. Depot, 45 Walker st., New York.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver or "Biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. 708

Dr. Helmbold, the originator of Buchu, has the satisfaction of knowing that all his imitators have failed to produce the benefits which attend the use of Helmbold's Extl. Buchu cures. The others disappoint. Persons suffering from Kidney Complaint, Gravel, Premature Decay, Loss of Vigor or any souvenir of indiscretion, cannot apply the remedy too soon. The great point is to get the genuine Buchu Extract, which is Helmbold's and no other. For sale by all druggists.

VEGETINE is composed of the best vegetable ingredients the dispensary of Nature furnishes.

Special Notices.

Have you the Symptoms? Difficulty of breathing, a short, dry cough, a quick pulse, and pain in the left side are symptoms of approaching consumption. Outward applications are time and money thrown away. The only permanent cure is Dr. Harrison's Vegetable Lozenges. They strike at the cause. We could fill this paper with cures. They are pleasant, strengthening, and will not cost a cent for medicine. Decrease of dose. For elderly persons, females and children, and all sufferers, they are exactly suited to obviate Costiveness, the prolific cause of ill health. Trial box, 50 cts. Navy Yard Rambles.

Under the above heading a correspondent of the Nautical Gazette (one of the best papers, devoted to a special interest, in the country,) gives an interesting account of what he saw on a visit to the navy yard, from which we make the following extracts:

"Another reason induced me to think a visit to this Yard would be timely and interesting just now, which is, that the Government is trying an experiment in cheapening the cost of new ships for the navy. Two of the eight steam sloops last ordered by Congress to be built are here being constructed, one by the day system of labor, and another by contract in the Yard, the Government finding all the materials, and the contractor doing the work. * * * The labor of building the contract sloop in the Portsmouth Yard begins and ends at certain stages, and is at all times under the direction of the Naval Constructor of the Yard. In the two former instances of private ship-builders going into a navy yard to build a ship, special appointments were made to the Office of Naval Constructor, and the builders so appointed worked under the direction of the Bureau in Washington. Thus, Mr. George Steers, the famous yacht-builder, built the 'Niagara' at the Brooklyn Navy Yard; and Mr. John W. Griffiths, the distinguished author of works on ship-building, built the 'Pawnee' at the Philadelphia Navy Yard. The building of these remarkable ships by these gentlemen as naval constructors did not benefit the service materially. It is a system, and not men, that is wanted to improve the economy of the dock-yard service. The two steam sloops now building are of the following dimensions: length, 185 ft.; breadth, 35 ft.; depth, 16 ft. 2 in.; draft of water, 11 ft. The contractor for the labor of the one which is now farthest under construction, is Mr. John W. Griffiths, who built the 'Pawnee,' and who, more than forty years ago, served out his time as an apprentice in the Norfolk Navy Yard with the late constructor Francis Grice. Navy Yard work is not new business to Mr. Griffiths; and it was a rare spectacle to see the architect who had advocated so many reforms in his profession eclipse a whole lot of bidders for the building of a ship at his time of life, and carry off the contract on the merit of the lowest bid. * * The contract sloop is now about one-third completed. Before setting up the sloop of war immediately under the control of the Construction Department of the Yard, the reconstructed 'Marion' had to be launched, so that the second ship is only now having her frames erected. But the rate at which they are going up would be deemed incredible by those who had never seen a live Navy Yard. It would do an old tax-payer good to look upon the animation to be seen in the ship-house where Constructor Webb is building his sloop. Being unknown to this officer, in making my peregrinations about the Yard, and finding the most indubitable evidences on every hand of his energy and skill in the conduct of the business in his charge, I take great pleasure in stating the fact, that Portsmouth Navy Yard wears the most enterprising and truly business-like aspect of any Yard I ever visited. In the ship-houses, mills, machine shops, blacksmith shops, boat shops, and all places that I felt interested in visiting, it was all the same executive spirit which was seen and heard manifested. The blacksmith work of this Yard was the best I ever saw. Let the iron-work of the 'Marion' attest this high praise. Were Mr. Webb not master of the practice as well as the theory of his profession, he might well fear the consequences of having to build a ship in competition with a private contractor; but such is not the case, and there can be no doubt that he is in his element when engaged in proving by his works that he can turn off the best work, for the least cost, of any constructor in the service. I have been informed that he has built the Marion at a cost of about forty per cent. less than that of a certain ship of the same size constructed at another yard. When I visited Portsmouth Navy Yard the Construction Department was in charge of the very gentlemanly and very competent Assistant Constructor, Mr. Hichborn, Mr. Webb being ill. A business harmony prevails in the management of affairs, and the constructors, as well as the contractor, seem resolved that they shall deserve well of the Government."

Another correspondent of the same paper gives the following (and many other) particulars concerning the recently launched sloop-of-war "Marion:"

"Her registered measurement, new tonnage, is 910 tons. Her length, from fore side of rabbet of stem at 13 feet water line, to after side of forward stern-post, is 216 ft.; tread on the gun deck, 226 ft.; length from the knightheads to the taffrail, 234 ft., and over all 249 ft.; extreme breadth of beam, 37 ft.; and depth 19 ft. The workmanship of her hull outside and inside is excellent. Nothing seems to have been omitted. The ceiling is fayed to the frames with the exactness of jointed work. The beams, the knees, the stanchions, hatch coamings, bitts, ports, bulwarks and outside planking are turned out of hand in the best style of naval architecture. She will be a full rigged ship. Her motive power will consist of a pair of compound engines, being built at the Boston Yard, from plans furnished by the Bureau of Steam Engineering. The propeller is of composition, with 4 blades, and is 15 1-2 ft. in diameter; she has 10 cylindrical boilers, capable of sustaining a working pressure of 80 lbs. per square inch. These, when completed, will be sent to this yard, to be placed on board of her under the superintendence of Chief Engineers Williamson and Macomb. The propeller is not fitted to hoist, the theory of two blades having exploded from practical experience. The ship, like all naval vessels of the United States, will carry two suits of sails and extra studding sails, and will be fitted with wire rigging. Her armament will consist of eight 9-inch guns, one 11-inch Dahlgren gun and one 60-pounder rifle. The 'Marion' was designed by Chief Naval Constructor Isaiah Hanscom, and was built under the supervision of Naval Constructor Thomas E. Webb and Assistant Naval Constructor Philip Hichborn."

Washburn's Last Sensation.

Mr. Washburn returns with his variety troupe to-night. On Saturday evening, the company appeared at Lawrence. The Eagle says: "Washburn's Last Sensation" appeared on Saturday evening to the largest show audience for several months, if not since the hall was re-modelled. The hall, floor and galleries, was packed, and standing room was at a premium as we predicted. As informed, there were 1542 tickets sold, amounting to $678.40; probably as satisfactory a house and business as were ever accorded to a manager in this city. Large numbers went away, being unable to gain admission. Such was the rush about eight o'clock that the orchestra could not get in, and delayed the commencement some thirty minutes. The performance was entirely satisfactory, and was not concluded till twenty minutes to twelve. The programme was a variety one, and faithfully performed. The most notable feature, and which proved the drawing card, were the "Indians," whose appearance on the stage was the signal of much applause. The circumstances of their connection with the troupe were recounted by Mr. Washburn, after which the principal chief made a short speech, which was interpreted by Col. Green. The speech was in the true guttural dialect, accompanied with vigorous gesture. The Indians were dressed in red flannels, gaudily trimmed; and thrown over their shoulders with a royal grace were buffalo skins—overcoats by day, bedding by night. With faces streaked with paint, plenty of feathers in head, and moccasins, they were tolerable looking specimens of the red man.

Masonic Installation.

Wednesday was a red-letter day in the calendar of the Knights Templar of Portsmouth, the occasion being the installation of the officers of DeWitt Clinton commandery. The imposing ceremonies were conducted at Congress Hall, and were followed by a banquet and ball given in honor of A. R. Hatch, Esq., who retires from the position of Eminent Commander after a service of twenty-five years. The banquet hall and ball room were both handsomely decorated with bunting, and presented a beautiful appearance. The officers installed are as follows: Eminent Commander, John R. Holbrook; Generalissimo, W. Freeman; C. G., Philip Hitchborn; Prelate, John Christie; S. W., Charles W. Gardner; J. W., J. H. Cheever; Treas., W. N. Ilsley; Recorder., Jas. F. Jenness; Standard Bearer, D. G. Raitt; Sword Bearer, W. Porter Walker; Warder, Benj. F. Webster; Capts. of Guard, H. C. Walker, W. A. Peirce, Wm. A. Ashe; standing committee, T. E. O. Marvin, W. A. Peirce, Samuel S. Fletcher. Among the incidents of the evening was the presentation to the retiring Eminent Commander of a valuable Masonic jewel.

Laconics.

When the Came carriage factory was burned some time since, a carriage left for repairs was consumed. The administrator of the owner has brought a suit to recover damages, on the ground that as the repairs upon the vehicle were not finished at the time specified for their completion, the Cames are responsible for the loss.

The Biddeford Times mentions the rumor that Constructor Webb is to be superceded at the navy yard by Constructor Easby of the Norfolk yard.

Passed Assistant Paymaster Joseph Foster is ordered to duty on U. S. S. Shawmut.

The contract for the City printing as awarded to Mr. Brewster was at the rate of $2.80 per page, not $2.18,—$1.10 less per page than last year.

The Lynn Reporter trusts "that Capt. J. Albert Sanborn will gain as many friends in Lynn as he appears to have in the city he has just left." So say we, all of us.

The Times suggests that before we make any further attempt to prove it a "falsifier" regarding police officer Shannon we examine the city records, which show that the committee to whom was referred a charge against him did report. We are willing to take its word on that immaterial point, so we shall not examine the records to see what report was made,— and the Times does not say what it was, so we feel assured it was not unfavorable to the officer. As to charging our neighbor with being a "falsifier," in the article headed "policephobia," we intimated not that the Times had told untruths regarding the officer but that it had told just so much of the truth and in just such a manner as to put the worst possible construction on the affair; and we see no reason to alter that opinion.

The Italian Government has addressed a letter to the United States Government, giving the thanks of the King of Italy to Capt. P. C. Pope, U. S. Marine Corps, Lieut. T. B. Mason, and Midshipmen Gault and McLean for gallant and distinguished services rendered to an Italian merchant ship in the harbor of Callao, Peru, in June last. Captain Pope on Wednesday received a copy of the letter through the Secretary of the Navy.

—Rev. Charles L. Thompson of Chicago declined a call to Louisville, with a salary of $5000, acknowledging that the offer was a generous one, and that the feeling which inspired it was very grateful to him; but adding; "None of these things move me!" Promptly came back the telegraphic response: "We have voted $500 to move you and your furniture!"

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is prized for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Suicide from a Father's Brutality.

The last issue of the Wellsville (Mich.) Free Post gives an account of the suicide of Eugene Johnson, a lad thirteen years of age, of Niles Hill, near Wellsville. The boy and his sister, eleven years old, have always been objects of aversion to both parents, and have from infancy been subjected to the most inhuman treatment. It is said that the boy, failing at times to find the cows when he has been sent for them, has remained in the woods for nights and days together, rather than return to his home and undergo the excessive punishment which he knew would be inflicted. For weeks past he and his sister have been compelled to cut from two and one-half to three cords of wood per day with a cross-cut saw, under penalty of a severe beating. Last Sunday the parents went to a neighbor's to supper, leaving their children at home; but before going Johnson told the boy to water the horses. Returning to his house in the afternoon on some errand for the neighbor whom he was visiting, he ascertained that his instructions in regard to the horses had not been complied with, and at once commenced beating and abusing the boy in an outrageous manner.

When he became weary of torturing the child, he left the house and went back to finish his visit. Shortly after he left, the poor boy, according to his sister's statement, gathered up his playthings and put them away in a little box, and then went to the barn. Being gone a long time, the girl followed him to the barn, where she found him dead and hanging by the neck to a beam. Terribly grieved and frightened, the girl consulted with her brother until her parents returned, when her frantic screams attracted their attention, and her father soon arrived at the scene of the tragedy. Was he shocked? Did he cut down the lad and manifest as much sorrow as a tigress would for the loss of her young? Not by any means. He was not that kind of a man, to indulge in any such nonsense. Telling the girl to go home, he did up his chores, left the boy as he found him, closed the barn door, returned to his house, went to bed and slept the refreshing sleep of innocence! He then leisurely informed his neighbors of the occurrence, and they, eighteen hours after the suicide, cut down the cold and rigid body, prepared it for the grave, and in due time buried it.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron, in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in analyzing its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an iron Constitution.

Thousands have been cleansed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to try the trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal of large size from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

CATARRH!

A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years. Cured.

And Droppings in Throat, Chokings, Strangulings, Pains in the Side, Loins, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the

CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY.

TO MESSRS. LITTLEFIELD & CO., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.: I reside at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Henniker, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 10 years old; had it bad all the time. It run all that period, and nights it would fill up and drop down in my throat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I would spring up in bed to save myself from strangulation. It affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, back and limbs, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or coughs. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.

MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.

Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.

I am now 55 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, chokings and strangulings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.

Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left, Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

"Yes, she was beautiful. I tell you Philip, if Lucifer had fallen for the love of such a daughter of man, the angel that shared his glory would have envied his debasement. She was royally beautiful. Every look was a gleam of starlight, every smile a ray of heaven. Oh, yes! it's all well enough for you, Philip Philips, to sit there smiling at my fancies and calling me extravagant, and all that sort of thing but still I tell you that Clara Milbank was an escaped angel out of the land of light."

It was a winter night up the country. My friend, Stephen Wilson, had sent me a most urgent invitation to come on a visit and I had accepted it for the sake of the quiet. I knew that no one would disturb us there, and a day after I arrived a snow storm set in, and it blew until there was no fence, and scarcely a barn left visible around the house. The morning after the storm cleared off, we held a council and decided to forbid the breaking of the avenue road for a week, and it was a clear case that no visitors could ever approach through that pile of snow, varying from two to ten feet in depth, from the house to the gate. It was a barrier between us and the other world all sufficient, and we sat down in the library to our books and talk, and thoughts, with much of content and satisfaction.

We sat in front of a blazing fire, dinner was removed, and Stephen had commenced a conversation which I, not without a design, had led on to the point at which I have commenced this narration.

My friend was a man of 50, the proprietor of a fine estate, wealthy, and withal a lover of his ease. Having wherewithal to gratify his tastes, he did not think it wrong to pay liberally for pleasure and henceforth there were very few places in the city or country that could boast as complete furniture as his. A choice library, splendid rooms, horses, dogs, and every means of killing game and time you found at your service here, and among all these appliances we two were not at a loss in helping on the progress of the hours.

But there had always been a certain something in Wilson's way of speaking when we talked of the past, that led me to fancy there was a history concealed in his memory, that, once told, would throw light on many points in his character which I did not understand. It was when he had roused himself, or I had provoked him, to the emphatic declaration with which I have commenced, that I said to him, falling back in my chair, 'Tell me all about her, Stephen.'

He looked into my eyes. They expressed no great anxiety, nor yet any coldness. I feared to frighten him away from the subject with one, and to offend him too much by the other. I lifted the glass to my lips, and eyed him over the ruby rim. He fixed his gaze on me for an instant before he spoke.

'Clare Milbank was the daughter of the rector of the parish in which I was born. It was far from here—very far. It was a country place not unlike this in many respects. The old church stood in a grove near the crossing of three roads, and a hundred yards from it was the farm house, deep among trees and vines, which was the rectory. In it for many years, my father's counseller, friend and companion, Henry Milbank, had lived, and from its vine covered door he had carried out his Clara—the beloved of his younger years, who had slept on his heart for almost a score of years, had carried her out to a grave in the churchyard under the morning trees. From his window he could look to her grave, and there, for ten years he never failed to sit at the hour of sunset, and look and long for the hour when he too, having been carried out even as she, should be permitted to pass through the churchyard to the upper sanctuary wherein she was now worshipping.

'His daughter was a fair child, at those early years when children first begin to be interesting; and I remember well, when I was a boy of ten and she a girl of six, that I thought her the veriest beauty in all the world. And so she was, with one, and only one exception. She had a cousin, Philip, whose name you have never heard me mention—have never heard mentioned in this world; whose name has never been uttered on the cold winds of earth since—since—but no matter. I know not what impels me to a different course to-night. I feel a strong desire, instead of the reluctance I have usually felt, to speak of these things, and I will even yield to it. I do not believe that on the surface of the earth now there is one living being but myself who remembers the name of that radiant girl who was once so glorious in her young, glad beauty, and is now so utterly forgotten. She was the niece of the rector, yet no two persons could be more wholly dissimilar. The one was tall queenly and grand; the other was tender and exceedingly timid; the one had black and flashing eyes; the other's were blue and gentle. In all respects unlike they were nevertheless bound to each other by a love that was more than the love of a sister and that even surpassed the love of man for woman.

'Philip, I loved Lily Ray. From boyhood I loved her. Not all the magnificent beauty of Clare could win me from her cousin. I dreamed of her all day and all night. I sought opportunities of meeting her. I carried to her all my boy treasures, and with them all the treasures my heart could bestow. Who could forget the long rambles in the forest; the seat by the rushing mountain stream; the evenings of summer beauty on the lake? Or who could wish to forget the long winter evenings when we sat by the blazing hearth and talked or dreamed, or heard the rector tell stories of his youth, or wove fabrics of air and dream-stuff for these years that we now live in so coldly, Philip? These years, how close behind me now they appear!

'Well, I left home. This is a dull story, Philip. Be patient; you shall come to the point at length. I left home for school, and in my vacations, twice a year, returned to my home, and met always the glad welcome of my friends at the rectory. My father died during the first year of my college course, and before I graduated I was twenty-one and heir to his large property.

During the four or five years of my school and college course, I had never for an instant thought of any other future than that which my boyish fancy had pictured when I sat by the rector's fireside on the winter evenings of my younger days. And yet, strange as it may seem to you, I had never mentioned to Lily my hopes, nor had I given her distinct intimation of my love. You wonder at this; so do I. It was not till afterwards that I thought of it myself, and then I was too late—too late. They were both more like sisters to me than friends. We had studied together many years, and had lived from childhood in constant intimacy, but I never doubted that she knew my love. It seemed so perfectly natural, so much my whole life, that I thought it always evident, above all things, on my actions and on my lips. It was, therefore, a terrible blow to me when I returned from my last term in college, flushed with no few honors, expecting their congratulations first of all, to learn that Lily was absent from the rectory and might never return. Such a possibility I had never before thought of—nor had any of them. Her father had so long permitted her to remain in her uncle's family that she had become as much a part of it as Clare herself, and it was like taking away his daughter from the rector, and her sister from Clare, when Mr. Ray made his appearance and said that Lily must go with him to be mistress of his house in the city. In vain she strove, protested, begged. In vain the rector and Clare implored and demanded. He was a stern, cold man, and he came and went, and with him vanished one of the lights of the rectory, and when I came home it was the saddest welcome of a stricken house. For some days after that Clare and I talked and planned what we would do. We would go and storm the city house of Mr. Ray. We would do a hundred things that at length resolved into going together (with the rector) to the city to see her, and so we all went.

'She was not at home.' So said the servant again, and again, and again, as we repeated our calls at the door. We left our cards and the name of the hotel, but she did not come. We called in the evening and received the same answer. Philip, we are green and simple people, and did not know that this phrase had other meaning than the words expressed.

But the next day I met her in the street, and she sprang toward me, and then shuddered and looked round her as if she feared that some one saw her.

'O, Stephen! where—where are they all?'

'At the —— Hotel.'

'Here in New York.'

'Of course. Did you not receive our cards?'

'Your cards?'

'We called four times yesterday.'

'Stephen, I am a prisoner—my father is'—and here she burst into tears even in the broad street of the city.

It all came out soon. Her father was a scoundrel who had been glad to be rid of the care of her for the years of her childhood, but when he found she was a beautiful woman had thought it worth his while to take her to the great city to be mistress of his house, and a greater attraction to call those into his society whom he desired to entrap and deceive.

But she was too pure for his purposes, and he found that there was no hope of making her useful unless he could reduce her moral character nearer his own level. I will not believe, I never did believe, that he designed to wrong her, or that he would have consented to debase her to the level of those women who sometimes formed a part of the evening company in his house. He had some sense of shame, some reverence for the holiness of her mother left. His idea was not to destroy, but only to sully the purity of her character—not to make her bad, but only to make her to look without a shudder on sin. But to accomplish this, he must detach her from her former associates and above all, from the old rectory. So he threw every obstacles in the way of the reunion of these bonds which he had so rudely sundered.

It happened somewhat curiously that on the same day that I met Lily in the street, I met an old servant of my father, a man who had lived with us from childhood, and who was discharged with a legacy from my father on his death. I had no knowledge of his whereabouts, but now learned that he was in the employment of Mr. Ray. Having been engaged but a few weeks previously, he had just begun to find out the character of his master, when I begged him to serve me by remaining a little longer. I had a plan in my brain for the rescue of the fair girl, which I had matured in the half hour since I met her on the street, but which the meeting with David seemed to make perfectly feasible.

I need not pause to relate to you how the rector sought and obtained an interview with his unworthy brother-in-law, or how he failed. We were not a sad party, for we were too indignant for that, when we returned to the country. All our passions were aroused, and when we reached home we had an excited conversation in the midst of which, with characteristic impetuosity, I revealed my plan.

We were seated in the old house, in the chief room; the room that had been for many years the scene of our happiest hours. Where the golden sunshine all day long found its way to the carpet through the branches of vines that overhung the windows, the showers of soft and gladdening light—where the cheerful hearth-blaze all the evening made candles useless, while we sat and talked, or sang, or (as I have said before) dreamed, for we dreamed much, all of us—we were all dreamers. I remember well that Clare stood near the west window, into which the last twilight rays were streaming. She had just finished some furious sentence about her uncle, and her eyes were flashing with indignation. Mr. Millbank was seated in his chair in the corner, listening with a smile, that I could see through the gloom, at the earnestness of his beautiful child, and I was walking swiftly up and down.

"Sir, will you help me to marry her?"

'Clare sprang with a bound to the middle of the room and looked at me. The rector rose from his seat and took my hand in his.

"Are you serious, my boy?"

"Most certainly I am.

"Then if God helps you I will, and we will be happy again. Is it not a grand thought, Clare?"

'But Clare had vanished.

'Then we arranged it all. We had learned that they were going to Ballston in a few days, and we arranged to go on and meet them. The meeting was to be accidental, and we accomplished it precisely as we had intended.

'Clare led her the first evening from the crowd in the saloon and on the piazza to the darkest corner of the colonnade, and here, for the first time, I approached her.

'Philip, I cannot tell you of that interview; it is recorded somewhere in the book that is sacred to the record of those hours in man's life which, more than all others, stamp him for immortality. It was an hour that you may see written here on my forehead, here on my gray hair. I was an old man then, for she told me my hopes were in vain—I must forbid them henceforth.

Men talk of love as they talk of money. Men write of love as they write of travels, of pleasure, or pains. Some men laugh at love; but such men in their inmost hearts, abhor and curse themselves for the words they utter, and lie in lonesome places among the beautiful things of existence, and perish of thirst on the banks of the purest fountain that flows into the river of life.

The memory of that beautiful woman as she stood before me, with her white hand laid on my shoulder and her deep blue eyes fixed on mine, for their light was in my brain and soul, that memory will not perish so long as I have my eyes or soul here or hereafter. I bowed my head and wept, and she never shed one tear. I implored and she was calm. 'No, no, no,' that terrible word was reiterated again, and again, and again.

'And what shall I do, whither shall I go for hope on earth?' said I.

And she came close to me, Philip, as I stood with my head bent forward, and she put her arms around my neck and whispered: 'Love Clare, Stephen!' and her lips were on mine one thrilling instant—and she was gone.

And Clare stood ten paces from me, with her head bowed over the rail; and when it was all over, I staggered towards her, she took my hands in hers, and held them in a close clasp, and said but one word:

'Stephen!'

'My sister Clare!'

And then she wept. I never saw her weep before, and now it was but a moment, and she drew me away and I obeyed her.

More than a year passed with the swiftness of thought, and I had never left the seclusion of my country home. My own house and the rectory, those were the two places between which my path now lay, and beyond which it did not reach. Clare left home in the early autumn to spend the winter in the city. During the year after my parting from Lily it would be vain to deny that I often recurred to her last words sealed as they were with that last thrilling kiss; when I looked into the face of beautiful Clare, it did not seem so very difficult to obey. In the middle of December, I was called to the city by peremptory business, and went, leaving my home with reluctance, and intending to return in a week.

'I found my business more perplexing than I had anticipated, and after a few days I determined to look up Clare. Relying on my intimacy to pardon an evening call, I went at a late hour one evening and found myself in a crowded room, having as I now found, stumbled on an evening party. I did not retreat, for the home of my sister's friend was one of my old homes in old times, and I was not disappointed in my reception.

'Clare was the centre of a brilliant circle, and at home as a queen among her subjects. I believe that a thrill of momentary jealousy passed over me as I saw her—a sort of regret that she who had seemed always to belong to me, should now be, in some sense, the property of the world, and I looked swiftly over the circle to see if there was any one there on whom she would be likely to waste one of her royal smiles. But she sprang toward me with such manifest joy in every feature, and gave me such a welcome that my foolish jealousy, if it existed, was gone on the instant, and I was the envied man of the night by all the hangers-on in the saloons of the fascinating Mrs. Whitney.

'The hours sped swiftly with dance and song. It was near midnight when I stood with Clare in the library room at the rear of the saloons, while all the party were down in the supper rooms. A servant entered with a note, saying that it had been brought by a man, now at the street door, with urgent haste. Stop, I will get the note.'

'Wilson crossed the room, opened a desk and a private drawer, and returned, bringing in his hand a small yellow note, stained with that ineffacable stain—ineffacable from paper, cheek or heart of man—the trace of tears.

'They are not my tears, Phillip. They are Clare's.'

"Clare, Clare, come to me before I die. David will bring you. Do you know, Clare, where Stephen is? Send him word to come, to come quick, quick, Clare, for I fear—I hope—yes, I hope I shall not see the morning! But come to-night, Clare, if you would see me, for God knows whether I shall see Christmas morning.

'LILY.'

'We were wrapped in cloaks, and at the front door in an instant.

'You here, David?'

'Yes, sir, I have left Miss Lily since you told me to stay with her.'

'He led us up one street and down another, until we came to an obscure street, running northwest from Broadway to the North River, and to a house half way down this at which he paused and knocked.

'Who's there?'

'The doctor and a nurse.'

'The door was opened and we entered.

'I did not know then, as I have since known, the appearance of the splendid room into which we passed. It was a hell. You know what that is. The upper portion of the house was devoted to the private rooms of Mr. Ray and his family. The lower part was arranged in gambling rooms gorgeously furnished, in which we heard the sounds of the money on the boards, and the quick commands of the banker, succeeded by the silence that awaits the turn of the card. Passing through the hall and a sort of reception room, we ascended a broad flight of stairs and entered the room that was dark and gloomy, and unmistakably the abode of sickness.

'Have you come, dear Clare?'

'I have, and have brought Stephen with me.'

'There was a strange half cry, half sob from the bed, and I advanced toward it.

'Philip, in that dim light I saw the radiance of Heaven again, and over it was the very light of God, into the outer circles of which she was already passed, and into the central glory of which she was soon to be gone.

'Shall I tell you all the horrible story she now told us? How she had been compelled to preside at the foul feasts that her father gave; how she had been forced to admit the presence of gamblers and harlots; how night after night she had striven with indescribable agony to induce her parents to abandon the terrible life, and all in vain. You will ask why she clung to it; why she did not abandon it forever? I will tell you, Philip.

'I will tell you of a love high as Heaven—deeper and broader than the sea that rolls all around the world.

'She sent Clare out for a moment, and then she told me all.

'Philip, she loved me with unutterable love. Yes, I knew that before. But once, once in the last spring-time of our happy home in the rectory, one holy evening when Clare had been moved by her gentle cousin's loveliness to speak as never before of her own soul, she had learned that Clare, my noble sister Clare, loved me with more than a sister's love. Yes, she told me all, and she henceforth shut up the fountain of her soul and laid a stone on the mouth, a heavy stone, to keep back the flood forever.

'This was why she consented to go with her father, and in this resolution she gave herself up, soul and body, to a hope that she might make her mission on earth the reform of her father, and the reunion of all of us in later years in some happy home that she dreamed of as distant but sure.

'But now the end came, and hope was gone, and love, human love was triumphant.

'She could not die without seeing me once more, and spite of her father's commands, spite of all her agony, spite of all her woman's shame, she told me all, and in the moment of our parting I knew what a great flood of love, pure, holy love, God had forbidden to flow over the gardens of my life, but had commanded into the channels that make glad the eternal city. She was going to heaven with all that love that might have been mine, and I could but hope that sometimes in starry nights I might move my forehead to the sky, and feel the far-off spray, some blessed drops out of that deep, strong flood.

'And then Clare came back, and we sat down, side by side, and held her hand in ours, and the swift moments of her life ran out.

'She never told Clare her love; mark that, my friend. That glorious creature never told Clare one word; never hinted to her of what we had spoken in the hour that she had been absent; and she never knew that Lily loved me.

'The doctor came in toward morning, and was startled at the change he found in his patient. He told her she was dying, and she heard him calmly and looked at me with one long, longing gaze, and closed her eyes on us for a moment, and opened them again with the soft radiance of the land of angels in their light.

'Once, only once, she took my hand in hers, and drew me down to her, and whispered in a low, soft whisper, 'I love you, Stephen,' and a light, as if of the glory of triumphant love, flashed on her countenance, and then a little later she took my hand, and placing Clare's in it, she said to each of us:

'Kiss me, Clare; kiss me, Stephen.'

'And Clare kissed her, and I touched my earthly lips to her saintly lips, and with the last kiss, the last breath of life, she whispered:

'Love Clare, Stephen.'

'And her life, that she had laid down for her friend, God took and made immortal life thereof in the gardens of his land.

'Philip Philps, for fourteen years after that time Clare laid upon my breast, my faithful, loving and devoted wife, and then I laid her glorious head low in the valley dust down yonder. The snow to-night lies deep on both their graves, and I am here. What am I that such women should have loved me? What am I that God should have permitted such treasures to be poured out on me? What are these lips that the kisses of such affection should have been pressed upon them? These arms that they should have been permitted to enfold such forms of beauty?

'Sometimes when I ask myself these questions I begin to doubt the past, and to think that the old rectory and its beloved inhabitants are all a dream. But at such times I come into this room and draw that curtain yonder, and then I know that I am a man, and that the years have not deceived me. No, I am no dreamer now.'

As he finished he drew the curtain from a picture that hung before us on the wall. It was a picture of two faces; I saw only the faces; and if I live a thousand years I shall not again see two so beautiful on canvas or on earth.

A Contented Farmer.

The Merrimack County (N. H.) Agricultural Society celebrated its semi-centennial anniversary last week, and at one of its meetings Gen. McCutchins, the Republican nominee for Governor of the State, was among those requested to tell what they could about their own experience in farming. The Manchester Mirror's report shows that, after some introductory remarks, he said that thirty-two years ago he bought a farm of Gov. Colby for $2,150. It was situated on that cold ridge of land which was as famous for cold as any except those farmed by Dr. Kane. He had tilled the farm since, and it had paid. He was surprised to hear such gloomy talk as he had heard this morning from men who had made fortunes on a farm. Such statements as were made by them needed analyzing. They might be truth, but they were not the whole truth. It is of no benefit to the farmer to always talk about oppression, for people know it is not true. There may be inequalities in taxation, but there is no oppression, and when he heard such talk he asked himself, Would these same farmers change places with merchants or bankers, or the men shut up in the shops? He thought not. "Why, gentlemen," said the General, "I would not quit farming to be made Governor of New Hampshire." He once got uneasy and went West to Kansas. He found there unharvested crops late in November, a lack of barns and almost of houses. He thought it a lazy, shiftless country. The men who emigrated thither from the East were workers, but their children were lazy. They would ride into the towns from their farms, and sit, as if too lazy to dismount. Let grumblers go West: but, as for him, he never loved New Hampshire hills so well as when he returned from that Western journey, and he felt like singing, "Give me back my native hills, rough and rugged though they be. Cheer up, farmers," he said "get out from under the clouds. If you can't get a living here, come up to New-London hills; you can flourish there. We shall never get our rights by grumbling." The General, in reply to a question, said that when he bought his farm, it cut fifteen tons of hay, and now fifty, yearly.

A Scared Lot of Darkies.

There is a station on the Selma and Meridian Railroad named Cuba. A few nights since, as the train with an emigrant agent and a crowd of freedmen going West, reached this point, the brakeman put his head inside the car-door, and sung out, "Cuba!" One old darkey rose, and as his wool straightened out, said: "Dar! 'fore God, I know'd it! Heah we is in Cuba, an' dat ar' white man gwine to put us in de war, or sell us 'fore day. O of! I'se gwine from heah." And he, with about thirty more loped off into the woods, leaving the agent to use big words about Cuba, brakeman, and the uncertainty of the "nigger."

PEABODY MEDICAL INSTITUTE

NO. 4 BULFINCH STREET, BOSTON.

When a thing is counterfeited, it is a proof of its excellence and popularity. The Peabody Medical Institute is a case in point. Founded in good faith many years ago, and the only establishment of the kind in the country, its success and ever-increasing popularity finally caused the name (Medical Institute) to be pirated and adopted by a lot of infamous quacks, empirics and pretenders, who have been endeavoring to cheat the public by sailing under a stolen flag. The founder of the Peabody Medical Institute can in no way be held responsible for this misuse of the name of a reputable and well-known curative establishment and legitimate medical institution, which has been from the start specially devoted to the treatment of nervous derangements and affections, from whatever causes proceeding. During its existence there have been issued from several medical publications; quite recently a work on Diseases of the Nervous System, which have had almost a world wide circulation and popularity. These publications sufficiently attest the high character of the institution under whose patronage these medical works have been published. Meantime it is gratifying to know that several of the impudent charlatans, who have stolen its name to cover their nefarious practices, are getting their deserts in the penal institutions of the Commonwealth.—Boston Herald.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court convened:

Section 1. That the State is authorized to issue bonds payable within twenty years, at a rate of interest not exceeding six per cent. per annum payable semi-annually, which bonds, or their proceeds, shall be devoted exclusively toward the reimbursement of the expenditures incurred by the cities, towns, locations or grants of the State, for war purposes during the rebellion, upon the following basis: Each city, town, location or grant shall receive from the State one hundred dollars for every man furnished for the military service of the United States, under and after the call of July second, one thousand and eight hundred and sixty-two and accepted by the United States for the term of three years, and in the same proportion for every man so furnished and accepted for whatever period, and the same shall be in part payment for any claim upon the State on account of its war debts, by any such city, town, or location.

Section 2. The amount to be paid to each city, town, location or grant shall be the same as fixed by a commission appointed by the Governor and Council for 1870 and 1871 to carry into effect an act of similar import.

Section 3. This act to take effect and be in force from and after its passage.

The foregoing is a true copy of said bill, and of the order of notice thereon; and the same is published agreeably to said order.

Clerk of the House of Representatives.

Local Matters.

Laconics.

Mr. D. Horace Holman has been elected Auditor of the city of Lewiston.

Daniel C. Norton of Kittery, is erecting a dwelling house of two stories, with French roof, on Main street in that village.

One hundred and ninety persons sat down at the Masonic supper, Wednesday night.

Col. John L. Lawrence, an old and well known citizen of Kittery, is lying in a helpless condition at his residence in that place, from the effect of a paralytic shock.

An unusual interest is prevalent in the Methodist church in Kittery, under the ministration of Rev. C. C. Mason. This society during his pastorate has greatly increased in numbers and interest.

Rev. George Moore Payne, formerly pastor of the Baptist church in Kittery, is now supplying the Baptist church in Newburyport, Mass.

The Times retires from its dirty insinuations about officer Shannon without doing the latter justice.

This evening, Rev. G. W. Christie, pastor of the Congregational church at Kittery Point, will deliver a lecture at the Austin school house on Scenes in Italian Cities, as seen by him last year during a four months' tour in Europe. The proceeds of the lecture go to purchase an organ for the school.

A correspondent says the piece of well preserved silk which has been on exhibition at the popular dry goods store, said to be worn by the wife of the first Governor of New Hampshire, was the dress of Anna Morrell Hauntress, wife of Joshua Lang Hauntress who died in 1847, and is now in possession of her granddaughter. It was never worn by the former lady.

The Warm Spring Indians

Created a sensation about town, Thursday, and visited the newspaper offices, attended by Mr. J. H. Campbell, the agent who visited the Rocky Mountains last July to secure the Indians for Mr. Washburn's party, and Col. Green, the interpreter, whose life has been spent among them. Mr. Washburn may well feel repaid for his efforts, for the old Temple was crowded in the evening, every cranny and nook being occupied. It was big invitation for Washburn to come again.

Readables.

A woman was at the bottom of the embezzlement at Jersey City. Hamilton has been intimate with Winetta Montague, the woman who was married by Walter Montgomery. The latter on learning of her character committed suicide.

Mrs. Henry W. Genet, wife of the Harlem forger, has secured a passage for Europe. It is now well known by the fugitive's friends that he has succeeded in making a safe asylum on the other side of the Atlantic, where the international law of extradition does not exist. Mrs. Genet, it is said, will proceed direct to Belgium to join her husband.

David White, twelve years old, hung himself with a book-strap, Wednesday, in New York.

Professor I. F. Holton, of Everett, at one time professor of chemistry and botany in Middlebury College, died suddenly on Sunday. He had been a traveller in his day, and seems to have been a gentleman of considerable literary culture. He was connected at different times with the Recorder, the News and the Globe. His last article for the Globe was upon cremation and the disposal of the body after death. It closed with these words: "As for me, let my body rest in the bosom of the earth, with the green turf above it, sprinkled with snow-drops and violets." The Professor was at the time apparently in his usual health, but forty-eight hours after the appearance of this article, he was dead.

The bridge now being constructed for the P. S. & P. R. R. at Saco is to cost $37,500. Cars commenced running over it on Thursday.

The experiment of tea-growing in California is said to promise success. The climate of a large part of the tea district of China finds a parallel in that of the central southern States, and there seems to be no reason why Hyson and Bohea should not come from old cotton and rice fields. The necessity for ocean transportation would be done away with, and the native fragrance of the leaf would thus be preserved. Tea exhausts the soil less than either cotton or tobacco.

Seven persons are reported at the point of death in Aurora, Indiana, the consequence of eating pork containing trichina.

Gen. Maxey, democrat, has been chosen U. S. Senator from Texas.

The investigation of matters in the District of Columbia is liable to create as much of a sensation as the Credit Mobilier. Some of the parties engaged in the latter swindle are in for a second exposure.

Three little boys, eight to ten years old, were found the other night in a back-yard in Newburyport, dead drunk and perishing with cold. One of them was barely saved by strenuous efforts of the physician. They stated that they drank three half pints of rum, bought of Ellen Bresnehan, who has till now defied all effort to convict her of selling. She was tried in that city, and awarded fine and imprisonment to the extent of the law, the judge lamenting that he could not impose a more severe sentence.

Waite--Guppy.

[Advertiser.]

It turns out that it wasn't the President who suggested Judge Waite; it was Guppy (euphonious title) and he is editor of the Portsmouth (N. H.) Times. While not disposed to be at all stuck up about it, Guppy claims that it was in his massive brain that the suggestion originated, and he published it in "the hope that Gen. Grant would leave one bright spot on retiring from the Presidency." Good for Guppy. Give him a Consulship.

Business Notices.

The Foremost Tonic of the Age.

Taking into consideration the character of its vouchers, the history of its cures and its immense annual sales, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters may be fairly entitled the Foremost Tonic of the Age. It is not only a tonic but a constitutional and local alterative, and its tendency is to substitute healthy for diseased action throughout the system. If the stomach is feeble and torpid it produces a vitalizing impression upon its mucous tissue. No sooner has the dyspeptic swallowed a dose of it than he knows by his sensations that his stomach has received an accession of vigor. It increases the desire for food and the ability to digest and assimilate it. If the liver is derelict, it improves the condition of the organ and imparts to it a new and healthful impulse. The bowels being obstructed, it promotes the flow of bile into the intestinal canal and thereby relieves them and re-establishes their natural action. Its effect upon the brain, the nerves and the kidneys is equally salutary. In short, it tones, alters and regulates the whole system.

Don't temporize with Piles.—Ointments, lotions, electuaries and all manner of quack nostrums are a waste of time and money. The only absolutely infallible cure for these painful diseases is ANAKESIS, discovered by DR. SILSBEE. It has been pronounced by scientific men as the happiest discovery made in medicine for 200 years; it affords instant relief from pain in the worst cases and has cured more than 20,000 sufferers permanently. All doctors prescribe it.—Price $1.00. Sold by druggists everywhere. Depot, 46 Walker st., New York.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver or "Biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. 708

Dr. Helmbold, the originator of Buchu, has the satisfaction of knowing that all his imitators have failed to produce the benefits his preparation insures. Helmbold's Ext. Buchu cures. The others disappoint. Persons suffering from Kidney Complaint, Gravel, Premature Decay, Loss of Vigor or any souvenir of indiscretion, cannot apply the remedy too soon. The great point is to get the genuine Buchu Extract, which is Helmbold's and no other. For sale by all druggists.

VEGETINE is composed of the best vegetable ingredients the dispensary of Nature furnishes.

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus beauty, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Office No. 35 Market Street.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

—How inventive Americans are is again shown in a peculiar way. A farmer in Tennessee had a jackass which was noted for its exceedingly powerful and peculiar voice. When this ass was in the right trim one could hear his "e-e-e-ah" miles away. This peculiarity led the animal's master to reflect. He had studied mathematics and physics, and also something of anatomy, and all this knowledge led him to the following proposition: If one can hear a jackass four miles off, one must hear one of a hundred-fold power four hundred miles away. If one also instead of a jackass should take a steam machine of a hundred jackass power, or what is about the same a hundred horse power, he could produce an instrument made in imitation of the vocal organs of said creature which could be heard four hundred miles away. No sooner said than done. The farmer slew his jackass, cut off his head and neck and studied the anatomy. He then made an exact imitation of this in clay which served as a model for an instrument of tin. This he fastened to a steam boiler. A fire was made, steam was produced, and then the critical moment arrived. The farmer turned on the steam. Fire streamed from the nostrils of the steam jackass, and after a tremendous sigh and an infernal grunt, came such a bray, such an annihilating, deafening, crashing "e-e-e-ah!" that all the women far and wide believed that Balaam's ass had been resurrected in order to announce the judgemnt day. The experiment was successful. The farmer took his horse and buggy and drove away in order to find how far off the steam jackass had been heard. The newspapers have not yet announced his turning back, so we may infer that the noise was heard to the end o the world.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, enriching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERVILIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be stamped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

CATARRH!
A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years, Cured.
And Droppings in Throat, Choknigs, Stranglings, Pains in the Side, Loins, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the
CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY.
TO MESSRS. LITTLEFIELD & CO., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.:
I resided at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Henniker, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 19 years old; I had had all the time. It run all that period, and nights it would fill up and cover me in a profuse sweat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I would spring up in bed to save myself from strangulation. It affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were my kidneys, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.
MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.
Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.
I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, chokings and stranglings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.
Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left. Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

Dreams Never Come True.

The women about Evansville are good dreamers. In olden times they would have been regarded as prophetesses, but in these matter-of-fact days they are only empty dreamers. Some time since a watch was stolen, and a woman had a dream which led directly to the recovery of the watch and the arrest of the thief. This was thought to be a remarkable accident. More lately a woman dreamed that a stranger came to her house and asked for a night's lodging. It was given him, but before retiring he slipped his shoes outside the door. In the morning the stranger was gone, and also a considerable sum of money. The woman wakened her husband, told her dream, and she was laughed at, as usual. She dreamed it thrice the same night. Some weeks after this her husband had been down to town and brought out to his home a good sum of money. In the evening a stranger applied for a night's lodging, and was given a good supper and put to bed in one of the upper rooms. Before the lady retired—with the dream in her mind—she opened the door, and outside she found a pair of shoes in the precise position of the shoes in her dream. She then recalled all the vivid particulars of her vision. The man was all over the thief of her dream. She showed her husband the shoes, and again reminded him of what she had told him that night when he laughed at her so. He now thought there might be something like a warning in it all, so he loaded his double-barreled shot-gun and watched in the room where the treasures were. About midnight, sure enough, the stranger came creeping down stairs with a dark-lantern in his hand, and began to make a critical examination of the premises. One of the first discoveries he made was the man of the house, sitting with a gun in his hands, keeping guard over his household gods. He told the stranger to leave, and the stranger left. He put on his shoes outside the door and quietly walked away. The woman crowed all the rest of the night. The ungrateful brute told her, however, that dreams never came true, no more did hers, for the man did not get the money.

How to Beautify our Faces.

[Hearth and Home.]

We may pretend that it is otherwise, but we are all interested in our faces; and yet we treat them as badly as we do many other things in which we are deeply but ignorantly interested. The count nances of a nation define the characteristics of its people. Every human face indicates the moral training as well as the temperament and the ruling traits of its owner, just as much as any human form indicates the quality and amount of its physical exercise. This is proved by the varieties of human faces everywhere visible. Those whose whole lives have been given to physical labor, unbrightened by an education of ideas, have always a stolid, stupid expression, even while their limbs and muscles are splendidly developed. The more savage a people, the uglier they are in facial development. The very features of their faces are disfigured by violent and ungovernable passions. People whose employments are intellectual invariably have a large, clear gaze, a bright out-raying expression, as if from inward light shining through a vase. Where a fine organization and deep sensibility accompany the practice of intellectual pursuits, often the features take on a transparent luminous look. Persons endowed with powerful sensibility, however plain the features, always have moments of absolute beauty. "My sister in-law is plain," said one lady of another, who possessed such a countenance, "but I have seen her so absolutely beautiful at times that she drew everybody in the room toward her. When she is very happy her face kindles with an absolute radiance." The refining effects of high culture, added to deep religious feelings, not only subdue evil passions, but beautify and elevate the entire expression and bearing of an individual. Thus it is a physical as well as a moral fact, it is in the power of every person to improve his own beauty as well as bearing by a constant control of passion and temper and a deep and constant cultivation of the intellectual faculties, pure affections and the moral nature.

It is a physical as well as spiritual fact that the concentration of desire upon one object of thought, upon a single subject, shows itself in some feature of the face as distinctly as it stamps its effect upon the character. This is why we see so many distorted and almost deformed faces, so few symmetrical and spiritually beautiful ones. Comparatively few have the desire, and fewer still have the leisure, to cultivate that harmony of thought and temper which is sure to shine forth from within, and harmonize every feature. Worry and struggle, care and fret, bustle, hurry, and wearing-out ambition make the law of average American life. It all shows in our poor faces—in our sharp, eager, restless, weary, unhappy faces. Look about you on a ferry boat crossing the river near the standard dinner hour. It is more than the want of dinner that gives that hungry look to eleven out of every twelve mouths that you see homeward bound. It is the consuming care, the ever-repeated never-ending daily care; it is the struggle to live, the curse of the want of money, and the curse of ever-craving, unsatisfied wants—physical, affectional, spiritual—which have seamed and scarred those faces, and made those sunken eye-sockets the craters of burned fires. Don't say "Never mind about the faces!" We all mind about our faces, and we mind very much about the faces that we see. It may be too late to make our own very beautiful, though never too late to beautify them; but it is not too late to serve the next generation through the souls and faces of our children.

Kitchen Medicine.

Dr. J. S. Cohen, lecturer in the Jefferson Medical College, contributes a long and interesting paper under this title to the Philadelphia Medical Times. As he remarks in his introduction to the subject, "resources of a modern kitchen are so vast, that with due attention to them, at least in the more ordinary forms of disease, or ailments rather, which form the bulk of a physician's practice, the intelligent practitioner can often practice therapeutics without drugs." He would not ignore the remedical value of drugs, which of course are demanded in many cases; but he nevertheless thinks "it is well now and then to have our attention directed to agents which are apt to be overlooked because they are so familiar, and undervalued because they are easy of access." The following extract from the "practical" part of the paper mentions the more important of these household materia medica:

Dilutents are often called for in the practice of medicine, and many of the articles used for this purpose owe most of their benefits to the water in which they are administered; and water alone, impregnated, it may be, with some kitchen remedy—current jelly, or even barley, for example, in simple erythematous sore throat,—will be just as valuable in many instances as a pharmacentic extract. Emetics are often called for, and in many cases mustard-and-water is just as valuable as sulphate of zinc or copper, or tartar-emetic, and so on, and sometimes more so. In cases of severe cramp in the intestines, dry heat applied from the door of a range or furnace, taken off and wrapped in folds of flannel to protect the skin, will often give prompter relief than a dose of opium. The mustard-plaster, so much in vogue and so very efficient as a topical remedy in many affections, is a familiar example of the value of kitchen medicine. The use of table-salt in restraining haemoptysis, and even the use of oil of turpentine, may be instanced as further examples. Cayenne pepper will do as good service in certain affections, as in bowel complaints, or used as a gargle in sore throat, or taken in spirits of some kind as a preventive of the deleterious effects of exposure to malaria, as many other remedies more frequently prescribed. Vinegar comes in use as a local application very often; it is good to impregnate a sponge, to allay excessive action in the skin in fevers and in the sweats of hectic. It is often as good internally, in some form or other, as other acids, mineral as well as vegetable, to assist digestion in certain varieties of dyspepsia. It is often as good an ingredient in a gargle as any other acid, and very often the best inhalation that can be given in certain inflammatory conditions of the respiratory passages. Salt and water is an excellent tonic to the skin; an efficient laxative in moderate costiveness, judicious managed, better often than any saline purge; the very best and least injurious substance to use in the nasal douche to detach the accumulated secretion of certain forms of catarrhal inflammations of the nasal passages. Spices of various kinds are splendid carminatives internally administered, and, quilted between folds of flannel, they form an excellent bandage to be worn over the abdomen of patients subject to bowel complaints. Dry salt similarly quilted between folds of flannel, and heated before a fire, retains heat a long time, and is an excellent application in painful conditions of the bowels. Cucumbers, cabbage, tomatoes, fruits of various kinds, properly selected, unbolted flour, milk, calves' brains, sweet-breads, oysters, terrapins, certain kinds of fish, and other articles of ordinary or occasional diet, contain certain ingredients, in far better elaboration than the skill of the pharmacist can prepare, which can often be utilized for supplying deficiences in the economy in the treatment of chronic disease. Milk, lard and sweet oil applied to bruises, to harsh skins, or used for anointing the body in scarlet fever and the like, are often of the greatest value. In chronic ulcerative laryngitis entailing dysphagia, the preliminary deglutition of a little sweet oil will often protect the parts from the mechanical irritation of food, and render swallowing more efficient and less painful.

A Big Money-Chest.

The Bank of England covers five acres of ground and employs nine hundred clerks. There are no windows on the street. Light is admitted through open courts. No mob can take the bank therefore, without cannon to batter the immense walls. The clock in the centre of the bank has fifty dials attached to it. Large cisterns are sunk in the court, and engines in perfect order are always ready in case of fire. The bank was incorporated in 1694. Capital, $90,000,000.

Mr. S. S. Houghton of Boston, gave from $12 to $15 to each of the twenty-five or thirty girls in his employ, to reimburse them for the clothing which they lost in the late fire at his store.

The governor of Massachusetts, with advice of the council, has appointed Stephen R. Niles, Esq., of Boston, the well-known advertising agent, notary public for the county of Suffolk.

A new battery gun, invented by Col. J. F. Taylor of Tennessee, just completed at Colt's armory at Hartford, has been publicly and successfully tested. It fires 450 fusilade, or 700 volley shots a minute, and will concentrate shots at one centre, or spread them over 22 feet at a distance of 500 yards. It is probable that arrangements will be made for the manufacture of this formidable mitrailleuse at Colt's armory.

Mrs. Dr. Babb, of Eastport, Me., has been appointed Justice of the Peace. She is the third lady appointed to the office in that State.

Steamer Glaucus, of the Boston and New York freight line, was sunk in her dock in Boston, Friday, to put out a fire in the hold. She was full of cargo at the time.

The suits of the heirs of Captain Colvocoresses, who either committed suicide or was murdered in Bridgeport, Conn., against several life insurance companies for $190,000, have been settled, with one exception, by an agreement by the companies to pay one-half.

The Springfield Union is responsible for this: "Railroad men are always meeting with queer adventures, but one of the conductors on the southern road thinks a recent one of his a little ahead. Just before one of the midday trains was starting for New York, an elegantly dressed lady, (?) the wife of one of St. Louis' most prosperous merchants, came into the car with a great deal of parade, and, throwing herself into a seat, called out, "Conductor!" That personage at once appeared, when the woman said to him, with the greatest nonchalance, "Conductor, I wish you'd button my boots; I got drunk last night, and I haven't had time to dress yet." The conductor looked unutterable things, while the passengers smiled audibly."

State News.

A descent was made Thursday, in Keene, upon the Cheshire House, Eagle Hotel and the saloons of F. Pitts and Charles Drummer, and a quantity of liquors and implements of the trade seized in each place. The proprietors were arrested and brought before Justice Farrar, by whom they were bound over to the supreme judicial court for trial in two hundred dollars bonds each. It is said proof and papers are ready for the prosecution of other cases. There is considerable excitement on account of this decisive movement toward enforcing the prohibitory law.

H. Haraoker, a young Japanese, has gone to Manchester for the purpose of learning the machinist's trade at Blood's Locomotive Works. He has taken up the study of mathematics under the instruction of Jonathan Smith, the principal of the evening school.

One of the finest portraits of Daniel Webster extant, was on Monday forwarded to Phillips Exeter Academy by Hon. Peter Harvey, of Boston, president of the "Marshfield Club," who are the donors of this valuable gift. This portrait was painted by Joseph Ames, now deceased, who was one of our most eminent artists, and is pronounced by all who have seen it, as one of his finest productions.

A correspondent of the Claremont Advocate, who says the Republican and Prohibition platforms are so near alike he wishes "they could have been one," but yet declares his purpose to vote for Blackmer, has his inconsistency shown up by the Advocate in these queries: "What is the duty of all true, honest temperance men and prohibitionist.? Is it to throw away their vote on Mr. Blackmer, thus virtually giving it for license, or to vote for Mr. McCutchins, with the certainty of rescuing our grand little State from the curse with which she is now threatened. A word to the wise and candid in this connection is sufficient."

The Monitor says that "for a few weeks past it has been reported that a ghost was meandering the streets of Lancaster in the still hours of night, creating a great deal of talk and not a little terror among the good people of the village. Last Saturday night the ghostly visitant ran against something in his nocturnal wanderings, that must have impressed him rather unfavorably, for he has not been seen since. As Frank L. Colby was on his way to the post office, late at night, the supposed apparition appeared clad in white. Now Mr. Colby does not believe in ghosts, and commanded the intruder to stand back, at the peril of an introduction to a seven shooter, which he did with more agility than grace. Mr. Colby gave chase, and reports a lively time for a few minutes, but the pursued was too fleet for him, and he was obliged to give up the chase. The ghost, in his flight, trod upon his winding sheet, tearing it completely in two. Mr. C. took this home as a trophy. So much for the Lancaster ghost, which, but for the bravery of this young man, might have continued to haunt the streets to the terror of many of the credulous. We regret that the name of the person is not known, in order that proper odium might be put upon him, if nothing more. Whoever he may be, he must know that the whole community most heartily disapprove of any such nonsense, and would not have cared if he had had a hole made in his hide.

A Singular Affair.

[Concord Monitor.]

Moses L. Flint, of the firm of H. Bird & Co., Faneuil Hall Market, Boston, who suddenly disappeared from his residence on Monday, the 26th, arrived at Canaan, on the 1 o'clock train, Tuesday, and registered himself at the Union Hotel as L. R. Fritz, Boston. He appeared somewhat singular, and retired at an early hour. Wednesday morning, not having made an appearance at 10 o'clock, the landlord went to his room, and after some delay effected an entrance and found Mr. Flint dressed and standing against the wall in an unconscious state. It was found that he could walk, but did not speak, and he was taken down stairs, but still not a word could be obtained from him. On his person were found a sum of money and papers which identified him. Dr. Morgan was called, and other medical aid afterwards, as it was found that he continued to sink during the day, lost the use of his muscles in the afternoon, and appeared entirely unconscious of anything; even a pin stuck into the flesh failing to produce the movement of a muscle. About 7 o'clock that evening, while two attendants were rubbing him, he suddenly sprang from his deathlike stupor, and before they could collect themselves dashed through a window and fell to the ground a distance of 10 feet; thence he scaled the picket fence of a poultry yard, 8 feet in height, and took to the hills, his only article of clothing being a shirt. A dozen or more persons started in pursuit of him, and the chase was continued until 10 o'clock at night before any one came up with him, and then he was neatly down to Grafton Centre, having gone several miles, and crossed the railroad track three or four times. He was easily tracked in the new snow. He was finally found and taken back to Canaan, and Friday morning spoke for the first time since Tuesday. He was undoubtedly suffering from aberration of mind when he went to Canaan, and the apparent paralysis of his muscular system, was probably due to mental action. His father and brother-in-law arrived at Canaan to care for him and it is to be hoped that he will speedily recover.

A Little Difficulty.

The appended correspondence will explain itself. One of the parties is 74 years old and the other 68.

[Washington Capital, Jan. 25.]

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 25, 1873.

Dear Sir:—Yours of the 20th instant has been this day received. I have not seen any of the articles which you inform me H. S. Foote has written in abuse of me, nor have I had any desire to read whatever he might write. In the year 1851 I published him as constitutionally a liar, and his subsequent career only served to confirm me in that judgment. Since that date, therefore, I have taken no heed in the utterances of said Foote. His flattery, when he was seeking political preferment in the Confederacy, and his abuse when, faithless to his trust as a representative in the congress of the Confederate States, he was preparing for his subsequent desertion to their enemy, were alike disregarded by me. You are at liberty to use this as you think proper. I remain, respectfully and truly yours.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

[Washington Chronicle, Jan 25.]

As a portion of the community may possibly expect from me some notice of the insulting and grossly aspersive letter over the signature of Jefferson Davis, which yesterday morning made its appearance in the columns of the Capital, though the glaring mendacity of all the allegations of fact contained therein might well justify me in treating the letter itself and its infamous author with cool and passionless contempt, yet, for certain reasons, not difficult, I imagine, to be divined, I have thought proper to take a somewhat different course. I shall not now go into a detail of past occurrences with a view of my own vindication. It is not possible for the ruined and disgraced champion of disunion to say aught of me, or of my public career, which could in the least degree disturb my equanamity. He has cherished an undying hatred for me ever since his own presumptuous arrogance, on a very noticed occasion, compelled me to slap his jaws, in this city, in the winter of 1847-8. The hostility thus engendered was afterwards much heightened by my defeat of his treasonable aspirations to the office of Governor of Mississippi, as a secession candidate, in 1851. My constant and unyielding opposition to him and his nefarious schemes in Richmond during the war of the rebellion, for three years, was not at all calculated to assuage his enmity. My free, but unanswered, and, I venture to say, unanswerable, expositions last summer of his indecent and seditious attempts to keep alive in the bosoms of his countrymen feelings of irritation and alienation, which ought never to have been brought into existence, have doubtless much inflamed the malignity which was slumbering in the recesses of a heart capable of all mischief. I rejoice to know that the blighting curse of Mr. Davis's commendation it never can now be my ill-fortune to incur. But I tell this mighty man of Gath, who writes so blusterously for publication in the newspapers, that I do not live in absolute concealment; my whereabouts may be easily found by him or his idolizing confederates. He knows, as thousands of others know, that for full twenty years I have stood ready to accord to him such satisfaction as he might deem necessary to his deeply-wounded honor; and that, whatever general views I may entertain touching the propriety of settling such issues as have arisen between him and myself in the mode referred to, yet that, from special deference to him, I shall be altogether induced to make his an exceptional case. The habitual calumniator of honest and patriotic men has no right to skulk behind the hypocritical pretences of extreme piety. H. S. FOOTE.

A Happy Thought.

A story is told of Governor Chiltendon, who was one of the early Governors of Vermont. He was quite an extensive farmer, and in those days to be a Governor did not greatly interfere with the incumbent's ordinary vocation. He had two sons. One of them was a boy of bright intellect and the other decidedly dull. The old gentleman thought that nature had done enough for the youngest and that he would make his way in the world without more than a common-school education, but that the elder one would need all the aid of a liberal education to make up the natural deficiency, and he was accordingly sent to college, while his brother was kept on the farm. It happened one spring that among the fruit of the Governor's herd was a very stupid calf. It would not suck or drink, and no amount of effort on the part of father, son, or "hired man" could induce him to take his sustenance. After repeated trials the good man's patience gave out, and he said to his son, "Freeman, what on earth shall I do with this stupid fool?" "I don't know, father," was the ready response, "unless we send him to college with Martin."

—The Washington correspondent of the Journal of Commerce says: "About three weeks ago General F. E. Spinner, treasurer of the United States, received a letter requesting the redemption of an enclosed twenty-dollar Confederate note, or information as to where redemption could be attained. General Spinner gruffly told his clerk to tell the man to go to the chief of a very warm place. The clerk put this in very polite but distinct language, and General Spinner signed the letter. The other day an answer came. It was to the effect that the owner of the note had done as requested, and that Pluto had redeemed it with promptness. He added that as he was leaving Pluto's banking-house that dignitary informed him that the treasurer of the United States was well known there as a partner in the concern, and the influence of any recommendation he would make was sufficient to secure its adoption. The wag goes on to say that Pluto spoke very highly of his friend Spinner."

—A very interesting question has arisen in a debating club, which is giving its members infinite trouble to answer in a manner that shall prove entirely satisfactory. It appears that somebody has been puzzled about the meaning of the familiar expression, "By the Piper that played before Moses." It is asked if this refers to the Piper that played in the presence of Moses, and if so, on what occasion the performance took place; or if it alludes to some Piper that played before Moses's time. Both sides of the question have their earnest advocates, and the subject was in a fair way of being settled, when a fresh complication arose. It was maintained that the sentence placed Moses himself in the position of the one who possessed the accomplishment of pipe playing, and the line, properly interpreted, means:—"By the Piper that played before Moses" [played]. The deciding of this matter is so important that we trust it will engage the attention of some of those gentleman who are skilled in matters of this kind. Whether the Piper played in the presence of Moses, or before Moses was born, or before Moses had yet mastered the intricacies of the pipe, should be determined as speedily as possible; because, since the phrase partakes of the nature of an oath, there should be no ambiguity in it.

After a man has passed the age ov 57 about all he kan find to talk about and to brag on iz that he haz got more pains and akes than eny ov the rest ov his nabors.

There iz nothing that a man iz so certain ov az he iz ov what he sees, and yet there iz nothing after all that deceives him oftener.

NO. 4 BULFINCH STREET, BOSTON.

When a thing is counterfeited, it is a proof of its excellence and popularity. The Peabody Medical Institute is a case in point. Founded in good faith many years ago, and the only establishment of the kind in the country, its success and ever-increasing popularity finally caused the name (Medical Institute) to be pirated and abused by a host of infamous quacks, empirics and pretenders, who have been endeavoring to cheat the public by selling under a stolen flag. The founder of the Peabody Medical Institute can in no way be held responsible for the misuse of the name of a reputable and well-known curative establishment and legitimate medical institution, which has been from the start specially devoted to the treatment of nervous derangements and affections, from whatever causes proceeding. During its existence there have been issued from it several medical publications; quite recently a work on Diseases of the Nervous System, which have had almost a world wide circulation and popularity. These publications sufficiently attest the high character of the institution under whose patronage these medical works have been published. Meantime it is gratifying to know that several of the impudent charlatans, who have stolen its name to cover their nefarious practices, are getting their deserts in the penal institutions of the Commonwealth.—Boston Herald.

Local Matters.

Fire.

Shortly after 5 o'clock, Friday morning, fire was discovered by the night watch and an alarm sounded, flames being then issuing from the second story of the Melcher block, on the corner of Congress and Chestnut streets. The fire department were speedily on hand, but before a stream could be put on the fire the wooden block was hopelessly in flames, together with Larrabee's harness shop and store adjoining, and the most that could be hoped was that the fire would be kept where it was,—no easy job, for the burning buildings were in a nest of wooden structures, a gale of wind was blowing, and the intense cold rendered working in wet clothes and with frozen hose most uncomfortable, and turned waterinto ice at short notice. But the firemen worked magnificently and their labors were ably directed by the Chief Engineer and his competent corps of assistants, and to their praiseworthy and determined endeavors we may place the credit of the city's escape from a more serious disaster. In less than an hour the danger was mainly past, the two buildings destroyed being then a smoking mass of ruins. Brands from the fire were carried a long distance by the high wind, landing on wooden roofs all the way to the shores of the South Millpond, and even going to the middle of the pond; but the good fortune which has hitherto waited on our city in cases of fire, on this occasion had ordained that the roofs should be covered with a generous coating of ice, which prevented any other conflagrations from getting a start.

The building in which the fire started was owned by Mr. Melcher, and was to have been sold in the spring to make room for a brick block; insured to the amount of $3000,—$1500 in DeRochemont's agency and a like amount with A. F. Craig. It was occupied by Timothy Chellis, eating saloon, Harry Donnelly, saloon, Mr. E. C. Wiggin, provision store, and Chas. W. Carter, who dwelt in the upper stories. Chellis and Donnelly were not insured; Mr. Wiggin had $600 insurance with DeRochemont, and Mr. Carter had $600 with the same agent on his furniture and wearing-apparel (which was nearly all lost,) and $300 on the building next the Melcher block on Chesnut street, which was slightly damaged. Mr. Larrabee's shop was owned by Mr. Carter, and was insured $600; Mr. L.'s stock was insured with Morse & Ilsley and DeRochemont, and was mostly saved.

The Market Square reservoir gave out very quickly, under the draught of two engines, but kept one very well at work afterward; and the Haymarket Square and Hanover street reservoirs furnished all the rest of the water needed. A look at the firemen, before they left the scene of their arduous and happily successful labors, with their clothing and beards thickly coated with ice, would have satisfied the most determined grumbler that they richly deserve and hardly earn all the pay they get for their service. They received the general commendations their efforts merited, and were cared for after the fire at the hotels and private residences near by.

Smash-Up.

A wagon belonging to Randall & Caswell, fish dealers, was completely smashed up Friday morning by the horse taking fright at the hose lying in the street, near the scene of the fire. As the horse ran down Congress street he managed to effect a collision with a team standing near Congress Block, throwing his driver out and breaking the wagon. The horse fell and was secured without doing any other damage. The driver, Mr. Perry Caswell, was not seriously injured, though slightly lamed and somewhat bruised; and his presence of mind in jumping upon his horse's neck as soon as he picked himself up after his tumble, and holding the animal down in spite of his struggles, was commendable.

City Council.

In Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Jan. 29, leave was granted C. H. Mendum to encumber High street for building.

An order passed for re-numbering Congress street.

The Chief Engineer's Annual Report was received and ordered to be pinted.

The finance committee reported an amount of sales of City Bonds for $30,361.-80, to pay bonds to the amount of $30,000, falling due Feb. 1st. The same committee reported that they had examined and certified the City accounts for 1873, and contracted for printing the same.

The committee on City lands and buildings reported against granting a ten years lease of the store under the City Rooms to John H. Grant at $300 per year.

Order passed for lowering the voting place in Ward Room on Elm street.

The committee on Police reported the City Marshal's quarterly Report; approved. Adjourned.

Lacontes.

The Knights of Pythias gave an Anniversary Ball at Congress Hall on Friday evening, which was largely attended and greatly enjoyed, the gorgeous regalia of the order making the scene extremely brilliant. A bountiful collation was served in the banquet hall, and dancing was kept up merrily until a late hour.

A friend informs us that at eight o'clock Friday evening every length of the hose used by our fire department at the burning of the Melcher block Friday morning was cleaned and hung up ready for use.

The next lecture in the Lyceum course will be delivered on Tuesday evening, Feb. 3d, by Dr. A. P. Stevens; subject, "Hand, Brain and Heart."

During the time of the fire, Friday morning, we noticed that teams were repeatedly driven over the hose as it lay on the ground full of water and stiff with ice. We think some means should be adopted to prevent this, for a horse's "cork" would cut through a hose should he happen to tread upon it, and the weight of a wagon is liable to burst it; and a length of hose disabled means the loss of some minutes of valuable time to replace it. Such an accident might be attended with serious consequences, especially when such a high wind is blowing as was experienced Friday morning, and we suggest that if the practice of driving over the lines of hose cannot be stopped by a city ordinance, the firemen should be provided with fenders of some kind to protect the hose from injury, as it bursts often enough on its own hook.

The Ladies' Society of the Methodist church will hold a Fair and Festival in Congress Hall on Thursday and Friday evenings, Feb. 5 and 6, with more than the usual attractions. Any contributions in aid will be thankfully received.

Mr. J. W. Peirce has given $100 for the permanent benefit of the fire department, as an acknowledgement of their meritorious exertions at the fire on Friday morning.

A young lad named Thomas McCarthy was severely bitten in the foot by a large dog on Union street on Friday.

Our neighbor, the Times, objects to the "position" taken by the CHRONICLE regarding Officer Shannon. We can't help it. Between thieves and scoundrels of all kinds on the one side and policemen on the other, our "position" is ever and always with the men who enforce the law; that the "position" of the Times is ever and always on the other side we regret, but take no blame to ourselves therefor.

Rumors that a disabled horse was being eaten alive by rats in a barn at Rye came to the notice of the President of the S. P. C. A. The City Marshal and Dr. Chas. A. Norton, Secretary of the Society, were at once sent to investigate the case, with instructions to end the sufferings of the poor beast if necessary. The horse was found suspended in slings and in a very bad condition, and the doctor pronouncing the disease incurable the horse was immediately killed.

—A John Bull, conversing with an Indian, asked him if he knew the sun never sets on the Queen's dominions. "No," said the Indian. "Do you know the reason why?" asked John. "Because God is afraid to trust an Englishman in the dark," was the savage's reply.

—A little controversy arose recently between the telegraph office in Boston and the headquarters of the line, as to whether United States, in a telegram, should be counted as two words or one. This was settled by Manager Drury, who declared that the nation fought the rebels five years to make the United States one word, and one it should be from his office.

Business Notices.

The Foremost Tonic of the Age.

Taking into consideration the character of its vouchers, the history of its cures and its immense annual sales, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters may be fairly entitled the Foremost Tonic of the Age. It is not only a tonic but a constitutional and local alterative, and its tendency is to substitute healthy for diseased action throughout the system. If the stomach is feeble and torpid it produces a vitalizing impression upon its mucous tissues. No sooner has the dyspeptic swallowed a dose of it than he knows by his sensations that his stomach has received an accession of vigor. It increases the desire for food and the ability to digest and assimilate it. If the liver is derelict, it improves the condition of the organ and imparts to it a new and healthful impulse. The bowels being obstructed, it promotes the flow of bile into the intestinal canal and thereby relieves them and re-establishes their natural action. Its effect upon the brain, the nerves and the kidneys is equally salutary. In short, it tones, alters and regulates the whole system.

Don't temporize with Piles.—Ointments, lotions, electuaries and all manner of quack nostrums are a waste of time and money. The only absolutely infallible cure for these painful diseases is ANAKESIS, discovered by DR. SILSBEE. It has been pronounced by scientific men as the happiest discovery made in medicine for 200 years; it affords instant relief from pain in the worst cases and has cured more than 20,000 sufferers permanently. All doctors prescribe it.—Price $1.00. Sold by druggists everywhere. Depot, 46 Walker st., New York.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver or "Billiousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. 706

Dr. Helmbold, the originator of Buchu, has the satisfaction of knowing that all his imitators have failed to produce the beneficial his preparation insures. Helmbold's Ext. Buchu cures. Too others disappoint. Persons suffering from Kidney Complaint, Gravel, Premature Decay, Loss of Vigor or any souvenir of indiscretion, cannot apply the remedy too soon. The great point is to get the genuine Buchu Extract, which is Helmbold's and no other. For sale by all druggists.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions disease of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is prized for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Office No 26 Market Street.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

—A couple at Woodville, Iowa, have been divorced four times, and now contemplate another marriage.

—Chicago has taken to duelling with a vengeance, for one of the newspapers announces in its local columns that "ten gentlemen of the town of Hyde Park have issued a challenge to the three divisions of the city to shoot any ten men from either the south, north or west division for $100 a side," and all this is to be done merely for the championship of the city.

—A peculiar case of forgetfulness and increase of treasure came up in Lowell recently, at the Institution for Savings in that city. Years ago a young lady from Sandford, Me., went to that city, and from her earnings deposited $175 in that institution. She left the city twenty-one years ago and returned home, and in the course of time forgot her deposit. Recently it occurred to her that she might have some money there, and she wrote to inquire if there was anything left for her. Mr. Canney, the treasurer, reported that there was a balance there of $785.95.

—An inebriate some little while back got into a tramway car at Glasgow, and became very troublesome and annoying to the other passengers, so much so that it was proposed to eject him; but a genial and kind-hearted reverend doctor, who was also a passenger, interposed for him and soothed him into good behavior for the remainder of the journey. Before leaving, however, he scowled upon the other occupants of the 'bus and muttered some words of contempt, but shook hands warmly with the doctor, and said: "Good-day, my friend; I see you ken what it is to be drunk."

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined, that it retains the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and wasting, expelling our morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chilliness, Night Sweats, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energetic effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron foundation.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

Note that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

CATARRH!
A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years, Cured.
And Droppings in Throat, Chokings, Stranglings, Pains in the Side, Loins, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the
CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY.
TO MESSRS. LITTLEFIELD & CO., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.:
I reside at Manchester N. H., and previously resided at Henniker, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 19 years old; had it bad all the time. It run all that period, and nights it would fill up and drop down in my throat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I would spring up in bed to save myself from strangulation. It would ring in my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, back and joints, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians and had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or coughs. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.
MRS. S. J. FLANDERS.
Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.
I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, chokings and stranglings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.
Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left, Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

The Fighting Dog.

A man there owned a terrier dog,
A bob-tailed cherry cuss,
And that there dog got that there man
In many an ugly muss.

For the man was on his muscle
And the dog was on his bile,
And to kick that doggoned animal
Was sure to raise a fight.

A woman owned a Thomas cat
What fit at fifteen pound,
The other cats got up and slid
When that there cat came round.

As the man and his dog were passing one day,
Where the woman she did dwell,
The pup growled ferociously
And went for the cat like —— (everything.)

He tried to chaw the neck of the cat
But the cat he wouldn't be chawed.
He fit on the back of that there dog
And chawed, and chawed, and chawed.

Oh the hair it flew, and the dog he growled,
As the claws went into his hide,
And the chunks of meat were peeled from his sides,
And he flummaxed, and kicked, and died.

The man he ripped, and cursed, and swore,
As he gathered a big brick-bat,
That he would be durned essentially
If he did not kill that cat.

The old woman allowed she'd be blessed if he did,
And she picked up an old shot gun,
Which she fired, and peppered his diaphragm,
With bird shot number one.

They toted him home on a window blind,
Arid the doctors cured him up,
But he never was known to fight again,
Nor to own another pup.

You may stick up your snoots at this rhyme,
But I don't care a cuss for that,
I want to prove that a fighting dog,
May tackle the wrong tom cat.

A Comical Cure.

I was once sent for in great haste, to attend a man of respectability, whose wife, a lady of intelligence and refinement, had discovered him in his room lying senseless upon the floor.

On arriving at the house, I found Mrs. Harris in great distress on mind.

"What is the matter with Mr. Harris?"—I asked on meeting his lady, who was in tears and looking the picture of distress.

"I'm afraid it is apoplexy," she replied. "I found him lying on the floor, where he had, to all appearances, fallen suddenly from his chair. His face is purple, and though he breathes, it is with great difficulty."

I went up to see my patient. He had been lifted from the floor and was lying upon the bed. Sure enough his face was purple, and breathing labored; but somehow the symptoms did not indicate apoplexy. Every vein in his head and face was filled, and he lay perfectly stupid, but still I saw no clear indication of an actual or approaching congestion of the brain.

"Hadn't he better be bled, doctor?" asked the anxious wife.

"I don't think that it is necessary," I replied; "I think if we let him alone it will pass off in the course of a few hours."

"A few hours! He may die in half an hour," she exclaimed.

"I don't think the case so dangerous as that, madam."

"Apoplexy not dangerous?"

"I hardly think it apoplexy," I replied.

"Pray what do you think it is, doctor?" and Mrs. Harris looked anxiously into my face as she spoke.

I delicately hinted that he might possibly have been drinking too much brandy, but this she positively and almost indignantly objected to.

"No, doctor, I ought to know about that," she said. "Depend upon it, the case is more deeply seated. I am sure that he had better be bled. Won't you bleed him, doctor? A few ounces of blood taken from his arm may give life to the stagnant circulation of the blood in his veins."

Thus urged, I, after some reflection, ordered a bowl and bandage, and opened a vein, from which the blood flowed freely, and relieved him of about eight ounces of his circulating medium. But he still lay as insensible as before, much to the distress of his poor wife.

"Something else must be done, doctor," she urged, seeing that the bleeding had accomplished nothing. "If my husband is not quickly relieved he must die."

By this time several friends and relatives who had been sent for, arrived, and urged upon me the adoption of some more active means for restoring the sick man to consciousness. One proposed blisters all over the body; and another a blister on the head; another immersion in hot water; I suggested it might be well to use a stomach pump.

"Why, doctor?" asked one of his friends.

"Perhaps he has taken some drug," I replied.

"Impossible, doctor," said his wife. "He has not been from home to-day, and there is no drug of any kind in the house."

"No brandy?" I ventured the assertion again.

"No, doctor! No spirits of any kind, not even wine in the house," returned Mrs. Harris in an offended tone.

I was not the regular family physician, and had been called in to meet the alarming emergency, because my house happened to be nearest to the dwelling of Mr. Harris. Feeling my position to be a difficult one, I suggested that the family physician had better be called.

"But the delay, doctor!" urged the friends.

"No harm will result from it, be assured," I replied.

But my words did not assure them. However as I was firm in my resolution not to do anything more for the patient until Dr. Solly came, they had to submit. I wished to make a call of importance in the neighborhood, and proposed going—to be back by the time Dr. Solly arrived; but the friends of the sick man would not suffer me to leave the room.

When Dr. Solly came, we conversed aside for a few moments, and I gave him my views of the case, and stated what I had done and why I had done it. We then proceeded to the bedside of the patient. There was still no signs of approaching consciousness.

"Don't you think his head ought to be shaved and blistered?" asked the wife anxiously.

Dr. Solly thought a moment, and then said, "Yes, by all means. Send for a barber; and also a fresh fly blister, four inches by nine."

I looked into the face of Dr. Solly with surprise. It was perfectly grave and earnest. I hinted to him my doubts of the good that treatment would do; but he spoke confidently of the result, and said that it would not only cure the disease, but, he believed, take away the predisposition thereto, with which Mr. Harris was affected in a high degree.

The head of Mr. Harris was shaved, and Dr. Solly applied the blister with his own hands, and which completely covered the scalp from forehead to occiput.

"Let it remain on for two hours, and then make use of the ordinary dressing," said Dr. Solly. "If he should not recover during the action of the blister, don't feel uneasy. Sensibility will be restored soon after."

I did not call again but heard from Dr. Solly the result.

After we left the friends stood anxiously around the bedside upon which the sick man lay; but though the blister began to draw, no signs of returning consciousness showed themselves further than an occasional low moan, or an uneasy tossing of the arms. For full two hours the burning plaster parched the tender skin of Mr. Harris' shorn head and was then removed. It had done good service. Dressings were then applied, repeated and repeated again, but still the sick man lay in a deep stupor.

"It has done no good. Hadn't we better send for the doctor?" suggested the wife.

Just then the eyes of Harris opened, and he looked with half stupid surprise upon the faces of the anxious group that surrounded the bed.

"What is the matter?" he at length said. At the same time feeling a strange sensation about the head, he placed his hand rather heavily thereon. "Heavens and earth!" He was now fully in his senses. "Heavens and earth! what ails my head?"

"For mercy's sake keep quiet," said his wife, the glad tears gushing over her face. "You have been very ill. There, there, now," and she spoke soothingly, "don't say a word, but lie very still."

"But my head! What's the matter with my head? It feels as if scalded. Where's my hair? Heavens and earth, Sarah, I don't understand this! What is my arm tied in this way for?"

"Be quiet, my dear husband; and I'll explain it all. Oh, be very quiet. Your life depends upon it,"

Mr. Harris sank back upon his pillow from which he had arisen, and closed his eyes to think. He put his hand to his head, and felt it tenderly from temple to temple and from nape to forehead.

"Is it a blister?" he at length asked.

"Yes, dear. You have been very ill. We feared for your life," said Mrs. Harris affectionately. "There have been two physicians in attendance."

Harris closed his eyes again. His lips moved. Those nearest were not much edified by the whispered words that issued therefrom. They would have sounded very strangely to ears polite and refined. After this he lay for sometime quiet.

"Threatened with apoplexy, I suppose?" he then said interrogatively.

"Yes, dear," replied his wife. "I found you lying insensible on the floor on happening to come into your room. It was most providential that I discovered you as I did as you certainly would have died."

Harris shut his eyes and muttered something, with an air of impatience, but its meaning was not understood.

Finding him out of danger, friends and relatives retired, and the sick man was left alone with his family.

"Sarah," he said, "why in heaven's name did you permit the doctors to butcher me in this way? I am laid up for a week or two all for nothing."

"It was to save your life dear."

"Save——"

"Hush! There; do for heaven's sake be quiet! everything depends upon it."

With a gesture of impatience, Mr. Harris shut his eyes, teeth and hands, and lay perfectly still for some minutes. Then he turned his face to the wall, muttering in a low, petulant voice, "Too bad! too bad! too bad!"

I had not erred in my first and last impression of Harris' disease; neither had Dr. Solly, although he used a very extraordinary mode of treatment. The facts of the case are these;

Harris had a weakness. He could not taste wine or strong drink, without being

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.
Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever.
It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.
It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.
By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.
As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.
Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Skin, Liver and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

CATARRH!
A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years. Cured.
And Droppings in Throat, Choking, Strangling, Pains in the Side, Loins, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the
CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY.
TO MESSRS. LITTLEFIELD & CO., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.: I reside at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Henniker, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 10 years old; and it had all the time. It run all that period, and nights it would fill up and drop down in my throat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I would spring up in bed to save myself from strangulation. It affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.
MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.
Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.
I am now 35 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, chokings and strangulings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.
Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left. Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

The Blood Cure.

Not long since an article appeared in the Boston Herald stating that a gentleman who had been "given up to die" was at the Brighton abattoir, as it is called, for medical treatment, simply drinking half a tumblerful of warm blood twice a day. This course the gentleman (Mr. C. H. Stickney,) who is willing that his name shall appear, has followed until a week ago, having been there ten weeks, and during that time gained ten pounds in weight, and to use his own words, as given to a Herald representative, "My appetite is good; I sleep well and feel like a new man, and I am soon to commence business again in Boston." He also says there are ten or twelve others there, drinking the blood, all of whom are gaining under this treatment. One gentleman from Boston, a consumptive, so feeble that it was with difficulty he could get to the abattoir, is now able to handle an axe skilfully enough to "knock down a bullock." A lady from the city who has been sick six years, stricken with paralysis, is improving wonderfully by this "blood cure." A gratifying feature of this cure is that it is "without money and without price," and Mr. Stickney speaks in praise of the gentlemen in charge of this establishment, and says strangers visiting the place will find courteous treatment. For the benefit of those who are sick and wish to avail themselves of this privilege these facts are given.

Food for Invalids.

There is no more desirable accomplishment for women than to know how to make invalids comfortable, and to prepare tempting dishes for them; for food cooked by the hand of a wife, sister or mother, possesses a sweeter relish than the mere component parts can give; and has frequently a restorative power which money cannot supply. I therefore propose to give various receipts which will enable readers to prepare relishing and toothsome dishes for those who are ill, and to vary the food as selections or symptoms may render expedient.

Farinaceous food, jellies and meat broths, are the most nutritious preparations for invalids; and such food as the patient can take without producing distress and pain in the digestive organs, is the kind which will give most strength to the patient.

Oatmeal Gruel.—Mix a dessert spoonful of fine oatmeal or patent groats with two tablespoonfuls of cold water; add one pint of boiling water, and boil for ten minutes, stirring frequently. For a richer gruel, boil two tablespoonfuls of groats in a quart of water for an hour. Strain through a sieve; stir in a piece of butter large as a walnut, and some sugar, nutmeg or ginger.

Barley Gruel.—Wash four tablespoonfuls of pearl-barley; boil it in two quarts of water, with a stick of cinnamon and a pinch of salt in it, until reduced to one quart. Strain through a sieve; add a teacup of milk, and boil for ten minutes. Serve with sugar and nutmeg if relished. This will keep on the ice two or three days.

Arrowroot Gruel.—Mix a dessert spoonful of arrowroot with a little cold water, and pour over it one pint of boiling water; boil until it looks transparent. Add a little salt. If the patient can take milk, substitute boiling milk for water, and flavor with grated lemon peel or vanilla.

Sago Gruel.—Take three tablespoonfuls of sago, and wash in cold water; then add one quart of boiling hot milk, and boil for twenty minutes; sweeten and flavor with lemon peel, or a tablespoonful of brandy.

Ground Rice Gruel.—Boil one tablespoonful of ground rice, rubbed smooth with cold water, in a pint and a half of milk, with a bit of cinnamon and lemon peel. Sweeten slightly, or season with salt.

Isinglass Jelly.—Boil one ounce of isinglass shavings with a slice of brown bread crust and a handful of Jamaica peppers, in one quart of water, until it is reduced to a pint. Strain into a mould. A tablespoonful of this jelly taken in milk is a good tonic for dyspepsia.

Strengthening Jelly.—Boil in two quarts of water, one ounce of rice, one of sage, and one ounce of pearl barley, until reduced one-half. Strain into a mould; take a teacupful morning, noon and night. It can be sweetened and flavored to taste.

Tapioca Jelly.—Wash a teacupful of tapioca—soak it for three hours in cold water—turn off the water and pour over it one quart of boiling water. Add the grated peel of one lemon; sweeten to taste and boil for one hour.

Calf's Foot Broth.—Boil two calf's feet with a three-inch square piece of beefsteak, in three quarts of water, for three hours. Season with pepper and salt. Strain and set away to cool; take off all the fat; warm over with sippets of toasted bread.

Shipping Elephants.

A Calcutta newspaper says: The hoisting into the air and lowering elephants into the hold of a ship is not only an unusual sight to most men, but also a strange experience to most elephants. They were lashed with strong ropes, slung as far as practicable in slings, hoisted up with cranes with three-foot tackle, and lowered into the steamer's hold like a bale of cotton. When in the hold, they were placed in pens built of strong teak timber baulks, bolted to the ship's side to prevent them from breaking loose. The fear the animals suffered was the only pain they underwent, and by watching the eyes of the poor beasts their terror was very manifest. Tears trickled down their mild countenances, and they roared with dread, more especially when being lowered into the hold, the bottom of which was sanded for them to stand upon. We are told that one female elephant actually fainted, and was brought to with a fan and many gallons of water. At sea it appears that they got into a curious habit of occasionally—evidently with a preconcerted signal—setting to work rocking the ship from side to side, by giving themselves, simultaneously, a swing motion as they stood athwart ship, the vessel rolling heavily, as if in a seaway. This they would do for a spell of an hour or more, and then desist for several hours until the strange freak took them again. When they reached port they were hoisted out of the hold and swam on shore, thirty-five being thus safely landed without any accident whatever. When they were released from the slings it was a supreme moment for the mahout, who was always on the elephant's neck from the time of its touching the water to letting go. As the word was given to let go, each of the elephants, either from the lightness of his heart at being freed from his floating prison or from his own weight, we are not sure which—lightness of heart, lightness of head, causes elephants and men to play pranks—plunged down deep into the water, the mahout on his neck. The anxiety on the face of the mahout just one second before the plunge was a study; so, too, was it when elephant and man rose to the surface again, the former blowing water from his trunk and the latter from his nose.

Securing Apples for the off Year.

One of the most successful agriculturists in the country is Robert Pell, who has a 1200 acre farm in Ulster, New York, all in the highest state of cultivation. One feature is an orchard of 200 acres, planted exclusively with the Newtown pippin, and the product of this orchard is famous in England and Europe as well as at home. To attain his present perfection in fruit culture, Mr. Pell studied the art of pomology and learned how to assist nature in her efforts to support mankind. Commonly speaking, the apple tree bears every alternate year. Mr. Pell determined to have an annual harvest, and to give his orchard a handsome start he sacrificed the crop of a bearing year. All the apples were picked while green. He discovered that the germ of next year's fruit was in existence at the time of the apple harvest, but that the tree would be so exhausted the germ would fail of development, and a year of rest would follow before another crop could be produced. Having stopped his trees from fruiting in the manner I have mentioned, he was sure of a crop on what was generally the off-year and he determined to follow his up by a treatment which should abolish the off-year system. He learned that trees require a variety of food, the chief of which is found in potash, lime and soda, and his orchard has been a success he could not have anticipated. The potash is found in wood ashes, lime is obtained from oyster shells at low cost, (stone lime being undesirable,) while soda is supplied by common salt. In orchards thus fed and judiciously pruned, he cannot fail of success, and although this season is generally short of apples Mr. Pell's crop is of usual abundance.

What Alexis Thinks of Us.

And now comes to the front another noble author, the Grand Duke Alexis, who has been publishing an account of his travels around the world in considerably more than Jules Verne's eighty days. A newspaper correspondent, who has seen the advance sheets of the book, says of it:

This is certainly a very curious work. To judge from what I have read of it—whether his Imperial Highness wrote it himself, or whether an able pen did it for him—the book is intensely interesting. The Grand Duke says the reception at New York all most stupefied him. Up to the last moment he had not thought that so brilliant an ovation would be tendered in republican America to a son of a monarch. He was very weak when he landed in New York, and during his progress up Broadway frequently felt like fainting. But everybody was so kind to him that he tried hard to look pleased, as he was in his heart of hearts. Broadway, he says, in his opinion, is the finest thoroughfare in the world, because everything there—houses, shops, and the people—look not monotonous, but gay, lively, and bright.

What amused him, perhaps, more than anything else was that the bands, upon catching sight of him, struck up not the regular Russian anthem, but the so-called "Dirge of St. Catherine," which is played in Russia only at the funeral of a member of the imperial family! The cheers of the people were more deafening than any he had heard in Europe, from which he playfully concludes that lung diseases cannot be very prevalent in the New World. As to the soldiery, the variety of uniforms struck him as extremely odd. He says he saw, peacefully side by side, helmeted Prussians and "kepied" Frenchmen, red-coated Englishmen, and Irish troops bearing the banner of the Green Isle.

The Grand Duke cannot praise too highly American hotels. American fare he thinks, however, is too rich. "There is at their tables," he exclaims, naively, "always too much of a good thing. I asked for the peculiar dishes of America, and at the hotel they could not give me any. Their cooks were Italian and French. The landlord shugged his shoulders when I asked him about it. Out West, however, my desire was at once gratified. I dined one day on baked pork and beans, a very palatable dish, which would certainly bear transplanting to Russia."

America manners, the Grand Duke thinks, are a little awkward and angular, but decidedly pleasant on account of everybody's frankness. He tells a number of curious anecdotes on his experiences with the aborigines. In Washington he was told that the Irish servant-girls at the residence of M. Catacazy were dying to see him. He put on a cap and an old traveling coat, and went unheralded down into the kitchen among them. He was not recognized by the Biddies, and chatted with them for half an hour. He found out that not one of them had an idea of where Russia was situated, and one of the girls even asked him if the Czar always wore a crown on his head, adding that she knew that the Queen of England always did.

Equally amusing is the account of his reception at Omaha, in Nebraska, where a member of the Legislature congratulated him on the success of his father in the war with France. Another legislator of that State wanted to know if was always cold in Russia.

These funny episodes in the West, however, were amply made up for by the extreme kindness and consideration with which the army officers there treated the Grand Duke. For General Custer and his subordinate officers the Grand Duke has words of the warmest gratitude. General Custer's photograph is published in the volume, which is most sumptuously printed and profusely illustrated. Only a few copies of the book will be issued.

THE RING TROUBLED.

This city is now in commotion over District matters, with petitions for investigation, and counter remonstrances against it from the Governor. Much of the excitement and interest has grown out of the publication of some letters and papers left by the late Wm. S. Huntington, showing he was called upon for contributions to assist members of Congress to be re-elected, who became zealous supporters of the District authorities, and that Rings were formed to get paving contracts and to buy real estate where improvements were contemplated. In the old writing books the master used to set a copy for the boys which ran, "Be virtuous and you will be happy." The unhappy state of some whose names appear, and others who fear theirs will soon, is an admonition to all, that when they can't follow the old copy they had better not write at all. Pretty much everybody wants to stifle investigation, because they fear it will effect the appropriations to be made for the city. Certificates of indebtedness are selling at fifty cents on a dollar, and are in almost everybody's hands that have money who have taken them in payments of some kind. If they get a big appropriation from Uncle Sam, they double the money on their investments. It will be seen at a glance if they can live and sell their claims at fifty cents on a dollar, had there been funds to pay, there were fortunes in contracts. As it is, I conclude there were fat dividends until the money failed, fair ones until credit failed, and hard times since.

THE PLACE FOR WEALTHY PEOPLE.

Merriam of New York, brought out the singular fact in debate that there is no tax in this city except upon real estate and occupation. It is a Paradise for wealthy people, who are not real estate holders, where the tax-gatherer never comes to molest. With you, banks are taxed upon their capital two per cent., while here they escape all taxation, and take ten per cent. from customers as the regular rate, and I dare not name the figures when they shave.

LOUISIANA MATTERS.

The Senate have been engaged on Louisiana matters and discussing finance. It is not probable any change will be made, as they have got sort of quiet under the Kellogg rule, and a change from one set of plunderers to another, might be like the change of swarms of flies. Both parties cheated all they knew how to—the one before the election, and the other afterwards. Carpenter's speech puts Durell in a bad position as acting without authority. McCreery's speech was humorous, sarcastic and able. Morton took a practical view of the case, and under his lead I conclude a majority will follow. Kelly's convertible and reconvertible bond proposition received a black eye from two committees, Banking and Currency, and Ways and Means, and will fare no better when acted on in the House. It would take too much from the profits of National Banks to be allowed to pass in a body which so strongly represented them. Such a bond would take up the capital which now goes into banks for deposits, and is loaned by them, and becomes a source of their largest profit. It is no place for such a bond to find favor among bank presidents, directors and stockholders.

INFLATION.

A petition on remonstrances representing an immense amount of capital was presented last week from New York and Boston, against any inflation of the currency, which was most natural from a creditor class. Inflation increases the price of everything which a debtor has to sell to pay his debts, without increasing the amount of the debt or the rate of interest, whether it be an individual vote or a State or municipal bond paid by taxation. The higher the price the less it takes of a farmer's products to pay his taxes and his notes, and the less the creditor gets in cancelling his note or bond. If it was not for this fact this class would not be troubled overmuch. They all want contraction and a reduction of values, which don't reduce their notes or bonds but only takes so much more of the debtor's property to pay them. It is pretty hard to keep still between the pulling on both sides. So far, the debtor class seem to get some ahead in the probable authorization of the $44,000,000 reserve, as an addition to the currency.

REDUCTION OF EXPENDITURES.

There will be decided reductions in the expenditures, whatever may be the result of the efforts to prevent the commencement of new buildings which were ordered to be built by the last Congress. The economists were beaten two to one, on that question, which involved an expenditure for this year and the next of about eleven millions. Garfield wanted the money voted for new buildings for this year to be covered into the treasury, while all those who had an interest in the new buildings rallied under the lead of Platt of Virginia to have the matter sent to his committee instead of the committee on appropriations. New Hampshire divided on the question, Baker going with Garfield and Small with Platt, and Pike not voting, being absent, sick.

NEW HAMPSHIRE VISITORS.

New Hampshire has been well represented here the last week, by Ex-Gov. Stearns and son of Concord, Edgerly of Manchester and Beede of Sandwich, in attendance upon the Educational convention, Calvin Hale of Dover, Harrison Hale of Rochester, A. C. Clement of Plaistow, Ed. Lawrence of Concord (formerly of Epping) and wife, and others from the westerly side of the State. They are escaping your cold and stormy weather, which has not come this way. It is mild as the last of October and early November with you, and in striking contrast with the inclemency of the last winter.

Daring Robbery.

A train on the Iron Mountain railroad at Gadshill, 120 miles from St. Louis, was switched on a side track by five masked robbers, Friday night. As the train stopped, Conductor Alford stepped off to ascertain what was the matter, when he was confronted by a man wearing a mask, a pistol placed to his head, and he was marched off. The engineer, fireman, mail agent, express messenger and other train men were seized by five masked and heavily armed men, and also placed under guard. The robbers then went through the entire train and took from the passengers about $2000 and a large amount of jewelry. They also took from an Adams express messenger about $1000 and rifled the mails. The robbers then left in a southerly direction, and after the release of the train men the train started southward. The robbers left a note on the train, of which the following is a copy, the original being now in possession of Conductor Alford:

The Most Daring Robbery on Record. The south bound train on the Iron Mountain Railroad was robbed here this evening, by five heavily-armed men, of ——— dollars. The robbers arrived at the station a few minutes before the arrival of the train, and arrested the agent and put him under guard. They then threw the train on a switch. The robbers were all large men, none of them under six feet tall. They were all masked, and started in a southerly direction after they had robbed the train. All were mounted on fine blooded horses. There is a hell of an excitement in this part of the country. IRA A. MERRILL.

The robbers offered no violence to any one, and did no harm to the train men.

"Full of Years."

[Concord Patriot.]

Rugged though our county is and harsh its climate, yet our people not only gain from its soil an honest sustenance, but live in its pure atmosphere to enjoy the fruits of their labors to a good old age. Were all the names of those who departed hence full of years reported to the press, in 1873, the showing below appended would be made far more favorable to our brave old State. Many of those who have been reported have doubtless escaped the notice of those reported, as below, to us by D. F. Secomb, Esq., of this city. Any names omitted from the list of 1873 will be gladly received by him and added to it, to perfect the tables of that year. Those lacking even one day of ninety have been omitted, but the number who have exceeded the "three score and ten" is far beyond what the casual observer would think, as may be seen by the list appended:

Business Notices.

The Foremost Tonic of the Age.

Taking into consideration the character of its vouchers, the history of its cures and its immense annual sales, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters may be fairly entitled the Foremost Tonic of the Age. It is not only a tonic but a constitutional and local alterative, and its tendency is to substitute healthy for diseased action throughout the system. If the stomach is feeble and torpid it produces a vitalizing impression upon its mucous tissues. No sooner has the dyspeptic swallowed a dose of it than he knows by his sensations that his stomach has received an accession of vigor. It increases the desire for food and the ability to digest and assimilate it. If the liver is derelict, it improves the condition of the organ and imparts to it a new and healthful impulse. The bowels being obstructed, it promotes the flow of bile into the intestinal canal and thereby relieves them and re-establishes their natural action. Its effect upon the brain, the nerves and the kidneys is equally salutary. In short, it tones, alters and regulates the whole system.

Don't temporize with Piles.—Ointments, lotions, electuaries and all manner of quack nostrums are a waste of time and money. The only absolutely infallible cure for these painful diseases is ANAKESIS, discovered by DR. STRELE. It is universally announced by scientific men as the happiest discovery made in medicine for 200 years; it affords instant relief from pain in the worst cases and has cured more than 20,000 sufferers permanently. All doctors prescribe it.—Price $1.00. Sold by druggists everywhere. Depot, 46 Walker st., New York.

Dr. Helmbold, the originator of Buchu, has the satisfaction of knowing that all his imitators have failed to produce the benefits his preparation insures. Helmbold's Ext. Buchu cures. The others disappoint. Persons suffering from Kidney Complaint, Gravel, Premature Decay, Loss of Vigor or any souvenir of indiscretion, cannot apply the remedy too soon. The great point is to get the genuine Buchu Extract, which is Helmbold's and no other. For sale by all druggists.

VEGETINE is composed of the best vegetable ingredients the dispensary of Nature furnishes.

NO. 4 BULFINCH STREET, BOSTON.

When a thing is counterfeited, it is a proof of its excellence and popularity. The Peabody Medical Institute is a case in point. Founded in good faith many years ago, and the only establishment of the kind in the country, its success and ever-increasing popularity finally caused the name (Medical Institute) to be pirated and adopted by a lot of infamous quacks, empirics and pretenders, who have been endeavoring to cheat the public by sailing under a stolen flag. The founder of the Peabody Medical Institute can in no way be held responsible for the misuse of the name of a reputable and well-known curative establishment and legitimate medical institution, which has been from the start specially devoted to the treatment of nervous derangements and affections, from whatever causes proceeding. During its existence there have been issued from it several medical publications; quite recently a work on Diseases of the Nervous System, which have had almost a world wide circulation and popularity. These publications sufficiently attest the high character of the institution under whose patronage these medical works have been published. Meantime it is gratifying to know that several of the impudent charlatans, who have stolen its name to cover their nefarious practices, are getting their deserts in the penal institutions of the Commonwealth.—Boston Herald.

Piles, Piles, Piles, Piles.

Outward applications are time and money thrown away. The only permanent cure is Dr. Harrison's Peristaltic Lozenges. They strike at the cause. We could fill this paper with cures. They are pleasant, never gripe, nor, like all pills, do they require increase of dose. For elderly persons, females and children, and all others, they are exactly suited to obviate Costiveness, the prolific cause of ill health. Trial box, 30 cts. Large box, 60 cts., and mailed free for that last price.

Why Children Are Born "Bania."

[Kokomo Tribune.]

Grangers and farmers generally are doing all they can to improve their stock. Hogs, cattle, horses and sheep are getting better, and plumper every year; but who is trying to prevent marriages, the issues of which will produce children that must grow up to be drunkards or thieves, or deadbeats, or scalawags? Fools with more false modesty than brains will not allow the discussion of this subject in a newspaper, but they allow their children to marry in such a way that children are born runts with such a low vitality that they are compelled to have a stimulant, and they will have it if they seek it in the woods by gnawing a root like a dog, and then they scream for a prohibitory law. Until the world is made better by the improvement of human stock, stump speakers may as well talk about preventing birth or death as controlling every appetite.

The last lecture but one in the Lyceum course will be delivered this evening at the Temple by Dr. A. P. Stevens; subject, "Hand, Brain and Heart." Dr. Stevens needs no introduction to a Portsmouth audience,—but we will say he will give an interesting address.

The case of William S. Hadley vs. New Hampshire Fire Insurance Co. is on trial at Exeter.

"Kent" says in the Traveller that "a gentleman in the hack business here has fallen heir to $100,000. His business or his gentlemanly demeanor will not be disturbed by this favor of Dame Fortune." We hear the amount stated at $150,000. Glad to hear it, William, and wish you all the happiness money will bring.

Old Probs. thought he did a big thing when he got the thermometer to say the temperature was nine below zero on Monday.

Rev. George Christie, of Kittery Point, gave an interesting lecture on "Travels in Italy" to a large and attentive audience, at the school house in District No. 7, Friday evening. The lecture was given for the benefit of the district.

One hundred and eight sleighs from Dover passed the residence of N. D. Miller, Esq., on Sunday, in five hours and twenty minutes. The sleighing was excellent, but the weather was "bitter cold." The opening of the direct road to Dover is already bearing fruit, and Lamos of the Point Cottage is in high glee.

Mr. Joshua Gerry, of Kittery, writes us as follows: "In the CHRONICLE of Jan. 22d, my name is mentioned as a brother-in-law of Andrew J. Stimpson, or as one of that 'Royal family.' I was not aware that I was related to A. J. S., unless by the way of old father Adam, and I certainly do not wish to be on their family record. It is true that I work for a living, but I have never been mean enough to sell myself to said Andrew J.,—or Andrew Johnson."

A paper published monthly at Sturgeon Bay, Wis., called The Evergreen and Forest Tree Grower, has come to hand. It is devoted to the cultivation and perpetuity of trees and forests, showing their value on climate, health, etc. Such a publication is important, and we wish the people in our parts could be induced to give attention to the object this paper is designed to promote.

The town hall in Rye was dedicated Nov. 19th. The three addresses on the civil, ecclesiastical and educational history of the town have been published in a pamphlet of 19 closely printed pages. It should be in every family of the town, and with all who have ever lived there.

Carpenter Joseph E. Cox, U. S. N., is detached from this naval station and ordered to Key West.

A sleighing party propose to start from Market Square at about 2 o'clock P. M., Wednesday, and drive to Dover. Five or six gentlemen have already expressed their intention of being on hand with teams, and there is room enough on the road between here and Dover for a lot more. All persons of good reputation, who can beg, borrow or steal a team, are invited to join in.

Mrs. Fannie U. Roberts will be ordained on Thursday evening, at the Universalist church in Kittery. It is expected there will be quite a number of ministers of the denomination present. There is to be divine service in the afternoon, also.

Eastern Railroad Meeting.

The annual meeting was held at Boston, Monday, and about 700 stockholders were present. The Directors' report says the receipts in 1873 were $2,943,733.79; in 1872, $2,827,641.86. Expenditures in 1873, $2,350,457.14; in 1872, 2,004,746.38. Profits in 1873, $593,276.65; in 1872, $822,895.58. While the total earnings increased $115,091.93 last year, the receipts from passengers fell off $48,945.58 consequent on the opening of the Boston & Maine extension. The receipt for freight business increased $163,995.53. The cost of operating the road is about 75 per cent. of the gross receipts.

During the past year they have built six and one-half miles of new sidings, have laid 2392 tons of iron rails and 2507 tons of steel rails, making in all nearly fifty miles of new rails, and have now on their main line, between Boston and Portsmouth, forty-three miles of steel rails. The increase of train expenses is $30,618.26.

The Committe of the Directors of both corporations have agreed that the business at and between the competing stations upon the two roads of the two companies shall be transacted under the direction of an Executive Committee composed of three directors of each company, who shall have the general charge of all that business. This committee shall regulate the hours of the through trains between Boston and Portland running over either road; shall fix the rates of freights and fare, and shall transact the business which each shall possess.

The road which does the business shall receive a percentage agreed upon, which as nearly as can be computed or ascertained is the actual cost of doing that particular business, not of doing the local business on the road. If anything, it is rather less than cost. The profits are to be divided between the two roads equally. There is to be a joint auditor appointed by both companies to examine the accounts of the business to determine what is and what is not competing business, and make allowance for over charges and drawbacks.

Those who are familiar with the subject state that the saving will be ten per cent. of the gross receipts of the two roads, which will not be less than $500,000 a year.

The Seabrook disaster cost the road $80,000.

The vote was announced for Directors as follows:

Samuel Hooper of Boston had	10,982
Franklin Haven of Boston	10,860
Thornton K. Lothrop of Boston	11,039
Henry L. Williams of Salem	10,921
John Wooldredge of Lynn	11,040

James W. Johnson of Enfield, N. H.	11,060
Anson P. Morrill of Readfield, Me.	11,060

Mr. Wooldredge is to be President.

John D. Edgerly, messenger of the Stark mills in Manchester, was arrested on Friday for purloining money from the agent. His wife paid back to the company all the money he had taken.

Something over a year ago, Jonathan Cummings of the Shaker society at Enfield lost $800 at the house of L. F. Brooks in Sharon, Vt., which he had collected for the Shakers for grain, seeds, brooms, etc. Suspicion fell upon Brooks as being the party who took the money, as he and Cummings slept together. The Shakers failed to get an indictment against him before the grand jury and then began a civil action for the recovery of the money. At the last term of the Windsor county court a verdict was rendered against Brooks for the amount of $1046 09.

Murder in Laconia.

David E. Blodgett murdered his wife, Almira Blodgett, at the house of their daughter, on Water street, Saturday. The parties belong in Baltimore. Blodgett unexpectedly arrived on the noon train, and went directly to the house of his son-in-law, where his wife was. She sat by the stove, nursing her infant child. He put his arm around her and said, "Myra, will you go home with me?" She said, "No." He then cut her throat with a jack-knife, inflicting a fatal wound, drenching the babe with her blood. The alarm was given and Blodgett arrested. No reason was assigned for the act. Deceased was forty years of age, and leaves five children, aged from sixteen months to twenty-three years.

—A fire burned down some business premises in Sydney, Australia, and, among others, the shop of a man who was so well covered by insurance that the company disputed his claim. Amongst the stock alleged to be lost were ten thousand mourning hat-bands. The counsel for the company cross-examined the sufferer by fire about these hat bands—wasn't it an extraordinary large number? What probability was there of deaths creating a demand in a single shop for ten thousand hat bands? Replied the witness: "I did not keep the hat bands for those who grieve for the death of their friends; but those who go into mourning for the grease on their hats." He got his insurance money.

Marriage Customs in Old Britain.

When the Anglo-Saxons settled in Britian the patriarchal system was in full force. The father was absolute master in his own family; he sold his daughter in marriage, his son in slavery. When St. Augustine landed in the island the maiden was a simple article of property, her price fixed at so many head of cattle. The primitive mode of procuring a wife was this: When a youth had fixed his choice upon a maiden, he went with a band of friends and carried her off, probably with her secret connivance. The relations followed in hot pursuit, a feud between the families ensued, and was only appeased by the lover agreeing to pay the value fixed upon by the father for obtaining possession of the maid, he giving "wed," or security for his performance of the contract—hence the word wedding. This custom of stealing the bride is as ancient as the Spartans, and is still kept up in Brittany, where it forms one of the ceremonies of the marriage festivities. The bargain made, the amount of the "morning gift" settled upon the contracting parties took each other by the hand and proclaimed themselves man and wife; the ring was placed on the bride's hand; and the father, having received the purchase money, delivered his daughter over to her husband. The transfer of authority was made by a symbolical gift; the father delivered the bride's shoe to the bridegroom, and the latter touched her over the head with it—a ceremony which took its origin in the custom of placing the foot on the neck of a slave, and was typical of the wife's subjection to her husband—a ceremony still preserved in the popular custom of "throwing the shoe." The day after the wedding the bridegroom gave the "morning gift"—supposed to be voluntary, but according to the value stipulated. It was general among the Teuton race, and often estates of such value were thus bestowed. When Athelstan's sister, Eadgirth, married the Emperor Otho, his morning gift was the City of Magdeburg.

—Quilp and his wife had a bit of contention the other day. "I even that you have more brilliancy than I," said the woman, "but I have the better judgement." "Yes," said Quilp, "your choice in marriage shows that." Quilp was informed that he was a brute.

—Boy—"Mamma, papa is getting very rich, isn't he?" Mamma—"I don't know; why, child?" Boy—"Cause he gives me so much money. Almost every morning after breakfast, when Sallie is sweeping the parlor, he gives me a sixpence to go out and play." Sallie received a short notice to quit.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the chemical action of iron, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing of disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Skin Diseases, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and individuals need not hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be stopped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

Now, don't let anybody make you believe that we can't do this and give you a GOOD article of FLOUR at the same price they can; because if you do, you will be deceived. We bought these pictures in New York at such prices that we can afford to do it.

Why? 1st, because it so increases our sales that even with a small profit on the Flour, we can make day wages. 2d, because when people come to buy Flour they see the prices of other goods and buy them. 3d, because everybody knows we always do just what we advertise to do.

CATARRH!
A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years, Cured.
And Droppings in Throat, Chokings, Stranglings, Pains in the Head, Back, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the
CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY.
TO MESSRS. LITTLEFIELD & CO., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.:
I reside at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Hamilton, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 19 years old; and it had all the time. It run all that period, and nights it would fill my nose and drop down in my throat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I could sometimes be led to save myself from strangulation. It affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely. And were they that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of small and so-called Catarrh remedies, with particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has restored me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.
MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.
Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1872.
I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, choklings and stranglings. Have tried many quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.
Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left, Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

The Havanese on Actors.

[Max Maretzek.]

Queer people those Havanese—odd ways they have of exhibiting their dislikes. For instance, after the first act they will quietly assemble in the lobbies of the Tacon Theatre, or in the adjacent casino, and make up their minds what to do with the criminals.

If it's a very bad case like Verratt's, they slip out and buy a quantity of whistles, cat calls, fish horns, and other infernal arrangements, with which they salute the offender on his re-entry, keeping up a ceaseless din as long as he is on the stage, which is remarkably exhilarating but anything but pleasant to the recipient of their favors. On the contrary, if they desire to do the thing quietly and genteelly they sit perfectly still, neither hiss nor applaud, but, by preconcerted signal among themselves, one by one quietly steal out on tip toe, as if earnestly desirous of not being noticed until the parquette and galleries, where these gallant critics congregate, are entirely deserted—a mode of action exceedingly refreshing, as you may imagine, to the artist who sees his auditors sneaking off one after the other.

Bazaine's Prison.

[Cor. London Telegraph.]

The ex-commander-in-chief of the army of the Rhine is a prisoner in the strictest sense of the term, and no one has been allowed to see him, with the exception of Gen. d' Andel, from Nice, who paid him a visit, yesterday, and the commandant of the gendarmerie, who escorted him to the island, but has now left. I am inclined to think, from inquiries I have made, that he occupies the very room in which the Man of the Iron Mask languished so many years; and from the window over which the unknown prisoner flung into the sea the silver plate on which he had previously scratched his name and history. Bazaine now contemplates Cannes, and the luxuriantly covered hills of Cannet, backed by the splendor of the distant Alps. It is a lofty apartment, and not nearly so uncomfortable as might be expected; for it contains a fireplace and a large window, the latter grated, however, with three strong iron bars. The prisoner has been allowed a servant, a medical man when necessary, and a priest, for whom an altar has been erected, according to some accounts, at the end of the narrow passage from which the cell opens. These persons, together with M. de St. Mars, governor of the fortress, the prisoner's family, and Col. Vilette, are, I believe, all who will be permitted to see and converse with the ex-marshal, for a long time to come.

Fresh Currents.

[Cincinnati Times.]

A Pennsylvania couple were married a short time ago in a graveyard; but, then, you know, it's cemeterial.

A vivacious four-year-old was cursing a "dod-rotted" swill-barrel into which he had tumbled, when Quiz gravely informed him that "There's soap for every sinner."

Nebuchadnezzar is mentioned as the first Granger, but incorrectly. Eve, who made a reputation in the apple business, and who broke up Adam monopoly, was the first to patronize husbandry.

Rochester, New York, is suffering from amateur performances of the oratorio of Belshazzar. We have looked in vain for a remark from the Dem.-Chron. man that it was mene to be so much tekeled.

Terrible Effects of Fog.

[London Correspondence Chicago Journal.]

The statistics of the great fog we recently had in London are most startling and melancholy. During the several preceeding weeks the deaths in London had been from 150 to 200 below the average, as ascertained by the Registrar General. During the fog week they ran up to no less than 780 above the average. During the last week, which has been free from fogs, and otherwise pleasant, they were again 156 below the average. These facts show conclusively that London has been for some months unusually healthy, and that during the fog week nearly 1,000 persons above the ordinary number lost their lives from the poisonous effects of the dense cloud that not only hung over us like a funeral pall, but penetrated every house in spite of extraordinary precautions, and acted like so much prussic acid upon persons of peculiar constitutions. There is something absolutely fearful in this brief retrospect, as it is clear that such a fog as the one in question is as fatal in its ravages as the most virulent epidemic that ever prevailed. As the fog actually lasted only between three and four days, the fatality was enormous, amounting to some 300 a day from this cause alone. It is evident that we must take to heart the lesson thus taught, and on future similar occasions not only shut ourselves up in our rooms and keep up ample fires, but also use other methods of fumigation. The disfiguring appendages called respirators, worn over the mouth, so often seen in London streets, have suddenly come into great demand, and the manufacturers of them are said to be just now reaping a rich harvest from their sale. Unfortunately, the use of tobacco does not appear to be a preventive, as several inveterate smokers were among the victims.

A Little One's Love.

The Poughkeepsie Eagle tells an affecting little story of a child between two and three years old whom a lady found walking on the street, evidently lost, and crying bitterly:

"Taking her by the hand, the lady asked her where she was going. 'I am going down town to find my papa,' was the reply, between sobs, of the child. 'What is your papa's name?' asked the lady. 'His name is papa,' replied the innocent little thing. 'But what is his other name?' queried the lady; 'what does your mamma call him?' 'She calls him papa,' persisted the baby. The lady then took the little one by the hand and led her along, saying: 'You had better come with me; I guess you came this way.' 'Yes, but I don't want to go back; I want to find my papa,' replied the little girl, crying afresh as if her heart would break. 'What do you want of your papa?' asked the lady. 'I want to kiss him.' Just then a sister of the child come along looking for her, and led her away. From subsequent inquiries it appeared that the little one's papa, whom she was so earnestly in search of, had recently died. In her lonesomeness and love for him she, tired of waiting for him to come home, had gone to find him and greet him with the accustomed kiss."

Frozen to Death.

Mr. Morton, of Cornwall Bridge, Conn., went to the woods to chop a few days since. Towards night his wife told their little son, aged three and one-half years, that he might go to meet his father. The father returned by a different route, and learning the facts set out in search of his boy. The darkness lowered, the wind blew, and the frost seized upon everything exposed. Meanwhile the little fellow wandered about, calling for his father. Forty men turned out that bitter cold night to search for the little boy. In the next forenoon he was discovered on the north side of the mountain about a mile from home lying at the foot of a rock, quite dead. On the rock were found one little shoe and stocking. Tired and lonesome and sleepy, he had tried to go to bed on the cold stone, and rolling off on his face below it, the bitter wind had sung him to sleep forever, and the chill frost sealed his eyelids.

The Trials of an Editor.

(Danbury News.)

The sensations of an editor on first glancing over his paper and detecting errors in it are somewhat different from those experienced by the reader on making like discoveries. The latter is either amused at the blunder or incensed at the carelessness which causes it, and in both cases arrives at the conclusion that the trouble is avoidable, and that the editor is to blame for not avoiding it. He never saw an editor take his first glance over a copy of the edition. Perhaps the edition is worked off when this opportunity is afforded the weary man. He has either trusted the proofs to some one else, or read them himself, but the feeling of dread is just as great in the latter as in the former case. The proof reader may not consult the copy and so perpetuate the blunders of the compositor, and perhaps the compositor may neglect to undo the wrong he has done, although his attention is plainly called to it on the proof. When about to make this preparation survey, the editor does not take a cigar in his mouth and elevate his heels to the desk, as is the popular tradition. Dying men don't do that way, you know, and we have come to the conclusion that an editor examining his paper feels very much like a man who is about to pass into eternity. He reads along carefully and slowly like a man feeling his way across a piece of doubtful ice. Suddenly his face becomes distorted with an awful pain. He doesn't cry out, he doesn't rant. The anguish within him is so broad, and deep, and intense, that he dares not trust it to words. He just simply reaches up and takes a handful of his own hair, and tugs at it until the tears come in his eyes. Then he picks up the paper, which he has taken the precaution to kick across the room on discovering the error, and resumes the torturing search; for after all it is but a search for errors and agony, and not an agreeable and instructive perusal. Suddenly he groans—not an expectant groan like that from one who hopes for help to reach him through it, but the groan of one who is beyond the reach of hope, who feels that the warm sunshine, the kind glance of friendship, the beautiful flowers and the song of the birds are gone forever and forever from him. It is a smothered groan, accompanied by a kick out of the leg, as if the party had in that moment taken an eternal leave of all things earthly. There is still another search with aching eyes and throbbing brain, and then the paper is smashed down on the floor, and the infuriated man bounds up from his chair, and catches both hands into his hair, and dances around like a mad man. He doesn't call upon heaven and earth to witness what he is going to do, and to blight him if he should not do it. He doesn't dash into the composing room and scorch the men with his wrath. Even this slight relief is denied him. The paper is worked off and the scrutiny that would cheerfully attack a needle in a haystack, would fall paralyzed before a search for the author of the great wrong. He doesn't say anything at all—not a single intelligible word escapes his ashen lips, as he holds his hair, and prances about in the dingy solitude of his room. And when he is done, he sits down again and groans, and afterward puts on his hat and rushes forth into the street—rushes anywhere to get away from the face of men, to get away from himself and everything belonging to himself.

Senator Sargent of California has undertaken to get through Congress an appropriation to pay the flue imposed upon Susan B. Anthony for illegal voting, but there doesn't seem to be much prospect of his succeeding.

Gail Hamilton gives us the reassuring information that an Englishman told her, the other day, that our Congress is the most dignified legislative body in the world; that the Commons of England and the Deputies of France are far more clamorous and disreputable.

Mr. Abner Beers, who was arrested and confined in Danbury jail, Conn., recently, for a refusal to pay taxes which he claimed were unjustly imposed, has, it is said, altered his will and cancelled a bequest of $3000 to the town.

Ex-Gov. James M. Harvey has been chosen U. S. Senator from Kansas. His election is regarded as the triumph of honesty in Kansas politics.

The Senate has ordered an investigation of Gen. Howard's case, and the House has ordered an investigation of the affairs of the District of Columbia.

General Beauregard, the president of the New Orleans and Carrollton Railroad Company, says that fireless locomotives have now been in use two months on a portion of that road of about three miles. They have resulted in a gain over horses of twenty minutes to the round trip. They are more manageable than horses, being more readily stopped and started, and give the driver opportunity to make change and attend to the passengers. They start with 125 pounds' pressure, make the round trip of six miles and get back to the starting-point with 40 to 50 pounds. One dummy is equal to nine mules. A calculation for twenty years makes the running expenses of a road with these engines one-fourth of that of equal conveyance with mules. If these figures are at all near correctness, the days of horse-cars, on the score of economy alone, are numbered.

The public debt statement shows a decrease for the past month of $1,845,211.

The Cubans claim to have confirmatory advices of General Gomez's victory over a Spanish column 200 strong, near Puerto Principe. Colonel Mentanes, the commander, was captured, bandaged and shot by a platoon of soldiers. He had invariably treated very harshly prisoners falling into his hands. The capture and putting to death of a Spanish foraging party from Puerto Principe is also confirmed. The head agent of the Cubans in New York asserts that the Spaniards have not more than 18,000 able-bodied soldiers in Cuba.

A case of apparent resurrection from death causes wonder in Collinsville, Conn. Mrs. Charles Blair, Jr., lay for several days at the point of death from pleurisy, and finally seemed to have ceased to breathe. The physician was about leaving the house, when returning once more to the patient's side he thought he saw signs of life. Stimulants were administered, when suddenly the patient revived, coughed up a mass of matter and rapidly recovered. At last accounts she was likely to be well again.

—It has long been known that the simplest method of sharpening a razor is to put it for an hour in water to which has been added one-twentieth of its weight of muriatic or sulphuric acid, then lightly wipe it off, and after a few hours set it on a hone. The acid here supplies the place of a whetstone by corroding the whole surface uniformly so that nothing further than a smooth polish is necessary. The process never injures good blades, while badly-hardened ones are frequently improved by it, although the cause of this improvement remains unexplained. N. —"If you don't see what you want, ask for it," is posted up in a conspicuous place in a Logansport grocery. A native stepped in the establishment, last week. He saw the card and remarked: "I want a ten dollar bill and I don't see it." "Neither do I," was the laconic reply. The native "looked further," but as he left he advised the grocer to "take down that sign."

Nature's Cathartic.

No medicine is needed to keep the bowels in order as long as nature's cathartic, the bile, flows freely and regularly from its source in the liver, and is of the right strength and quality. But the great biliary gland is easily disordered, and the consequences of its irregularities are serious. To bring it back to its natural condition when thus affected, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters should be taken at least twice a day until the desired object is attained. Constipation is due to a scanty supply of bile, or to a lack of the stimulating element in that fluid. In either case purgation is useless. The liver must be compelled to yield the supply of bile necessary to remove the waste matter from the system at least once in twenty-four hours before a radical cure of costiveness can be accomplished. Hostetter's Bitters produce this effect. Its action upon the stomach and liver is direct and salutary, and through these organs it regulates and invigorates the whole frame.

An infallible PILE remedy.—Sufferers with this painful disease who have tried clearances, lotions, ointments, and a long list of nostrums for its relief, in vain, will thank us for calling attention to ANAKESIS, the happy discovery of Dr. SILSBEE, an experienced and scientific M. Sold by druggists everywhere. ANAKESIS Depot, 46 Walker st., New York.

At this season of the year, when so many of our people are suffering from colds, we call attention to AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL as a sure cure not only for coughs and colds, but all affections of the lungs and throat. Having used it in our family for many years, we can speak from personal knowledge of its efficiency. There may be other remedies that are good, but in all our experience this has proved to be by far the best. Its qualities are uniform and wholly reliable. It is pleasant to take, and should be kept at command, by every family, as a protection against a class of complaints which seem harmless in the beginning, but become afflicting and dangerous if neglected.—[N. PEABODY MEDICAL INSTITUTE

NO. 4 BULFINCH STREET, BOSTON.

When a thing is counterfeited, it is a proof of its excellence and popularity. The Peabody Medical Institute is a case in point. Founded in good faith many years ago, and the only establishment of the kind in the country, its success and ever-increasing popularity finally caused the name (Medical Institute) to be pirated and adopted by a lot of infamous quacks, empirics and pretenders, who have been endeavoring to cheat the public by sailing under a stolen flag. The founder of the Peabody Medical Institute can in no way be held responsible for this misuse of the name of a reputable and well-known curative establishment and legitimate medical institution, which has been from the start specially devoted to the treatment of nervous derangements and affections, from whatever causes proceeding. During its existence there have been issued from it several medical publications; quite recently a work on Diseases of the Nervous System, which have had almost a world wide circulation and popularity. These publications sufficiently attest the high character of the institution under whose patronage these medical works have been published. Meantime it is gratifying to know that several of the impudent charlatans, who have stolen its name to cover their nefarious practices, are getting their deserts in the penal institutions of the Commonwealth.—Boston Herald.

A Source of Great Anxiety.

My daughter has received great benefit from the use of VEGETINE. Her declining health was a source of great anxiety to all of her friends. A few bottles of the VEGETINE restored her health, strength and appetite. N. H. TILDEN, Ins. and Real Estate Agt., 49 Sears Building. Boston, Mass., June 5, 1872.

MOTHERS, READ THIS!

A Great Blessing!

WORTH A DOLLAR A DROP.

Mothers, are your little ones fretful? And is your patience almost exhausted in vain efforts to please them? I can sympathize with you, and can tell you what will make your little child quiet, give it a good appetite, and procure for it hours of sweet, sound sleep.

My little girl is two and a half years old; and during this time I have not had two consecutive nights rest. She has been sick a number of times and no one seemed to know what was troubling her. It was hard to hear her fretful cry, and not know what to do for her. I doctored her for worms, but it did no good; and I was nearly tired out with sleepless nights and trouble for some days.

I heard of the VEGETINE, and determined to try it. It has proved a blessing to me and my child. It has cleansed from her stomach and bowels the sores which kept gathering there; and now she sleeps soundly from her bed time until very late in the morning, besides a long nap at mid-day. Her appetite is good; and, in fact, she is like a different child. I, of ten say, the true value of this medicine to me is a dollar a drop. Try it. Cleanse the humors from your children's blood while they are young. Try it, and you will join with me in calling it a great blessing. MRS. ELLEN L. CLAPP,

175 Tudor street.

South Boston, July 10, 1871.

Circulation of the Blood.

The circulation of the blood is the life of the body, and its stoppage is death. We are healthy when the blood circulates freely; any interruption preventing its free course is the commencement of disease. "Blood is the life of the flesh." Can we expect to enjoy good health when bad or corrupt humors circulate with the blood, causing pain and disease; and these humors being deposited through the entire body, produce pimples, eruptions, ulcers, indigestion, costiveness, headache, neuralgia, rheumatism, and numerous complaints? No disease can be in the body without first being generated in the blood; and no disease can possibly be in the body if the blood is pure. It is of great importance to know what medicine will purify and renovate the blood, eradicate the disease, restor vitality, menually and physically, and instil fresh vigor into all the vital functions of the body. This medicine is the VEGETINE. Le great blood purifier.

It extends its influence into every part of the human organism, commencing with its foundation; correcting diseased action, and restoring vital powers, creating a healthy formation and purification of the blood, driving out disease, and leaving Nature to perform its allotted task.

VEGETINE is composed of Roots, Barks and Herbs. It is very pleasant to take; every child likes it. Sold by all Druggists. 4w 4o5p nrm.

Local Matters.

Famous at Last.

"Some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them." How forcibly the above saying of the great poet was brought to our mind by a recent report of Congressional doings, as published in the Record, showing that greatness had been violently "thrust upon" our overweeningly-modest neighbor, the Times! Had due credit been given our contemporary for its national service in elevating Judge Waite to the Chief Justiceship of the United States,—had the House formally resolved that the "one bright spot" in Grant's admistration was due to a reflection of the original effulgence of the Times, we should have been satisfied that that paper had "achieved" the greatness its modest merit deserves; but its just claims were passed over, and it was made famous solely for having republished an anonymous communication (ostensibly from a republican office-holder on the navy yard) to another paper, with a few characteristic assertions and comments of its own added thereto.

Acting on the assumption that "one must go away from home to learn the news," Mr. Beck, the democratic leader of the House, produced a copy of the Times as authority for an attack on the doings of the Navy Department. Happy Times! to be recognized not only as a maker of Chief Justices,—another Warwick, as it were,—but as the vehicle for conveying full and authentic information to the Washington crowd as to what they have been doing. Mr. Beck read as follows:

"It is known that the politicians who went to Washington in December succeeded in having a large sum set apart specifically 'to be applied to the additional force to be employed from New Hampshire' in January, February, and March. In round numbers, the pay-roll for these three months will amount to $300,000. And while this crowd of men are kept on the navy yard at this station, and this immense sum is drawn from the United States Treasury to pay them, hundreds have been discharged from Brooklyn and Charlestown because there was no work, and because the money recently appropriated by Congress for the navy yards had been expended."

At this point he was interrupted by a member, who asked: "What paper is the gentleman reading from?" to which Mr. Beck replied: "From the Portsmouth, New Hampshire, Evening Gazette, a democratic paper." And such is fame! Lord Byron defined that article to consist of "Being severely wounded on the battle-field and having your name spelled wrong in the bulletin;" and it seems he was not far astray. The Evening Gazette! "O! why should the spirit of mortal be proud," when such things can happen and no avenging earthquake, or something, follow? Is it possible that even Congress knows just how much weight our neighbor's "It is known," "We have positive information," "It cannot be denied," and numerous similar announcements, carry with them, and that Mr. Beck knowingly took the name of the GAZETTE in vain, to give some show of probability that the statements he had read had some foundation in fact? The whole thing seems inexplicable; but we rejoice that our evening contemporary at last occupies the place it merits—that of the leading paper in the Union,—and hope that the next time a Congressman adduces its "it is known" as incontrovertible evidence, he will be careful to place the crown of glory where it belongs.

But how comes it that we have wholesale discharges of New Hampshire men from the navy yard, just on the eve of the New Hampshire election, when "it is known" that the politicians "succeeded in having a large sum set apart specifically 'to be applied to the additional force to be employed from New Hampshire' in January, February and March?" We have it; the Navy Department has at last arrived at a realizing sense of what a terrible engine the Times is, and hastens to remove all cause for its censure. Only another instance of the power of the press.

Which Did Best?

We hear of a donation party worth mentioning, which occurred recently in a neighboring town. An enthusiastic church member desired to start a donation for his pastor, and called on another member for help. The latter knew of a family needing a donation a great deal more, and said: "We pay our pastor a good salary. I pay my share. If that is not enough let's make it more; but let's make the donation to the poor family." Church member number one thought there might not be so much glory in the suggestion, and so carried out his original plan. Number two came to Portsmouth, had a couple of hundred circulars printed, went home and sent them around town, asking those inclined to help the poor family to assemble at a certain time and bring something with them. A large number came together and brought with them $80 worth of groceries—and number two harnessed his team and carried the donations and $12 to the surprised family. Which, think ye, did the most good?

Laconics.

The cantata of Esther is to be given this evening at Newmarket, Mr J. C. Butler of this city appearing as King and Miss Carrie E. Brackett as Queen. The Apollo club of this city will render several selections.

The lycoum lecture by Dr. A. P. Stevens, will be delivered this evening. The storm of yesterday caused a postponement.

A friend who was present at the partial burning of Trefethen's block in Kittery on Saturday, says he was much amused by the contrast afforded by the action of Lieut. Rockwell and Naval Constructor Webb with the inaction of a lieutenant of the revenue service, the latter standing respectfully aloof and carefully guarding his brass buttons from being tarnished by salt water, while the former two, drenched to the skin, set a proper example of energy and coolness as long as there was anything to do. From our personal knowledge of the gentlemen named we are satisfied that prompt and able leaders will never be lacking, in any such emergency, when either of them are around. The charter of Riverside Lodge, I. O. O. F., was rescued by Mr. George Stringer, a member of one of the Portsmouth Extinguisher companies, his hand being held by Mr. Frank Junkins of Sagamore No. 2, while he was groping about in the dense smoke filling the lodge room. Mr. Junkins' face was slightly out by glass, while breaking in the window through which Mr. Stringer entered.

The Dover Board of Trade will not have the usual winter course of lectures another season, as the enterprise has barely paid its way this year. The conviction is that the lecture fees are too high and that this, more than any lack of popular appreciation, explains why so many lecture committees find themselves embarrassed at present.

Mr. Nathaniel Hill, superintendent of buildings for the Boston Gas Light Company, died on Saturday. He was 79 years old last June, was a native of Portsmouth, and in early manhood went to Boston, where he pursued his trade as carpenter.

The seventh Annual Ball of Dearborn S. F. E. Co., No. 1, will be given on the evening of Friday, the 20th inst., at Mechanics' Hall, which will be handsomely decorated for the occasion. Everything the company can do will be done to make this the equal of any Ball given here this season.

One of those old-fashioned snow-storms that children read of as among the by-gones, and old folks remember with proud satisfaction, commenced Monday night with a rising temperature. At noon of Tuesday it had increased and the air seemed full of the falling snow. Looking from our sanctum window up Warren street, we could not see as far as the Temple. The snow-fall continued throughout the day, the piercing cold giving way to warmer weather. The railroads were all blocked, the forenoon trains being an hour late and the evening trains arriving far into the night. February promises to redeem winter's reputation for seasonable weather.

The police want James Adams, who has absconded with some money collected of the milk customers of J. W. Chapman of Greenland.

Mr. John E. Milton was chosen a director of the S. P. C. A. at the regular meeting of the Board of Directors held Monday evening.

Mr. Charles Sinclair's speech at the Eastern Railroad meeting was opportune, and won the congratulations from stockholders desiring that arrangements be continued by which dividends can be assured.

Sagamore S. F. E. Co., No. 2, is making elaborate preparations for a grand Ball on the evening of Monday, Feb. 23d. Edmands' Band, of Boston, will furnish the music, and supper will be served by mine host Pierce of the Rockingham, at that famous hostelry.

False Teeth and Molasses Candy.

[Danbury News.]

A Newark, New Jersey, husband brought home a hunk of molasses candy for his wife the other evening. His wife wears false teeth. The candy was of an adhesive nature. She helped herself to a generous hunk, and planted both rows of teeth in it. There they remained. Strenuous were her efforts to release them, but she was not successful. She wanted her mouth free that she might say something to him. She wanted to say something to him that the candy not only prevented, but the tone of which from its prominent quality it debauched. But she could not get her jaws apart. Then she went to the sink and dropped the whole mass, teeth and candy, in a basin. Again she looked at him as if she was on the point of saying something he would be interested in, but every effort was broken up and destroyed by the orphaned jaws. Imagine a woman—a direct descendant of Eve—in such a fix. Think of the mighty thoughts surging and battling through her brain; think of the torrent of eloquence bursting from her throat with a roar and striking out into the air a vapor; think of the blazing eyes, the distended nostrils, the trembling frame, the nervous hands. Picture her thus, tearing the miserable candy from the glistening teeth, and comprehend if you can, O man! the velocity with which the freed teeth were slapped into their place, and with which that wretched man subdued his merriment and tore out out of that house.

—After Seth Green gets through with his experiments on raising salmon, wouldn't it be well for him to try his hand at whales. If he would only stock our Atlantic waters with whales he would be doing a great thing.

Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

For a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. Old Time Chronicles, No. 104.

BY UNCLE JOSEPH.

In the year 1808 the Councillors of this State were the following honorable gentlemen: Daniel Gookin, North Hampton; Joseph Badger, Gilmanton; Benjamin Pierce, Hillsborough; Amasa Allen, Walpole; Wm. Tarlton, Piermont. Their term of office expired early in June, 1809. But on the 14th of January of that year, Mr. Badger had died. So for the remainder of the term there were but four members. Just at the close of the political year, a Judge of Probate was to be appointed for Rockingham County, and High Sheriffs for Hillsborough and Grafton Counties. Hon. John Langdon was Governor for the sixth time. He was an able, honorable and high-minded man. The Governor appoints such officers with advice or consent of the Council. A majority of the Council can negative his selections. We cannot know the inside workings of that occasion. Whether he proposed some and the Council did not consent, cannot be stated. But this we do know, the three men appointed to those places were found and chosen from the four Councillors. Hon. Daniel Gookin was made Judge of Probate for Rockingham County, Hon. Benj. Pierce, High Sheriff of Hillsborough County, and Hon. Wm. Tarlton High Sheriff of Grafton County. So far as we know all were suitable men for the offices, but it would have appeared better if they could have had the places without their own direct agency.

The other Councillor, Hon. Amasa Allen, had no appointment, perhaps did not desire any. He died in 1839 and was the last survivor of the Councillors elected in 1808.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever.

It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.

It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff, and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

Ask for each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

Why? Let, because it so increases our sales that even with a small profit on the Flour, we can make day wages. 2d, because when people come to buy Flour they see the prices of other goods and buy them. 3d, because everybody knows we always do just what we advertise to do.

CATARRH!
A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years. Cured.
And Droppings in Throat, Choking, Strangulage, Pains in the Side, Loins, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the
CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY.
To MESSRS. LITTLEFIELD & CO., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.:
I reside at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Henniker, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 10 years old; had it bad all the time. It run all that period, and nights it would fill up and drop down in my throat, giving a feeling of choking, so that I would spring up in bed to save myself from strangulation. It affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely. So bad was they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.
MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.
Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.
I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, choakings and strangulings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.
Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left. Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

Evans The Murderer.

[Concord People.]

This notorious criminal now confined in this city, and who will be executed on February 17, so far has made no confession of his crime. He has always, since his condemnation, been hopeful that his sentence would be commuted, and he has even expressed the belief that he would be fully pardoned. On Thursday last he was informed by a Strafford county officer that his doom was certain, and any hopes he might entertain to the contrary would be utterly disappointed. Evans said he had the idea that the Executive would have said so long ago had not there been a disposition in the mind of the Governor to exercise his clemency. Assurance was reiterated that there was the very strongest reason why an opposite opinion should exist in the mind of Evans, who then said he supposed he must submit to the worst. He expressed no feeling in regard to his early approaching doom, but proceeded to review the evidence given on the trial, particularly that of a principal witness, who, he said, had done him great injustice. He spoke with passion concerning this individual, declaring that if the chairs, table and every portable thing were removed from his cell, and he and the party in question were locked in it together, he would have no fear whatever in encountering and in overcoming him. His aspect was fiendish as he said so, showing that his terrible situation and prospect had not purified his heart of its murderous feeling.

Evans, so far as we can learn, has made no confession, but it is expected that, as the term of his earthly life draws to a close, he will disburden his mind of the guilt attached to the crime for which he has been condemned to die; and it is the opinion of such as are most likely to have a proper estimate of the man that he will confess other crimes even of greater magnitude. This however, is conjecture in a large degree.

Evans, since his imprisonment here, has greatly improved in health and strength, and it is said that not one in a thousand men of his years could cope with him in the latter particular. He has given up his whining habit, but the animal cunning, for which he has been noted, has not departed from him. His religious sentiment is that of a fanatical enthusiast.

Social Changs and Engs.

(N. Y. Tribune.)

The poor creatures, the Siamese twins, are not only dead, but we hope may soon be at rest, having given up their mystery into the hands of the physicians and men of science, who were roused into a fever of excited zeal by the news that they were at last at liberty to probe and cut the secret from them. To outsiders, after all, this zeal appears to be more in the interest of mere curiosity than science. Whether there was an artery running through the leathery strip of flesh which raised these weak-minded heathen into a world's wonder, or how it was connected to each trunk by nerves, really mattered very little, as long as it belonged to a monstrous freak of nature. If they had perpetuated a race of Siamese twins the matter might have had some importance. The really curious point of inquiry as to how far this union of body made the souls of the men dual or single is put by their death beyond the chance of solution.

In the case of the South Carolina mulatto girls, the unnatural and arbitrary union of certain faculties of the brain as well as the body is well worthy the attention of metaphysicians. For example, each of these poor creatures can sustain separate conversations at the same time, sing different parts, etc. But they sit down, cross the room, rise or stoop simultaneously without any hint or warning interchanged. The will, to a certain point, is thus shown to be identical, while the other faculties are separate. Here is room for a weightier inquiry than that of any eccentricities of nerves or arteries. Why, indeed, should our scientific men telegraph and write, and rush knives and lancets in hand to Mount Airy to cut into the strip of flesh between two dead Siamese when this vexed riddle of more mysterious kinship broadens all about them and takes themselves in?

The soul has as few features as the body; are they never shared by two of us in common against our will? The ferret eyes of their grandmother, which Sam and his brother John inherit, with the miserly cunning at which they hint; the cleft chin given to two or three others of the family by some luxurious ancestor, together with his sensuous tastes, are these less mysterious, less woeful, weighty burdens and bonds than the intolerable bolt of skin which yoked these twins into a bondage from which only death could deliver them? How much further is John indictable for meanness and follies into which his inherited eyes have guided him, than Chang and Eng for the slips and tumbles into which they dragged each other? Here is matter of moment, worthy of knife and probe. Doctor Holmes, we remember, once brought it up fairly on the table for discussion, but drew back, alarmed apparently at either his subject or his audience.

After all, the poor twins were no such monsters that we need go clucking and shuddering for weeks about their coffins. We are all Changs and Engs at heart. Every man, says the old superstition, hath his double in Africa or in his own household, and every man of us knows it to be true. What else do our perpetual school-boy friendships, our groping love affairs, our marriages mean, but the search for this "fetch," this Chang, toward whom an unseen, tormenting hand draws us? Is a strip of skin more explicable than the power which impels Victor to choose a plain, ill-tempered, silly woman out from hosts of fair and noble maidens as his wife, and to exalt her thereafter as anointed by some mysterious chrism a queen among women? And consider, beyond, that nine out of ten commonplace women are thus chosen and crowned by their mates; that the bond between them, irrational, ridiculous as it may seem to others, is powerful enough to enable them to bear all hardships, pains, incongruity of temper with smiling unity; to eat thousands of meals together without jarring, while their ideas are as diverse as the poles, to rear children, to go down unlike, antagonistic in body and mind, yet one, to a common grave. What can the twins, going about with their abnormal girdle, furnish of wonder like that?

Everybody shuddered too, at the horrid possibility that one of these poor creatures should die, and the other, still living, be hampered by a corpse. It was of this horror, some reports state, the survivor died. But did we ever consider the spectacle of a woman carrying through life the drunken, bloated body of a husband or a son out of whom the soul has died long ago, and left only the brutalized mass of matter, incapable of feeling for her, or of any feeling or life but the mechanical appetite of a beast? With what zeal, what tenderness, she drudges for the body of this death! Tends it, battles for it, totters under it, down to the grave. What binds her to it? Here is a mystery before which Chang and Eng's band of union may well pass out of sight and be forgotten.

Daily Chronicle.

Readables.

By the death of Mrs. William Stamps, at Woodville, Mississippi, Mr. Jefferson Davis loses his only sister and becomes the sole surviving member of the family.

The resolution of inquiry regarding the settlement of claims against certain persons discovered dealing fraudulently with the government, will probably create quite a sensation. One feature of the case is that persons shown by the investigation last winter to have been stockholders in the Credit Mobilier were immediately approached and contronted with their former income returns, and with the evidence from the books of the company, as produced before the committee here, that they had received large dividends; they were then asked to pay the deficiencies in their income returns, together with the legal penalties.

Mr. James Montgomery Bailey, of Danbury, writes to Mr. A. J. Demarest, of the Newark Industrial Institute, that he cannot address that body. He says: "I am sorry to write you that I must decline the invitation. I do not talk, sing, or dance in public. I sometimes feel that I ought to sing, and occasionally think I have a call to dance, but my partner is opposed to dancing on religious grounds, and everybody connected with me appears to have a most unaccountable antipathy to singing. I can't talk. If, however, Mons. Faber succeeds in perfecting a machine that will express its views in a more beautiful articulation than a discharging soda bottle has yet been able to attain, and will throw into its face an appearance differing from two opposing boot heel taps, then I shall gladly mount the rostrum, and endeavor in my humble and unpretending way to make it hot for the masses."

A letter from Sydney, Australia, December 20, says: "Last week Her Majesty's ship Dido returned here from a cruise, bringing as passenger a seaman, the sole survivor of the crew of the barque Plato. The ship left here for China, with coal, and struck a reef north of New Caledonia, the crew escaping in one of the boats and making for Solomon's Island. On reaching their destination they were mercilessly slaughtered by the natives. The mate shot himself, rather than be tortured by the savages, and the survivor was spared, from the superstitious belief that as half a dozen arrows by which he was pierced had not reached a vital part, it would be unlucky to attack him again. Fortunately the Dido hearing of a white man being in captivity, rescued him, and at the same time arrested three of the principal murderers, one of whom committed suicide by poison the following night.

A Nice Man for a Chief Justice.

A Washington dispatch says Judge Paschal has filed in the equity court a bill for injunction against Caleb Cushing, on which Judge Wylie granted a restraining order, returnable on the 15th instant. Mrs. Gaines charges in her bill that she conveyed to Cushing certain lands in Louisiana numbering 68,000 acres, and received from him a counter deed acknowledging the trust, and afterwards in his own name, he obtained a confirmation of the title to said lands, denying her right to any interest in them. She now asks for an injunction to prevent the respondent from receiving the patents and certificates for said lands from the Interior department.

Putting Out a Cat.

Mr. Joseph Springer is a peaceable married man who lives on Detroit street near the western city limits. He has in his employ a maid servant who has a young man that not only calls regularly, but often irregularly. The maid servant's beau is possessed of an appetite that requires frequent satisfying, and during his visits to the Springer mansion, pies, doughnuts, cheese, cookies, cold meat, preserves and other nutritious and palatable articles, disappeared like dew before the morning sun, or hot griddle cakes before a hired man.

Since the panic has demoralized men and things, Springer has been trying to economize in various directions, and among other leaks that he sought to stop was that of feeding his hired girl's beau. Springer even went so far as to tell his handmaid that she could only receive visits from her lover on Wednesday and Saturday nights, as the expense of fire, lights and provision five nights out of seven was too much. The maiden of all work pouted, burned the toast, and served dish water coffee for several mornings, but finally seemed to accept the situation and resumed her wonted cheerfulness.

Such was the state of affairs up to last Friday night, when it appears "Sarah's young man," unable to stand the pangs of hunger or love until Saturday night, rapped at the kitchen door of Springer's house and was admitted. About eleven o'clock P. M. the handmaid, in obedience to a hint from her admirer, took the lamp in hand and proceeded down cellar in search of something for him to eat. Though she used every precaution not to awaken the Springer family, asleep up stairs, yet, as she opened the cellar door, a strange cat bounded out into the room unbeknown to her, and a moment later emitted one of those sad melancholy howls that cats are wont to give when concealed in a strange room.

Mrs. Springer heard the cat yell, and after digging at Springer's shins with her toe nails until he was awake, she said, "Go down stairs, Mr. Springer, and let that cat out of the house." Springer hated the job, but was forced to comply, and descending the stairs in his night shirt and bare feet, found himself in the dining room, where all was dark as pitch. The maid servant's beau had heard Springer descending the stairs, and, fearing that if he were found there it might make trouble in the family, began to feel his way toward the back door. In doing so, however, he tripped over the chair his sweetheart had been occupying, and fell headlong into a clothes horse full of garments that were being dried by the kitchen stove. The clothes horse struck the cat in its fall, and with another howl of misery, that animal began to cavort around the room, scale the walls, and climb the tables seeking for an exit. "Great Moses! what ails that cat?" said Springer, as he entered the kitchen, only to fall over the unfortunate lover, who was trying to get untangled from the clothes horse and clothing.

"Burglars! murder!" yelled Springer, as he clutched the supposed thief beneath him, who, in his struggles to get away, upset the table full of breakfast dishes.

The handmaiden, hearing the muss, came rushing up stairs so fast the lamp was extinguished, and arrived in the kitchen just in time to get kicked in the pit of the stomach by one of the struggling men on the floor, and dropping the lamp and plate of doughnuts she had in her hands, she too, doubled up with a shriek of pain and fell on the floor in a hysterical fit.

Mrs. Springer, who was only half awake, heard her husband yell murder, and bounding out of bed came sliding down stairs in a sitting posture, and as she entered the kitchen, from whence came sounds of deadly strife, curses and shrieks, the cat, which had partially caused the trouble, bolted through a window, and before Mrs. S. could collect her senses, the hired girl's beau had succeeded in getting out of Springer's grasp and followed the cat through the same aperture. The handmaiden hearing her lover escape arose, procured a light, when Springer ceased pounding the armful of clothing he thought was the burglar, and a general council was held to discuss war matters. Result: Springer is called a fool and idiot, by Mrs. S., and the girl, for thinking there was a burglar in the house; the broken lamp, spilled doughnuts and fractured window sash are charged up to the cat, while Mrs. S., who has not fully recovered from her trip down stairs, says the "next time she wants a cat put out of the house she will do it herself. A man don't know how to do anything anyhow, nor never did."

—California boasts of a Pompeii on a small scale. It is the town of Meadow Lake, on the Sierra Nevada range, 8000 feet above the level of the sea. The spot on which it is situated is full of gold, and in 1865 there was a rush thither, 1,200,000 feet of the land being taken up in the summer of that year. By spring of the next year the Californians had become perfectly wild over the golden prospects of the region, and during May and June not less than 4000 people found their way up there, and the real estate went up like a kite, sixty-by-eighty lots bringing from $1500 to $2500. A town of 600 houses was built. The trouble was with the ore, in which there was some substance that would not yield to the usual processes, and, in addition, the snow was not unfrequently twenty-five feet on a level, terrible storms being common as late as June. All at once the people saw that nature had played an awful practical joke on them, and they abandoned the town so precipitately that a recent visitor there, walking on snow-shoes through the streets on a level with the second stories and looking into the windows, saw the furniture standing just as the occupants last used it.

—Five hundred million is about the number of wooden toothpicks sold by the Boston house which controls the whole business in this country, and the number increases enormously each year. A box holding 2000 sells for twenty-five cents, while the same quantity of quill picks would cost about $4. More orders for toothpicks come from hotels and restaurants than from all other sources combined. So great has been the popularity of cheap wood toothpicks in this country that the experiment of exporting them is soon to be tried.

Nature's Cathartic.

No medicine is needed to keep the bowels in order as long as nature's cathartic, the bile, flows freely and regularly from its source in the liver, and is of the right strength and quality. But the great biliary gland is easily disordered, and the consequences of its irregularities are serious. To bring it back to its natural condition when thus affected, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters should be taken at least twice a day until the desired object is attained. Constipation is due to a scant supply of bile, or to a lack of the stimulating element in that fluid. In either case mere purgation is useless. The liver must be compelled to yield the supply of bile necessary to remove the waste matter from the system at least once in twenty-four hours before a radical cure of costiveness can be accomplished. Hostetter's Bitters produce this effect. Its action upon the stomach and liver is direct and salutary, and through these organs it regulates and invigorates the whole frame.

An infallible PILE remedy.—Sufferers with this painful disease who have tried electuaries, lotions, ointments, and a long list of nostrums for its relief, in vain, will thank us for calling attention to ANAKESIS, the happy discovery of DR. SILSBEE, an experienced and scientific M. D. Thousands of cases attest its virtue; it is a simple suppository, acts as instrument, soothing poultice, and medicine, gives instant relief and cures permanently.—Price $1.00. Sold by druggists everywhere. ANAKESIS Depot, 46 Walker st., New York.

At this season of the year, when so many of our people are suffering from colds, we call attention to AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL as a sure cure not only for coughs and colds, but all affections of the lungs and throat. Having used it in our family for many years, we can speak from personal knowledge of its efficiency. There may be other remedies that are good, but in all our experience this has proved to be by far the best. Its qualities are uniform and wholly reliable. It is pleasant to take, and should be kept at command, by every family, as a protection against a class of complaints which seem harmless in the beginning, but become afflicting and dangerous if neglected.—[N. H. Register.]

Helmbold's Buchu—the only extract of that wonderful curative shrub that contains its full virtues, is still considered the true specific for Kidney Diseases, Gravel, Diabetes, Calculus, Dropsy, and those obscure diseases that undermine life and rob it of enjoyment. Dr. Helmbold, who spent a fortune in making his discovery known, has lived to see it endorsed by the physicians and people of two continents. Remember that it is Helmbold's Extract that cures when all others fail. For sale by all druggists.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver or "Biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. 708

NO. 4 BULFINCH STREET, BOSTON.

When a thing is counterfeited, it is a proof of its excellence and popularity. The Peabody Medical Institute is a case in point. Founded in good faith many years ago, and the only establishment of the kind in the country, its success and ever-increasing popularity finally caused the name (Medical Institute) to be pirated and adopted by a lot of infamous quacks, empirics and pretenders, who have been endeavoring to cheat the public by selling under a stolen flag. The founder of the Peabody Medical Institute can in no way be held responsible for this unlawful use of the name of a reputable and well-known curative establishment and legitimate medical institution, which has been from the start specially devoted to the treatment of nervous derangements and affections, from whatever causes proceeding. During its existence there have been issued from it several medical publications; quite recently a work on Diseases of the Nervous System, which had almost a world wide circulation and popularity. These publications sufficiently attest the high character of the institution under whose patronage these medical works have been published. Meantime it is gratifying to know that several of the impudent charlatans, who have stolen its name to cover their nefarious practices, are getting their deserts in the penal institutions of the Commonwealth.—Boston Herald.

Alarming Signs! When the voice is reduced to a husky whisper, with a hacking cough and a painful respiration, there is good cause for alarm. Have recourse forthwith to Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. The relief will be immediate—the cure certain. Crittenton's 76th Avenue. Sold by all Druggists.

Outward applications are time and money thrown away. The only permanent cure is Dr. Harrison's Peristaltic Lozenges. They strike at the cause. We could fill this paper with cures. They are pleasant, never gripe, nor, like all pills, do they require increase of dose. For elderly persons, females and children, and all others, they are exactly suited to obviate Costiveness, the prolific cause of ill health. Trial box, 30 cts. Large box, 60 cts., and mailed free for this last price.

Dr. Stevens' Lecture

On "Hand, Brain and Heart," before the lyceum, Wednesday evening, was one of the best of the course and gave evidence of much study and deep thought. Commencing with a reference to Rousseau's declaration that "it requires a great deal of philosophy to observe once what may be seen every day," the lecturer remarked its aptness. Familiarity with the details of business without acquaintance with the principles on which such business is founded is liable to give rise to indifference. It is no chance system that returns to the Hindoo artizan a penny, and to the American laborer a dollar; that makes Mexico with its mineral wealth, poor, and New England with its granite and ice, rich; that bids the elements in one country become subservient to the wants of man, and in another to run to waste. Instinct teaches the savage and the civilized man alike that temperance and freedom from excess are essentials for the preservation of health, and frugality and industry are essentials for the accumulation of wealth. The improvement of animals as seen in the draught and race horse, the ox, sheep, fowl, pig and dog, is the result of man's labor. Products of agriculture, arboriculture and horticulture are improvements on Nature. All double flowers, edible fruits and vegetables are but the development of man's industry, representing distant voyages and centuries of skilled labor and assiduous elaboration. Wheat, growing spontaneously in Upper Egypt yields a poor and miserable seed unfit for making bread.

Though man's hands have done much to render the earth habitable, his brains have done a hundred times more. "There is no limit," says Forbes, "to the importance of mere thought." Studious men have given us all the machines that abridge and facilitate labor. The more one knows, the more can one perform. He who converts a thousand million pounds of iron into steel has not been as useful as was the discoverer of cementation; and he who should transport a mountain ten miles would be of less utility than the discoverer of the lever. Pascal's invention of the wheel-barrow, as he sat thinking in his library, made him a greater benefactor than had he given his work and that of half a million of horses for the good of his fellow beings. The engine which lightens labor and multiplies comforts, the printing press which is helping more than anything else to educate mankind, the wonderful iron fingers which do the sewing of the world, are the embodiments of thought; the tools of the human race are nothing else than a collection of ideas. The tools wear out, but the knowledge of their construction remains. Man is most useful to himself. He who plants a tree has done well; he who saws it into plank has done well; he who makes of it a bench has done well; but he who, sitting upon that bench, taught a child to read, has done better than all the others. The former add something to the common capital of humanity; the latter adds something to humanity itself.

Mental laborers are the hardest worked class in the community. Without unwearied industry, eminence cannot be reached in their pursuits. Take away the labor of the past century and the civilization of the 19th century would fade away—yet all the blessings that manual labor has given us were planned and wrought out in the mind of man before his hand was extended to execute them. Labor is ennobling, for it is power; but knowledge is power intensified. Few men will give preference to an ignorant farm laborer when a more intelligent man can be had, and if the latter is preferred on a farm, why not in a store or manufactory?

The road to knowledge is free to all. Chatterton characteristically said that God has sent his creatures into this world with arms long enough to reach anything, if they chose to be at the trouble. The proverb says: "He who has heart has everything." Thus Ferguson learned astronomy from the heavens, while wrapped in a sheepskin on the highland hills; thus Stone learned mathematics while working as a journeyman gardener; thus Drew studied the highest philosophy in the intervals of cobbling shoes; thus Hugh Miller taught himself geology while working as a day-laborer in a quarry; thus Abraham Lincoln read history, studied law and stored his mind with earnest, vitalized truths by the light of a common wood fire or a blazing torch. The laws governing the mind are identical with the laws governing the body. Use of our mental powers increases our mental energies and capacity. Drudgery is the road to genius. Nothing is denied to well directed labor; nothing is to be obtained without it. Sir Fowell Buxton placed his great confidence in ordinary means and extraordinary application. Little is done where little is attempted. Labor is the inevitable price set upon everything valuable. Culture knows no distinction of sex, but opens her store-house to all who persistently demand entrance thereto.

Labor can be elevated by allying it to noble thoughts, and the poor man can through his books find the great thinkers of this and other days coming in to sit with him and be his companion. There is no society that can take the place of books. The experience of other generations can be ours only by reading. Books possess the essence of immortality—are the most lasting product of industry. Next to the influence of a happy home, the speaker said, he owed to books and a growing love for the higher walks of literature all the hopes of life he held. He wished he had more of energy, personal force, culture and character, more of material means to give to the championship of the Society for preventing cruelty, looking upon it as an answering pulse-throb, telling of the quickening current coursing through the great heart of love and compassion this last half of the 19th century holds—of the time when no education shall be considered complete that does not entertain a trinity of action,—that of hand, and brain, and heart.

We have been able to give but mere abstracts of this excellent lecture, but those given are an indication to those of our readers who were not fortunate enough to hear it, of its merit. Abounding in appropriate illustrations and gems of thought, and showing great research, it was most intently listened to, and the speaker was warmly congratulated at its close. Dr. Stevens, we have considered to be one of the most talented residents of Portsmouth, and though reaching the highest honors of his profession, we think he would adorn a literary profession and should no longer hide his light under a bushel. A deep thinker, a close student and ready writer, his productions, though few comparatively, have borne the impress of his application to the works of his favorite authors, and he could not fail to become an eloquent speaker whose words would be words of wisdom.

Fire.

About half-past eight o'clock, Wednesday evening, fire was discovered in the rear of the grocery store of Mr. Sewell W. Webber, on Vaughan street. The snow had not been trodden down in the streets and the engines went along slowly. Buckets of water and one of the city "soda fountains" put out the flames after the firemen had cut away the wood-work about the chimney, disclosing a hole between the bricks where the mortar had dropped out. Mr. Webber had made a wood fire an hour or two before the flames burst out, and was sitting in his store when the smoke attracted his attention. But few articles were moved from the house. The damage by cutting through the partition, etc., was considerable, and the extinguisher made dirty work for the family. Nothing could have saved the building had the fire been two hours later. Mr. Webber was insured.

Laconics.

The fourth social Assembly of the course given by Kearsarge S. F. E. Co., No. 3, comes off this (Thursday) evening in Mechanics' Hall.

Remember the Festival and Fair at Congress Hall this evening; it promises to be one of the most pleasant gatherings of the season. Contributions will be gratefully received at the Hall any time this afternoon.

Mr. E. H. Balch, who has a contract to haul two of the Steam Fire Engines to fires, at the request of the Chief Engineer of the Department kept his horses harnessed during the continuance of the recent heavy snow storm; but the city horses were at the same time allowed to stand in their stalls unharnessed. A Boston alderman remarked, after the great fire, that "the city owned four horses which had cost twenty millions of dollars apiece;" and possibly Portsmouth may yet have some costly horses on hand. In this connection we may remark that Mr. Balch displays a commendable promptness in getting his horses to the engine houses when the word is given, and seldom or never allows a fire company to wait for him; on the occasion of the Melcher-block fire his horses were harnessed and at one of the engine houses, ready to hitch up, before the company got there.

Don't forget the Jubilee Singers' concert at the Temple this evening. The colored vocalists' object is a most worthy one, and they give such a concert as is not often produced in this city—or any other. See adv't.

All the men discharged from the navy yard on Saturday were taken on again, Wednesday, by order of the Department.

Foster calls the Times the organ of the Portsmouth breweries.

Alfred P. Burbank of Chicago, who is on a reading tour through the New England States, gave a private entertainment in the parlor of the Rockingham House, Tuesday evening, to the guests of the hotel and a party of invited ladies and gentlemen. He is evidently a talented man and promises fair to rival the most famous readers of the day. His representation of the Countess in "Our Senator in Florence" cannot be excelled.

—People who have lived fifty years may be glad to know what they have accomplished in that time. According to a French statistician, the average man has, at that age, slept 6000 days, worked 6500 days, walked 800 days, amused himself 4000 days, spent 1500 in eating, and been sick 500 days. He has eaten 17,000 pounds of bread, 16,000 pounds of meat, and 4600 pounds of vegetables, fish, etc., drank 7000 gallons of liquids. There are 18,250 days in a half century, and from the above statement it would seem that man slept just one-third of the time.

—A Dubuque young lady gave up the man she loved and took the one her parents favored, in consideration of the sum of $4 and a sky blue merino dress.

—Why is a thunder storm like an onion? Because it is peal on peal.

—Straining sweetness—Kissing through a veil.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. The Growth of Boston.

(Boston Globe.)

Few of those who have noted the great changes in this city, within a comparatively few years, will be apt to pronounce as wild Mr. Avery Plumer's prophecy at the Old South Church sale hearing, yesterday, that, within twenty years, all Beacon Hill east of Charles street will be used for mercantile purposes, and that the entire peninsula will, in time, be swept of dwelling houses and be devoted to business only. It is, to many, a melancholy fact that old Boston is rapidly disappearing, and that, before long, not a single landmark will be left to remind us of the past. The Old South will soon go, the old State House is as good as gone now, the old crooked ways and lanes are disappearing, and straight, broad avenues are taking their places, new streets are cutting through old, familiar places, old buildings here, there, everywhere are coming down, and new and modern ones, less picturesque but more stately and convenient, are rising from their ruins. The Boston of to-day is unfamiliar to the old Bostonian; the Boston of the future will be a new city, fair to look upon and magnificent in its proportions but bearing no mark of the early days of the republic which have made it the notable city of historical associations.

A Source of Great Anxiety.

Mr daughter has received great benefit from the use of VEGETINE. Her declining health was a source of great anxiety to all of her friends. A few bottles of the VEGETINE restored her health, strength and appetite. N. B. TILDEN,
Ins. and Real Estate Agt., 49 Sears Building.
Boston, Mass., June 5, 1872.

MOTHERS, READ THIS!

A Great Blessing!

WORTH A DOLLAR A DROP.

Mothers, are your little ones fretful? And is your patience sorely exhausted in vain efforts to please them? Can sympathize with you, and can tell you what will make your little cooing darling give it a good appetite, and procure for it hours of sweet, sound sleep.

My little girl is two and a half years old; and during the time I have so had two consecutive nights rest. She has been sick a month with diarrhœa and nausea, seemed to know what was troubling her. It was hard to hear her little fretful cry, and not know what to do for her. I determined for her sake, that I did not give up, and I was nearly tired out with sleepless nights and trouble for my little one.

I heard of the VEGETINE, and determined to try it. It has proved a blessing to me and my child. It has cleansed her system, and blown the sores which kept gathering there; and now she sleeps soundly from her bedtime until very late in the morning, because I have not to get up at night. Her appetite is good; and, in fact, she is like a different child. I feel an anxiety to make this medicine as well known as I deliver drop. Try it. Cleanse the humors from your children's blood while they are young. Try it, and you will join with me in saying that it is a blessing.
MRS. ELLEN L. CLAPP,
Sonth Boston, July 10, 1871. 175 Tudor street.

Circulation of the Blood.

The circulation of the blood is the life of the body; and its stoppage is death. We are healthy when the blood circulates freely; any interruption preventing its free course is the commencement of disease. "Blood is the life of the flesh." Can we expect to enjoy good health when by the corrupt humors circulate with the blood, causing pain and disease; and these humors being deposited through the entire body, produce pimples, scrofulous sores, indigestion, costiveness, headache, neuralgia, rheumatism, and numerous other complaints? No disease can be in the body without first being generated in the blood; and no disease can possibly be in the body if the blood is pure. It is of great importance to know what medicine will purify and renovate the blood, eradicate the disease, renew vitality, mentally and physically, and instill fresh vigor into all the vital functions of the body. This medicine is the VEGETINE. It is a great blood purifier.

It extends its influence into every part of the human organism, commencing with its foundation, correcting diseased action, and restoring vital power, creating a healthy formation and purification of the blood, driving out disease, and leaving Nature to perform its allotted task.

VEGETINE is composed of Roots, Barks and Herbs. It is very pleasant to take; every child likes it. Sold by all Druggists. 4w 4ot9p nrm.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS,

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

Herein lie the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Foundation.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and in validism can personally testate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN AND MAHANOY COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper course is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY RE-PICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

READ AND THINK.

We have received to-day a large lot of FLOUR in Barrels and Half-Barrels, which we propose to sell at PRICES THAT CAN'T BE BEAT.

PRIDE OF THE WEST	$10.75
RED JACKET	12.00
GENUINE	9.25
A	10.00
LILY OF THE VALLEY	10.50

These prices are less than the same brands or quality can be bought in this State, and we guarantee everything as we say, or you can return it at our expense.

With EVERY BARREL of Flour so sold, we shall give you

Your Choice of Two

SPLENDID STEEL ENGRAVINGS,

(Samples of which can be seen at our store,)

The Village Blacksmith,

AND

Signing the Compact in the Cabin of the Mayflower,

AS A PREMIUM PRESENT!

These Engravings are elegant again, and worthy a place in any house.

Now, don't let anybody make you believe that we can't do this and give you a GOOD article of FLOUR at the same price they can; because if you do, you will be deceived. We bought these pictures in New York at such prices that we can afford to do it.

Why? 1st, because it so increases our sales that even with a small profit on the Flour, we can make day wages. 2d, because when people come to buy Flour they see the prices of other goods and buy them. 3d, because everybody knows we always do just what we advertise to do.

NOW TRY US. All we ask is for you to call, see and be convinced.

CATARRH!
A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years, Cured.
And Droppings in Throat, Clockings, Stranglings, Pains in the Head, Side, Loins, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the
CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY.
To MESSRS. LITTLEFIELD & CO., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.:
I reside at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Bedford, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 19 years old; had it all the time. It ran all that period, and nights it would fill up and drop down in my throat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I would generally get up to save myself from strangulation. It affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the wanest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.
MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.
Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.
I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, dropping in the throat, clockings and stranglings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.
Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left. Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, for I think God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.
MARY M. ABBOTT.
No. 17 Manchester Corporation.
Manchester, N. H., Jan. 27, 1872.
The above lady is my mother. I am a painter by trade, and a member of the City Council of Manchester. Every word that my mother states is true.
JACOB J. ABBOTT.
Hundreds of cases of a similar nature cured within the last year. Snuffs and Lotions are only temporary relief. The CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY strikes at the root, builds up the constitution, makes it new, and drives away Catarrh and all diseases of the mucous membranes and their attendant pains and aches, pertaining to head, back, shoulders, kidneys, and throat.
Price $1 per Bottle. Sold by all Druggists. A Pamphlet of 32 pages, giving a Treatise on Catarrh, and containing innumerable cases of cures, sent FREE, by addressing the Proprietors, Working To Some Purpose.

At last the spirit mediums are relinquishing the diverting but unprofitable tippings and rappings with which they have so long solely concerned themselves, and are turning their superior knowledge to practical account. Mr. Delong, our late representative in Japan, was recently induced to visit the notorious Foster, in San Francisco, and although he entered the presence of the medium prepared to doubt and scoff, he remained, if not to pray, at least to give thanks. For Mr. Foster had a message for Mr. Delong's wife from that lady's dead father, informing her that before his death he had entrusted to one Thomas Madden a large sum of money for investment, which had not been accounted for to his executors. Mrs. Delong remembered that her father had had business dealings with Mr. Madden, and consequently she, in company with her husband, called on that gentleman and asked him if there was not some unsettled business between himself and the deceased Mr. Vineyard. Mr. Madden promptly said there was; that they had purchased a tract of land together, and that their interest was still undivided, and he furthermore explained that he had made no return to the executors because he supposed they were content to let the property stand as an investment. Mrs. Delong thought, however, that a settlement had better be made at once, and the accommodating Mr. Madden thereupon gave her a deed of a parcel of real estate, for which he offered an equivalent in cash of $18,000. Mr. Delong asserts that neither he nor his wife knew anything about Foster until a friend invited him to visit the medium; that Foster could have known nothing about his family affairs, and that but for the spirit revelation his wife would be poorer by $18,000 than she is to-day.

Interest and Dividends.

The Boston Transcript has this suggestive and significant item: "Persons in positions to know of the matter, state that the loss of interest and dividends and the shrinkage on railway shares and securities of railroads at the South and West, have occasioned much more personal distress in Boston, than was caused by the great fire." No doubt of it, for New England has long been sending her spare money and much she couldn't well spare, to the South and West, in hope of receiving the exorbitant interest offered; but as no legitimate enterprise or sound investment can pay a rate of eight per cent. and above, and prosper on it, so the greedy usurers often come to grief, as above noted. And while we have no tears to shed over them, sound discretion and good judgment, it has always seemed to us, must always urge New England, and especially New Hampshire people, to keep all their money at home, not only to build up our own State, but also as sure to yield larger and safer dividends in the long run.

A Chicago surgeon boasts of having restored the sight of a man 81 years of age. After administering chloroform the doctor divided the exterior membrane of the eyeball by passing a thin knife into it; cut through it into the secret chambers of the globe, took out the little opaque lens that ought to have been transparent, and then closed up the incision and put a tight bandage around his head. In a few days the bandage was removed, and the patient found that he could again see as well as ever.

The Chicago Times is for abolishing the Presidency and Vice-Presidency out of hand, and trying Government by a premier appointed by the president of the Senate from among the members of the House; would let him form a ministry to suit himself; and, in case of a vote of want of confidence passing the House, it would give him his choice between resigning and dissolving the House. If he chose the latter course, the country would at once be called upon to elect a new House, the complexion of which would determine whether he was to retain or lay down office.

Either they do not hate us, as alleged, or, if they do, the manner in which they suppressed this feeling, out of consideration for a guest, proves them to be the most courteous of nations."

Seth Green, having stocked innumerable rivers with all sorts of fish, now proposes that frogs should be reared for the market. A Fickle Woman.

[Galaxy.]

In 1749, occurred an odd episode in Wesley's life. On one of his missionary journeys he had been taken sick at Newcastle, where he was nursed by Grace Murray, one of his female "helpers," a handsome clever widow of four and thirty. Wesley, himself, being twelve years older. He asked her to marry him. She seemed amazed, and replied, "This is too great a blessing. I can't tell how to believe it. This is all I could have wished under heaven." Wesley, quite naturally, took this as a formal bethrothal. But Grace had not long before nursed John Bennett, a Methodist preacher, of about her own age; and Wesley was soon astounded by a joint letter from Grace and John, asking his consent to their marriage. Then ensued a comedy lasting for three months, the like of which no play wright has ventured to put upon the stage. Grace would have been quite content with either of her lovers, were it not for the other. But, contrary to all example, it was the absent one she wanted. When Wesley was with her she longed for Bennett; when Bennett was present she longed for Wesley. How many times she broke and renewed her engagement with each it would be hard to tell. "I love you," she said to Wesley, "a thousand times better than I ever loved Bennett, but I'm afraid if I don't marry him he'll run mad." A week later she told Wesley she was determined to live and die with him. She indeed wanted to be married at once; but Wesley wished for some delay. Grace said she would not wait more than a year. A fortnight later, she met Bennett, fell at his feet, and acknowledged that she had used him ill. They were married a week after. This strange marriage seems to have turned out a happy one. Bennett died in the triumphs of faith ten years later. Grace survived until 1803, dying at the age of eighty-seven. For years she was a bright light in the Methodist society. Wesley saw her three days after her marriage, and but once more on earth. Thirty-nine years after, she came to London on a visit to her son, and expressed a wish to see Wesley. He was eighty-five years old, she past seventy. What could they now have to say, except, "Hail, and farewell!"

Burmese Marriages.

[Harper's Magazine.]

It is now generally believed that the Burmese, and indeed all the various races and nations of Indo-China, migrated at a remote period from the plateaus of Central Asia, and that they are of mixed origin, possessing some of the characteristics of the Hindu (the Caucasian,) and some also of the Chinaman (the Mongol.) Thus, in person they are short and stout, with the small, oblique eyes, high and prominent cheek-bones, and flat, short, and broad nose of the Tartar, Chinese, and Japanese races, and the "raven-black" hair, pearly teeth, and olive-brown skin of the Hindus and the Malays; and though of nearly the same stature as the latter, they generally possess the stouter frames of the former. The Burmese are a simple-minded, indolent people, frank and courteous, fond of amusement and gay-colored apparel, friendly among themselves, and hospitable to strangers. They appreciate a quiet life, smoking and gossiping and sleeping throughout the day, and listening to wild music and singing through half the night: "stern" ambition is, among them, indeed, a very rare trait of character. Marriage among the Burmese is a most peculiar institution, and the marriage "knot" is very easily undone. If two persons are tired of each other's society they dissolve partnership in the following simple and touching but conclusive manner: They respectively light two candles, and shutting up their hut, sit down and wait quietly until they are burned up. The one whose candle burns out first gets up at once and leaves the house (and forever,) taking nothing but the clothes he or she may have on at the time; all else then becomes the property of the other party.

The New Temperance Movement in Ohio.

One of the appliances in use for subduing the strongholds of rum in the present temperance war in Ohio, is a "tabernacle" which is used when the temperance people are barred out of the saloons. The tabernacle is a small house on wheels, comfortably warmed and lighted. This they pitch before the enemy's door-way, and sing and pray within its walls ad lib. At night, when thirsty mortals skulk stealthily into the saloon, the rays of a powerful reflector detect them. They are personally appealed to, and, if they still enter, are made the objects of special prayers, which, delivered in fervant tones, ring through and through the bar-room. The tabernacle remains until midnight, and re-appears bright and early next morning. No man has yet been found who can resist it for three days.

One of the latest sallies of the Ohio women in their war against the liquor dealers was aimed at Silas Metzger, of Shelbyville, a jolly old Dutchman, with a pretty Teutonic wife and several rosy children. When the women visited Metzger's weinstube, "Old Silas" was away and the women had one of their own sex to deal with in the person of Mrs. Metzger, who presided over the temple. She welcomed them, not with bloody hands to hospitable graves, but with imprecations and a withering sweep of Amazonian invectives. She told them to go home and mind their own business, as she was minding hers; to go home and cook their husbands' suppers; above all, to go home, or out of her shop, where they were not to be tolerated. While she levelled her darts at her intruders she kept in memory her kith and kin, and sent word to her son George, who kept a saloon over the way, that the women were coming, and that he had better prepare for them. George flew to his draw and obtained his revolver, then to his front doors, which he shut and bolted and barred; after which he took up his station upon the steps of his saloon, there to meet the foe. Soon the dozen elderly ladies came around the corner, protected from the beating rain storm by alpaca umbrellas. They met the mailed warrior at his post of defence, and the persuasive pica was made. He found no need of his weapons of death. Their pleadings were of no immediate avail, for George stoutly defended the right of his business, and declared that he intended to sell liquor as long as he lived.

—A French paper points out how the passion for gambling is shown in this country, so that even in wedding notices it is necessary to state that there were "no cards."

STATE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE.

In House of Representatives, June Session, 1873.

ORDERED:—That the accompanying bill, entitled—"An act to authorize a limited reimbursement of the municipal war expenditures" be postponed to the next session of the Legislature, and that the same be published in all the newspapers authorized to publish the laws of the present session, three weeks successively, the last publication whereof to be three months, at least, previous to said next session. Attest: S. C. CLARK, Clerk.

THE STATE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE.

In the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three.

An act to authorize a limited reimbursement of the municipal war expenditures.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court convened:

Section 1. That the State is authorized to issue bonds payable within twenty years, at a rate of interest not exceeding six per cent. per annum payable semi-annually, which bonds, or their proceeds, shall be devoted exclusively toward the reimbursement of the expenditures incurred by the cities, towns, locations or grants of the State, for war purposes during the rebellion, upon the following basis: Each town, location or grant shall receive from the State one hundred dollars for every man furnished for the military service of the United States, under the call of July second, one thousand and eight hundred and sixty-two and accepted by the United States for the term of three years, and in the same proportion for every man so furnished and accepted for whatever period, and the same shall be in part payment for any claim upon the State on account of its war debts, by any such city, town, or location or grant.

Section 2. The amount to be paid to each city, town, location or grant shall be the same as fixed by a commission appointed by the Governor and Council for 1870 and 1871 to carry into effect an act of similar import.

Section 3. This act to take effect and be in force from and after its passage.

The foregoing is a true copy of said bill, and of the order of notice thereon; and the same is published agreeably to said order.

Attest: S. C. CLARK,
Clerk of the House of Representatives.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Disease of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of COUGHS, COLDS, and CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed those dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

A Druggist's Mistake.

A story is circulating which tells how a fair young lady went to a drug store and told the man to fix her up one dose of castor oil, and to mix it with something to take the taste away. The man told her to wait. In a few moments he asked her if she felt like taking a glass of soda water. She accepted the invitation, and drank the beverage. Presently she asked the roller of pills why he didn't give her the castor oil. The man smiled a triumphant smile, and said, "Madam, you have taken it. I mixed a fearful dose with that soda." She turned pale; she sank into a chair; she gasped. "Immortal Jove! I wanted it for my mother."

Nature's Cathartic.

No medicine is needed to keep the bowels in order as long as nature's cathartic, the bile, flows freely and regularly from its source in the liver, and is of the right strength and quality. But the great biliary gland is easily disordered, and the consequences of its irregularities are serious. To bring it back to its natural condition when thus affected, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters should be taken at least twice a day until the desired object is attained. Constipation is due to a scant supply of bile, or to a lack of the stimulating element in that fluid. In either case mere purgation is useless. The liver must be compelled to yield the supply of bile necessary to remove the waste matter from the system at least once in twenty-four hours before a radical cure of costiveness can be accomplished. Hostetter's Bitters produce this effect. Its action upon the stomach and liver is direct and salutary, and through these organs it regulates and invigorates the whole frame.

An infallible PILE remedy.—Sufferers with this painful disease who have tried electuaries, lotions, ointments, and a long list of nostrums for its relief, in vain, will thank us for calling attention to ANAKESIS, the happy discovery of DR. SILSBEE, an experienced and scientific M. D. Thousands of cases attest its virtue; it is a simple suppository, sent as instrument, soothing poultice, and medicine, gives instant relief and cures permanently.—Price $1.00. Sold by druggists everywhere. ANAKESIS Depot, 46 Walker st., New York.

At this season of the year, when so many of our people are suffering from colds, we call attention to AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL as a sure cure not only for coughs and colds, but all affections of the lungs and throat. Having used it in our family for many years, we can speak from personal knowledge of its efficiency. There may be other remedies that are good, but in all our experience this has proved to be by far the best. Its qualities are uniform and wholly reliable. It is pleasant to take, and should be kept at command, by every family, as a protection against a class of complaints which seem harmless in the beginning, but become afflicting and dangerous if neglected.—[N. H. Register.]

Helmbold's Buchu—the only extract of that wonderful curative shrub that contains its full virtues, is still considered the true specific for Kidney Diseases, Gravel, Diabetes, Calculus, Dropsy, and those obscure diseases that undermine life and rob it of enjoyment. Dr. Helmbold, who spent a fortune in making his discovery known, has lived to see it endorsed by the physicians and people of two continents. Remember that it is Helmbold's Extract that cures when all others fail. For sale by all druggists.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver or "Biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. 708

NO. 4 BULFINCH STREET, BOSTON.

When a thing is counterfeited, it is a proof of its excellence and popularity. The Peabody Medical Institute is a case in point. Founded in good faith many years ago, and the only establishment of the kind in the country, its success and ever-increasing popularity finally caused the name (Medical Institute) to be pirated and adopted by a lot of infamous quacks, empirics and pretenders, who have been endeavoring to cheat the public by sailing under a stolen flag. The founder of the Peabody Medical Institute can in no way be held responsible for the misuse of the name of a reputable and well-known curative establishment and legitimate medical institution, which has been from the start specially devoted to the treatment of nervous derangements and affections, from whatever causes proceeding. During its existence there have been issued from it several medical publications; quite recently a work on Diseases of the Nervous System, which has reached almost a world wide circulation and popularity. These publications sufficiently attest the high character of the institution under whose patronage these medical works have been published. Meantime it is gratifying to know that several of the impudent charlatans, who have stolen its name to cover their nefarious practices, are getting their deserts in the penal institutions of the Commonwealth.—Boston Herald.

For elderly persons, females and children, and all others, they are exactly suited to obviate Costiveness, the prolific cause of all health. Trial box, 50 cts. Large box, 60 cts., and mailed free for this last price.

HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever.

It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.

It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

Kearsarge S. F. E. Co., No. 3, had a large attendance and a good time at their fourth social Assembly on Thursday evening. The dances given by the company have been very pleasant affairs so far this season, and no doubt will continue to be as our firemen take as much pride in this reputation for respectability as citizens as they do in their efficiency as a Fire Department. The theory that only a rough would make a good fireman was long ago exploded.

Attention is called to the extract from a City ordinance, published in our advertising columns, relative to driving over or in any way injuring hose in use at fires or on other occasions,—with the added warning, "The above section will be enforced by the Board of Engineers." It should be enforced, by somebody, for if a man hadn't common sense enough to keep him from driving over hose the law should supply the deficiency.

Rev. Dr. Bolles has been engaged to deliver his celebrated lecture on the "Wonders of the Microscope" in the Universalist church. The lecture will be illustrated by the microscope and calcium light, and will afford an amount of amusement and instruction rarely combined in one entertainment. Dr. Bolles is a thorough scientist and an eloquent speaker.

Our neighbor, the Times, says we are "a funny fellow—a very funny fellow," as we "got tired of handling the quill last year and spent a season of rest at the vote-manufactory," "staid there long enough to learn how they manage affairs" and then "returned to the editorial chair." No doubt such conduct as the Times attributes to us is inexplicably "funny" in the eyes of a democratic editor, no one of that stripe being able to conceive a reason for any man's voluntarily leaving a government berth,—at least, we never heard of any democratic editor setting such a precedent. Of course we must seem a very "funny fellow," to the Times.

That Times "chap" persists in showing his ignorance. Now he suggests a "reform" by dispensing with one of the post-office clerks, and thinks the expenses of the office might thus be reduced. The saving would go into the pockets of the other clerks, should he discharge a clerk; how much government would gain by it we leave the Times to estimate. The allowance for contingent expenses, out of which clerk-hire at the office is paid, depends entirely on the amount of business transacted for the preceding two years. If the postmaster chooses to employ three clerks instead of two, and go to Washington, we are not aware that it is any one's business but his own.

Victor Hugo's Devil Fish Paralleled.

[San Diego (Cal.) World.]

We were yesterday put into possession of the details of the death of a Chinaman on the Coronades, day before yesterday, that eclipses in horror the death scene described by Victor Hugo in his "Toilers of the Sea," in which a devil fish is introduced with graphic power. Our readers know that the abalone meat is a prized delicacy of the Chinaman, and that the shell of the abalone when properly polished, is one of the most fanciful and beautiful things in nature. The abalones are generally sought lower down the coast, but are also found in the neighborhood of San Diego. Day before yesterday Fung Chou, a professional fisherman, residing near Roseville, known among Americans by the nickname of "Chowder," started out in his boat to the Coronades to hunt for abalones. Of course, his movements can only be surmised by the event. The supposition is that he moored his boat, and then began his quest. The Coronades are quite abrupt in their formation; precipitous, but occasionally broken. "Chowder" saw an immense abalone in a cleft of the rock, in a place covered with water when the tide was in, and, throwing himself on his stomach, he dropped over the ledge to wrench the delicacy from its fastness. Abalones are univalvular, and if, in detaching one from the rock, to which it can fix itself with almost immovability, one happens to not wrench it loose at once, it often closes its single shell on the rock, imprisoning the spoiling hand and causing inexpressible agony. This was poor "Chowder's" fate. As his evil star would have it, the abalone was unusually large, and the poor Chinaman, unable to release himself, must have early realized that he was doomed. From his position, leaning over the rock, he could not brace himself, or obtain any leverage by which, at the sacrifice of the hand, if need be, he could free himself. We can imagine the agony of the poor wretch as he waited for hours the rising of the tide which should end his misery by death. The actual pain endured must have been unspeakable, and no help was nearer than eighteen miles. We can conceive of nothing so horrible as such a situation, except the ancient Persian persecution of the "boat," described minutely by Plutarch, in which the victim was thrown to the ground, a boat turned upside down over him and staked, and his face was smeared with honey to attract the insects. There he was left to die. The poor Chinaman's plight was almost as bad as this, but happily, the returning tide prevented the torment from being so lasting. The inexorable waters, however, shortly did their work. There came a time when the poor Chinaman could strain no longer, and when the briny flood sucked from the lungs the breath of life. When, yesterday, "Chowder's" body was recovered by a brother Celestial, his dead hand was still clutched in the remorseless grasp of the abalone which had so terribly avenged the invasion of his rocky home. The agony the poor fellow had endured in this novel martyrdom was imprinted on his face.

As Dry as a Fish.

[Chicago Paper.]

On yesterday, a seedy-looking individual, evidently an ex-member of the celebrated Col. Rye Tanglefoot's brigade, sauntered along South Halsted street, as thirsty as a fish and as impecunious as a Carmelite friar. He gazed into the saloon windows with a liquidly yearning air of thirst, and read the mottoes displayed in reference to "Tom and Jerry," "Hot Scotch," and other panacea for "hot coppers," with a pathetic sigh. At last a brilliant idea entered his Gambrinus-haunted brain. Boldly marching into a tanglefoot recruiting depot near Adams street, he walked up to the bar with the air of a Rothschild and demanded "Burb'n!" in that tone which a man assumes when he feels himself supported by a plethoric bank account. The knight of the toddy-stick responded with such a smile as only a knight of the toddy-stick can assume when ten cents is in prospective, and the boss abroad. The "bummer" filled his glass,—five fingers to the charge,—and disposing of it in a twinkling, gazed earnestly on the bar-keeper. The latter individual observed him condescendingly, and fingered the till. It was but for a moment, however, for the sequesterer of "Burb'n," rolling his eyes fiercely upon him, gave a savage growl, and, with a short canine yelp, commenced vigorously masticating the counter. The bar-tender mounted the ice-chest, and threw pop-bottles at him. Another individual present took a seat on top of the stove, but got down again and went out of doors, leaving the "bummer" master of the situation. He improved upon it to kick his heels in the air, growled savagely, then making a snap at the bar-tender's legs, he gave a parting yelp, and, with an extra flourish of his narrative, withdrew. The game worked so well he came over on the South Side and tried it on Van Buren street. Indeed he went mad so frequently that the "Burb'n" overcame his ability for the star part he was playing.

At a saloon on Polk street he entered and made the usual demand, which was complied with, and the liquor disposed of down his well-warmed thorax. Then he eyed the man behind the counter, and commenced rolling his eyes. He even essayed a bark that ingloriously terminated in a hiccup. The bar-tender looked on suspiciously, and tapped suggestively on the counter with his forefinger. The other attempted to growl, but as he nearly strangled himself with the effort, he gave up in disgust, and murmured maudlingly, "Hydrophoby." But the bar-tender thought there was very little of a hydro nature about him, and taking the "phoby" man by the lappel of his coat, ushered him into the street with a boot-leather motor. As the bummer stood balancing himself, heel and toe, on the sidewalk, a small yellow dog thought he saw an opportunity for a matinee, and commenced barking at him. At this the "phoby" man gravely shook his head, and sagely wagging his finger at the small yellow dog, remarked: "No go, pard; no go. Just been in there myself. They don't scare worth a damn!"

A Character of the Capitol.

A Washington correspondent writes: "One of the most eccentric characters among the many trades in the political temple is an old lady who presides over a heap of souvenirs on the way from the main rotunda to the House of Representatives. She is as nervous and flighty in her movements as a sparrow and dresses in a very grotesque fashion. But her salient feature is her smile. She watches closely every one who passes. If she can catch the eye of any one she nods her flighty head and smiles a 'won't-you-buy' smile. Business with her is a passion. You pause to ask a question, she thrusts in your hand a "souvenyeer" to take home. A person may be a gray-topped inhabitant who has passed her stand a thousand times. Let him pause once and he will be urged to buy something with which he can remember Washington, not knowing in her ignorance, poor old lady, that there are many people who pass by whose happiness would be secure if they could only forget, instead of remembering, that there was any such city as Washington—the city of promise to the many and fulfilment to the few."

Meanness.

[Mary Kyle Dallas.]

Economy is an excellent thing. That is, it is very comfortable to be able to say to one's self, "I will do without this, that or the other luxury, rather than run the risk of being a beggar in my old age," or even to find it possible to live without what is usually deemed a necessity, rather than to run into debt. But exaggerated economy, or rather meanness, is something which must render its possessor wretched, and something too, which is often found in people who are too selfish to forbid themselves anything they desire. They covet rich food and fine dress, ease and idleness, but they begrudge to those who minister to their wants their well-earned price, and always forget "the laborer is worthy of his hire."

From the lips of such people you hear nothing but complaints. Every one is overreaching them. The dressmaker has sent in a frightful bill; the cook has no right to such wages, the abominable landlord thinks no rent is too much for his house; it is impossible to have anything done without being cheated. In fine, they want all that people have to sell, and have within their souls a miserly desire to get it for nothing. Always accusing other people of their own vice, they salve their conscience, and when they do get something for nothing, fancy themselves happy. But it is only fancy. They can never know the pleasant warmth that fills the heart when a generous action has been done at its prompting. Never can they feel the pleasant independence that follows liberal and ungrudging payment of those to whose toil or trouble one is indebted.

Life is a constant battle to them, and many a spendthrift is happier than those who forget that they have no right to economise at the expense of other people, and whoever wittingly takes the money of another to add to his own purse is, at least at heart, a thief.

A Source of Great Anxiety.

My daughter has received great benefit from the use of VEGETINE. Her declining health was a source of great anxiety to all of her friends. A few bottles of the VEGETINE restored her health, strength and appetite. N. H. TILDEN,

Ins. and Real Estate Agt., 49 Sears Building.

MOTHERS, READ THIS!

A Great Blessing!

WORTH A DOLLAR A DROP.

Mothers, are your little ones fretful? And is your patience almost exhausted in vain efforts to please them? I can sympathize with you, and can tell you what will make your little child quiet, give it a good appetite, and procure for it hours of sweet, sound sleep.

My little girl is two and a half years old; and during that time I have got had two consecutive nights rest. She has been sick a number of times and no one seemed to know what was troubling her. It was hard to hear her little fretful cry, and not know what to do for her. I doctored her for worms, but it did no good; and I was nearly tired out with sleepless nights and trouble for some days.

I heard of the VEGETINE, and determined to try it. It has proved a blessing to me and my child. It has cleansed from her stomach and bowels the sores which kept gathering there; and now she sleeps soundly from her bedtime until very late in the morning, besides a long nap at midday. Her appetite is good; but, in fact, she is like a different child. I often say, the true value of this medicine to me is a dollar a drop. Try it. Cleanse the humors from your children's blood while they are young. Try it, and you will join with me in calling it a great blessing. MRS. ELLEN L. CLARK.

175 Tudor street.

South Boston, July 16, 1871.

Circulation of the Blood.

The circulation of the blood is the life of the body, and its stoppage is death. We are healthy when the blood circulates freely; any interruption preventing its free course is the commencement of disease. "Blood is the life of the flesh." Can we expect to enjoy good health when half or corrupt humors circulate with the blood, causing pain and disease; and these humors being deposited through the entire body, produce pimples, eruptions, ulcers, indigestion, costiveness, headache, scrofula, rheumatism, and numerous other complaints? No disease can be in the body without first being generated in the blood; and no disease can possibly be in the body if the blood is pure. It is of great importance to know what medicine will purify and renovate the blood, eradicate the disease, renew vitality, mentally and physically, and instil fresh vigor into all the vital functions of the body. This medicine is the VEGETINE, the great blood purifier.

It extends its influence into every part of the human organism, commencing with its foundation; correcting diseased action, and restoring vital powers, creating a healthy formation and purification of the blood, driving out disease, and leaving Nature to perform its allotted task.

VEGETINE is composed of Roots, Barks and Herbs. It is very pleasant to take; every child likes it. Sold by all Druggists. 4w 6ot29 nrm.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

CATARRH!
A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years. Cured.
And Droppings in Throat, Chokings, Strangulings, Pains in the Side, Loins, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the
CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY.
TO MESSRS. LITTLEFIELD & CO., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.:
I reside at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Henniker, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 12 years old; had it bad all the time. It run all that period, and nights it would fill up and drop down in my throat, causing me fits of choking, so that I would spring up in bed to save myself from strangulation. It affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August, I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or coughs. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.
MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.
Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.

I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, chokings and strangulings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I round immediate relief.
Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left, Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.
MARY M. ABBOTT,
No. 17 Manchester Corporation.
Manchester, N. H., Jan. 27, 1872.
The above lady is my neighbor. I am a painter by trade, and a member of the City Council of Manchester. Every word that my mother states is true.
JACOB J. ABBOTT.

Hundreds of cases of a similar nature cured within the last year. Snuffs and Douches are only temporary relief. The CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY strikes at the root, builds up the constitution, makes it new, and drives away Catarrh and all diseases of the mucous membranes and their attendant pains and aches, pertaining to head, back, shoulders, kidneys, and throat.
Price $1 per Bottle. Sold by all Druggists. A Pamphlet of 32 pages, giving a Treatise on Catarrh, and containing innumerable cases of cures, sent FREE, by addressing the Proprietors,

But the reading-matter of the BAZAR is uniformly of great excellence. The paper has acquired a wide popularity for the fireside enjoyment it affords.—N. Y. Evening Post.

The Wine That is Red.

[Louisville Courier-Journal.]

It will be remembered that some years back, Rev. J. J. Talbot served as rector of one of the Episcopalian churches of this city—St. John's Church, we believe—but afterward left the ministry, but not, we understand, the church. Since that date he has been engaged as one of the editors of the Ledger-Standard newspaper of New Albany. It appears that Mr. Talbot has suffered much in body and mind from the excessive use of intoxicating liquors. Lately he has commenced a reformation in this respect, which he and his friends hope and believe will be permanent.

Last night, at Mozart Hall, in New Albany, Mr. Talbot delivered his first temperance lecture. The hall was well filled, the rain doubtless preventing many from coming who would have swelled the number present to a very large crowd. Mr. Talbot has always been recognized as a man of fine ability, and those who remember him in the pulpit knew him to be a fine speaker. But his effort of last night surprised expectation. His eloquence is magnetic; his earnestness unusually effective; his pathos unaffected and touching. As he told the story of his fall from the high and sacred position among the people which he had occupied, many of his audience were affected even to tears.

The following is a partial abstract of his very interesting address:

"The question now to be determined by the test of individual experience is as to the good or evil of the use of alcoholic drinks, and you have called on me to testify in this cause and ask me for my experience. Well, though the words blister the lips which utter them, I am here to-day to say to you in this issue, that the whole lesson of my life, every darksome page of it, every line and letter of it, written in tears and shame and sorrow, is that 'wine is a mocker.' And that no pride of character; no obligation to society, family or friends; no duty of religion; no appeal of affection; no dread of death, nor the doom which lies beyond it, is proof against the circean wiles of the beautiful destroyer. Putting on the guise of innocence, with seductive wiles she lures you to her embrace; and, when you clasp the charmer to your breast, she puts off her bewildering beauty, and in her anaconda coil you wake to find that her song is indeed the song of the syren, and that your beautiful angel is a devil! The speaker declared that the mightiest intellect, the greatest attainments in all human learning, are vain against the infernal blandishments of wine, and out of the brightest intellectual stars which shine on earth she shapes and fashions her hideous crown!"

The speaker then entered upon a review of his own life, and in graphic terms described his conviction before he became a drinker, and put it in startling contrast with his present condition; showing the manner of the growth of the passion for drink, thus: First prescribed for ague; then a glass after the fatigue of the day, under the delusion that temperance, not abstinence, in drink, is the rule of the Scriptures. Then under this warrant, and in accordance with the customs of my circle in society, a glass of wine on the occasion of a call, a bumper to the orange wreath of the bride, or a glass to welcome the newborn babe, then wine on the dinner table, and day by day the circle was growing smaller?

"At last I awoke to the consciousness that I was bound by the invisible chain of the demon whose power I had scorned, and whose dominion I had despised! Horror-stricken, like a bird when first it is captive, I beat the bars of my moral prison, and beat them in vain!"

The speaker then described his flight to the far West, hoping on the shores of the Pacific to break the power of his passion for drink—his return, and his despair and desperation. In the course of his remarks the speaker paid the following high tribute to his wife: "The most of women whom God creates are like the trees of the forest, growing from the dark earth heavenward, and the higher they lift themselves above the masses at their feet, as they approximate the skies, the nobler and the better they become; but for this woman it may be said that God let her down out of heaven, unsullied with the stain of earth, to reveal to the world the creative capacity of Almighty God, and demonstrate to mankind that the graces of the angels may cling to and adorn a daughter to the earth."

The speaker in his address made a moral diagnosis of drunkenness, and declared that in its last stages it became a disease; in its first stages it is crime. His experience taught him that a man's manhood will redeem him, and that the "best man to save a drunkard from his doom is a drunkard saved." He speaks the counsels of his own experience, and the ear of the inebriate is opened to hear.

But we have not the space to give even an abstract of the whole of Mr. Talbot's forcible and eloquent address. He concluded thus: "This, then, is the lesson of my experience, and, though there be shame and confusion in the ill told story of my life yet, if the utterance will arrest one single soul on its downward pathway, or point one human being to the upward, brighter way, I could wish that the humiliating tale were told as far as the waters roll or there be winds to waft it."

Visiting The President.

An Advertiser dispatch of Thursday says: Yesterday morning about eleven o'clock, as Lieutenant Harley was passing the President's house, he saw a man on horseback on the portico trying to ride into the front door. The officer took the adventurous horseman into custody. He gave his name as Joseph G. Sypher. On his person was found a pistol, and after being searched he was locked up and kept until this morning, when he was conveyed to the police court and charged with carrying concealed weapons. After hearing the case the court imposed a fine of $30. It is stated that Sypher is from Cincinnati, O., and has been hanging about the executive mansion for some time, and has latterly been denied admission there, and yesterday determined to make a tour of the house on horseback. He had no excuse to offer. It is thought by officers that he is slightly deranged.

Book Agent and Victim.

[Old and New.]

Adrian Chester had come from New Haven by an early morning train, and had occupied himself on the road by examining a document which he had been carrying in his pocket for a few days, being no other than the code of instructions to canvassers, of which Mr. Button had a few days before given him a copy, giving one also to Mr. Jacox. It was a very curious document, filling both sides of a large sheet of paper in close type, and containing nearly six thousand words, equal to twelve or fifteen duodecimo pages. It consisted of a caption in a bold, clear letter, and just forty different propositions. The caption consisted of pithy maxims like the following:

☞ Commit this to memory, word for word. Hold the book you are selling in your own hands. Don't let the customer take it unless necessary. Don't merely say you have got it and talk about it, but show it. Don't ask the customer to buy it, except as the very last resort; but show it and describe it until he says, "I will take one." Don't tell what it costs until he wants the book. When he is ready, hand him the order book and pencil, and he will see the price extended opposite the names already in. Remember you must make the customer want the book, before you try to sell it. He would not buy coined gold if he did not want it. Begin talking as follows:

Here followed the items of this Catechism, laid off with shrewd sense in short paragraphs, numbered in order, being an elaborate exposition of the merits of the book. For instance:

I. I have here, Mr.——, the best book ever printed except the Holy Bible, and one that every one is pleased with. This may seem extravagant; but seeing, you know, is believing, and here is the book. [Read the title on the back carefully and distinctly.] "A New and Complete History of the Bible, by the Reverend Hocum Hotchkin, D. D." Or, as the gilt stamp on the side of the cover says [read the side lettering carefully], "The Holy Bible, its History, Work and Influence." [Now open to the title-page and read it; then open to the Introduction, and remark, looking your customer squarely in the face:]

II. The Bible itself authorizes us to believe that many persons even of intelligence cannot fully understand what they read in it, unless some man should guide them. See Acts viii 30, 31. This is what the Reverend Hocum Hotchkin, D. D., says in beginning his Introduction to this great work. The very Table of Contents [turn to it] will convince you how necessary this history is, in order to understand the Word of God. [Read fifteen or twenty of the first items in the Table of Contents.]

And so on; a shrewd practical discourse, adapted with comical skill to the character of a serious, Bible-reading and meeting-going public. And Adrian, in order to experiment upon his own abilities in the practical details of the business to which he had come so near devoting his life, set to work with a hearty good will to master this composition; and having what actors call "a quick study," by the time he reached Hartford he felt so well prepared that he thought he could even sell his own dear great-aunt a copy of the History of the Bible, if he had it, notwithstanding the furious and implacable hatred which as he well knew she bore to the whole race of canvassers—a hatred far beyond her sufficiently energetic hostility to mere tax-gatherers and house-hunters, who, vile and noxious as they are, can be considered human beings.

Walking up Asylum street from the station, valise in hand, Adrian calmly and unsuspectingly ascended the steep old freestone steps, entered the house, laid off his overcoat and hat, and hearing a voice in the parlor, he went in. What a spectacle! Can any thing be more frightful than to find one of our most beloved ones, without warning or expectation, smitten by a cruel calamity? Especially if we come suddenly upon the height and paroxysm of the agony.

As he softly entered the room, his good old aunt, almost exhausted, was pushing from her with a feeble hand an open book and pencil, which were held out to her by a little man who sat opposite her by the table.

"Oh, dear," she said, or rather sighed, in a faint and weary voice, "I don't want a History of the Bible any more than a hop-toad wants a fine tooth comb. I can say more than half of it by heart already."

"You are aware," said the little man, in a glib peremptory tone, "that it is one thing to read a book, and quite another so to read it as to understand its contents and thoughts and make them our own"—

Here Adrian, who recognized in these words No. xxxv of Mr. Button's code, interrupted, while his aunt gave a jump and a cry at the sound of his voice. He took the very words out of the little man's mouth, and proceeded with a majestic and stately delivery:

"Yes; and this is pre-eminently true with reference to the Book of books. The Bible may be read daily and even thoroughly, so far as the letter, the verses, the chapters, and the books are concerned, and yet comparatively little may be acquired or apprehended of the great truths which it teaches, or of the grand and various topics which are unfolded in its sacred pages. Number three exes, vee i. Not a few individuals have read the Bible through and through repeatedly, and yet have wondered that they could retain so little of its teachings, and had such an indistinct impression or knowledge of its varied topics of discourse, Mr. Jacox!"

Miss Chester looked perfectly stunned. As for Jacox, for it was he, he looked a hundred times more astounded—if such a thing be possible—than she at seeing this interloper thus proceed to steal and fire off his own thunder, and with the obvious effect of re-assuring the almost surrendered victim. For the old lady had fought a good fight, but she was too much of a lady to be absolutely rude to her assailant, and unfortunately for herself, she was too much of a woman not to talk to him. Under such circumstances, the business could have but one termination. A book agent spares neither age nor sex. He would assuredly have had her name in his little book in two minutes more if Adrian had not appeared.

"Oh, Adrian," said the poor old lady, "I'm so glad you came! But for goodness sake what's the meaning of all that lingo?"

Lilliputians in Michigan.

A Kalamazoo correspondent of the Chicago Inter-Ocean says: Last Friday evening the wife of Mr. J. B. McCrum, living at 58 Parsons street, gave birth to a pair of twins—a boy and a girl. The surprise of the parents can be imagined when on surveying the party, the nurse held up the tiny pair of infants in the palm of one of her hands. They were soon after weighed, and the aggregate avoirdupois of the twins was three pounds and four ounces, one of the pair weighing one pound and eight ounces, and the other weighing one pound and twelve ounces. They were less than eight inches long, and perfectly formed. A bed was made for them which consisted of a minute basket filled with cotton batting, and clothing had to be improvised for the strangers, that which in expectancy had been made up proving a world too wide for their limbs. Some doubt was expressed by the physician who attended the mother as to whether they would live, but up to this morning they were not only alive, but lively, bright and wide awake, and claim a place in this big sphere as well as their own immediate brothers and sisters, of whom there are several in the family, grown up.

There have been since Monday a great many visitors to see the little children, and the exclamations of surprise and the ejaculations of admiration would fill a large volume. Ladies and gentlemen, old and young, flock to the house where the children lie. Pink and blue ribbons have been tied about the arms of the little babes, so as to answer the question of which is the boy and the girl. The sensation is likely to last some time, though every precaution is taken to preserve the lives of the little ones. They nurse, and seem to enjoy themselves as well as could be expected. They are perfectly formed, and, we understand, are full-timed children. Wrapped in their little beds they look like dolls suddenly vivified; their cries are like those of very young kittens.

Nature's Cathartic.

No medicine is needed to keep the bowels in order as long as nature's cathartic, the bile, flows freely and regularly from its source in the liver, and is of the right strength and quality. But the great biliary gland is easily disordered, and the consequences of its irregularities are serious. To bring it back to its natural condition when thus affected, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters should be taken at least twice a day until the desired object is attained. Constipation is due to a scant supply of bile, or to a lack of the stimulating element in that fluid. In either case mere purgation is useless. The liver must be compelled to yield the supply of bile necessary to remove the waste matter from the system at least once in twenty-four hours before a radical cure of costiveness can be accomplished. Hostetter's Bitters produce this effect. Its action upon the stomach and liver is direct and salutary, and through these organs it regulates and invigorates the whole frame.

An infallible PILE remedy.—Sufferers with this painful disease who have tried electuaries, lotions, ointments, and a long list of nostrums for its relief, in vain, will thank us for calling attention to ANAKESIS, the happy discovery of Dr. SILSBEE, an experienced and scientific M. D. Thousands of cases attest its virtue; it is a simple suppository, acts as instrument, soothing poultice, and medicine, gives instant relief and cures permanently.—Price $1.00. Sold by druggists everywhere. ANAKESIS Depot, 46 Walker st., New York.

At this season of the year, when so many of our people are suffering from colds, we call attention to AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL as a sure cure not only for coughs and colds, but all affections of the lungs and throat. Having used it in our family for many years, we can speak from personal knowledge of its efficiency. There may be other remedies that are good, but in all our experience this has proved to be by far the best. Its qualities are uniform and wholly reliable. It is pleasant to take, and should be kept at command, by every family, as a protection against a class of complaints which seem harmless in the beginning, but become afflicting and dangerous if neglected.—[N. Remember that it is Helmbold's Extract that cures when all others fail. For sale by all druggists.

NO. 4 BULFINCH STREET, BOSTON.

When a thing is counterfeited, it is a proof of its excellence and popularity. The Peabody Medical Institute is a case in point. Founded in good faith many years ago, and the only establishment of the kind in the country, its success and ever-increasing popularity finally caused the name (Medical Institute) to be pirated and adopted by a lot of infamous quacks, empirics and pretenders, who have been endeavoring to cheat the public by sailing under a stolen flag. The founder of the Peabody Medical Institute can in no way be held responsible for this misuse of the name of a reputable and well-known curative establishment and legitimate medical institution, which has been from the start specially devoted to the treatment of nervous derangements and affections, from whatever causes proceeding. During its existence there have been issued from it several medical publications; quite recently a work on Diseases of the Nervous System, which have had almost a world wide circulation and popularity. These publications sufficiently attest the high character of the institution under whose patronage these medical works have been published. Meantime it is gratifying to know that several of the impudent charlatans, who have stolen its name to cover their nefarious practices, are getting their deserts in the penal institutions of the Commonwealth.—Boston Herald.

Alarming Signs! When the voice is reduced to a husky whisper, with a hacking cough and a painful respiration, there is good cause for alarm. Have recourse forthwith to Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. The relief will be immediate—the cure certain. Crittenton's 7th Avenue. Sold by all Druggists.

For elderly persons, females and children, and all others, they are exactly suited to obviate Costiveness, the prolific cause of ill health. Trial box, 39 cts. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most astonishing cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

CARRIAGES.

MR. HUNTRESS having sold his interest in the late firm of Huntress, Bryant & Co. to Mr. ELLIOTT, of Concord, who served his time with the well-known firm of Abbott, Downing & Co., and has had experience in some of the best shops in Massachusetts in

Carriage Building,

we shall continue our business the same. Having met with good success the past year, by having a good share of the patronage of the city and vicinity, we hope, by being faithful and prompt in our business, to build up a

FIRST-CLASS CARRIAGE ESTABLISHMENT,

where people can order new work of all kinds, and have the old carriages repaired, without being obliged to go out of town. We shall continue to keep on hand a variety of Carriages, Sleighs, Pungs, etc., which we shall sell as cheap as can be bought elsewhere of the same quality. We return thanks to our friends for past patronage, and hope for a continance of the same.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color. It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

The Jubilee Singers' Concert.

The audience in attendance, Thursday evening, found little to criticise even if inclined. The colored singers showed great improvement over their first concert and rendered the choruses with telling effect. Their melodies sent thrills through the hearts of listeners and some of the singers were affected to tears by the remembrances their slave songs recalled. It was a delicious entertainment and the stillness of the audience as each selection was sung was a silent tribute of appreciation. Prof. Thompson has done wonders with his class and deserves especial commendation for bringing these singers before the public.

Singing as they do without any accompaniment, keeping generally perfect time, expressing their emotions with deepest pathos, and seemingly conscious of the sad experience of slave life, the sympathies and admiration of the listeners are won at once. Harmony seems almost instinctive with them as the simple airs which are so popular and so enjoyable are rendered with a mournful cadence followed by a burst of joyous expectation.

Nearly every chorus was enthusiastically applauded, the singers responding with plantation songs which inspired audience and performers alike. We have never known listeners to be more fascinated by singing, "for the tones by turns were glad, sweetly solemn, wildly sad."

"The ole Ark," "In that great giten up morning," "Oh, Lord! keep me from sinking down," "Mary and Martha just gone along to ring dem charmin' bells," and the old favorites, "Down in de cornfield," "Old folks at home," and "Massa don't you cry," are among their best selections. Prof. Thompson's character song, "Old black Joe," with echo chorus, was well worth the price of admission, and his baritone solo "The mariner's grave," with Mrs. Bradley's soprano solo, "The Slave's Dream," were fine. Miss Sarah Hall has a rich voice of power and sweetness. No person can listen to the melodies so exquisitely rendered without wishing to join in them; long after the close of the concert the weird music was singing in our ears, of "In dat great giten up morning." There is a general desire for a repetition of the concert on some Sunday evening. Will Prof. Thompson favor the public in this particular?

A well known musical gentleman who heard the famous troupes from Fisk University and Hampton Institute, when they were here, at the close of Thursday evening's concert asserted that the Portsmouth Jubilee Singers are superior to either of the former; and a professional musician expressed a confident belief that "a quartette could be picked from that cluster of colored singers, that with a moderate amount of drilling would fully equal anything we have had here for a long time, or are likely to have soon." There are two voices (soprano and contralto) among the lady singers which we should particularly like to hear in a duet, (where all did so well it would be invidious to specify which two we mean,) and a little quartette singing would no doubt be an additional attraction at their concerts; but Prof. Thompson evidently knows exactly what he is about, and as we once had a little experience in a "volunteer" church choir and have a vivid remembrance of what language the leader used concerning volunteered advice regarding its management, from outsiders, we shall not read the able and earnest professor any lecture as to how he had best manage the fine troupe he is so perfectly competent to manage without our help.

Repeat It.

Messrs. Editors: Cannot something be done to induce Dr. Stevens to give his lecture again. Many have expressed regrets that they did not know it was to be given last evening. I think it would give pleasure to the Lyceum ticket holders if the Doctor could be induced to repeat it.

A LADY.

P. S. I send this to you by request of four ladies besides myself, who were disappointed.

Sold.

An amusing "sell" was perpetrated by Prof. Thompson, the leader of the Jubilee Singers, upon the audience at the concert by the troupe on Thursday evening. In response to an encore a chorus "not down in the bills" was given; and the leader in announcing it said: "Ladies and gentlemen, the piece which we shall now sing is not on the face of the programme; but if you look on the back of it"—here there was a loud rustling, as several hundred programmes were suddenly flopped over by their holders, and the speaker after a moment's pause continued—"you will not find it there." Those who did not have programmes, or who had them in their pockets, were much tickled at the alacrity with which the others returned their programmes to their first positions, and tried to look as though they hadn't turned them over at all.

"The boys" completely sold the City Marshal and Asst. Marshal Entwistle, Friday morning, with a first-class froze-to-death. The marshal was sent for at an early hour to take charge of the lifeless remains of some poor wanderer who had lost his life by going to sleep in a pung in Philbrick's marble yard, and hastening to the place indicated found the corpse as described,—well-dressed and lying on its face in the bottom of the pung, with the feet projecting from the rear end. Mr. Entwistle having also been sent for soon afterward arrived, quite out of breath with the speed he had made; and after inspecting the "corpse" the two prompt and energetic officers walked back to the police station, satisfied that at "making a man of straw" the builders of the froze-to-death can't be beaten.

Board of Trade.

A special meeting was held, Friday evening, J. C. Carr, Esq., in the chair. The invitation of President Jones to visit Boston on Tuesday was accepted. President Carr, Secretary Butler, and T. H. Odion, Esq. were appointed a committee of arrangements. All members desiring to go are requested to leave their names to-day with J. C. Butler, by whom tickets will be furnished, good for Tuesday and Wednesday. Everett O. Foss, Esq., Secretary of the Dover Board of Trade was present, and stated that over one hundred members would go, taking dinner at the American House. The Portsmouth city government and Board of Trade will dine with them.

Laconics.

The President of the Portsmouth and Dover Railroad has given formal notice to the Mayor of the opening of the road for travel on Monday next, and has authorized him to invite the members of the City government to join in an excursion to Boston on Tuesday. The train will leave this city for Boston at 8:23 o'clock, Tuesday morning.

Trains on the Portsmouth & Dover Railroad will commence running next Monday, leaving Portsmouth at 10 A. M., 2.55 and 5.40 P. M. Trains leave Dover at 7.45 and 10.45 A. M., and 4.25 P. M. The stations between this city and Dover are Newington, Dover Point, Cushing's and Sawyer's. The running time between Portsmouth and Dover is thirty-five minutes. A freight train will leave Portsmouth and Dover every morning at five o'clock; leaving Dover for Portsmouth at seven.

There will be a union praise meeting at the North Church, on Sunday evening, commencing at 7:30 o'clock. All will be cordially welcomed.

Portsmouth harbor is free from ice while all other harbors on the coast are partially blocked or frozen.

The tickets for the grand ball to be given by Sagamore S. F. E. Co., No. 2, in Congress Hall on the evening of Feb. 23d, can now be had of members of the company, at $1.50 each. The Hall is to be finely decorated, Edmands' Band of Boston will furnish music, supper will be served at the Rockingham, and the company propose to give the grandest Firemen's Ball ever known in this city, if hard work and lavish expense will effect it. The tickets are going rapidly, and an early application is advisable if you wish to secure one.

Trains for Dover Monday will carry passengers free.

The Fair and Festival of the Methodist society will close this evening. A novel list of entertainments, including music, will be given. Sale of articles by auction at the close. There is much excitement and amusement over the voting. At last accounts Rev. Carlos Martyn was ahead for the easy chair.

Mayor Marvin has received from the mayor of Portsmouth, England, acknowledgment of the receipt of a photographic view of the city, sent by the board of aldermen.

Collector Howard has received orders from the Secretary of the Treasury to allow the landing of the Atlantic cable at Rye Beach without the entering of the ships containing it at the custom house; also to afford the enterprise all the aid at the disposal of the government.

Citizens of Portsmouth have petitioned Congress to have the breakwater between "Smutty Nose" and Cedar Island, at the Isle of Shoals, repaired. The sea-wall there was built by authority of an act of Congress passed in 1821, and the memorialists state that with proper repairing the harbor may still be the refuge of numerous fishermen and coasters, as in former years.

George Dunn, for many years owner of the Dover & Portsmouth packet line, has formed a copartnership with two others and will enter upon the general express business from Dover to Boston.

The amount appropriated for salaries for clerks, etc., for the navy yard for the next fiscal year, is but $18,759, a reduction of $9231, from previous years.

Two hundred dollars a year is to be the salary of the keeper of the life-saving station at Straw's Point.

The Methodist clergy of the Dover district meet in this city next Wednesday and Thursday.

The prevention of cruelty society has during the past month killed two sick horses, put twenty-seven under cover, ordered three to be better fed, lightened the loads of two teams, killed two cats and two dogs after administering ether, stopped a dog fight, put an end to a cock fight and killed one of the fowls engaged, fed a number of poor cats which were locked in a store, the owner being away, distributed tracts to men driving horses too tightly checked, and warned a man who had beaten his horse. There is a great deal of good yet to be done by the society, and it was not organized too soon by any means.

The historical addresses at the recent dedication of the town hall in Rye have been printed together in pamphlet form, and can be had of G. H. Jenness, Esq. The book embraces "The Town of Rye," by Rev. J. K. Aldrich; "The Religious Societies of Rye," by Rev. A. H. Morrill; and "The School History of Rye," by G. H. Jenness, Esq.

Rye.

The festival of the Congregational society on Wednesday and Thursday evenings was a very successful enterprise financially, and was generally satisfactory to the large audience present. The exercises were varied, and were well received, and frequently applauded. The music, singing, and speaking, were very creditable to the performers, and served to enliven the passing hours. At the close of the exercises, the fancy articles were sold at auction. Rev. Mr. Aldrich, the pastor, was presented by Mr. and Mrs. Geo. G. Lougee with a fine picture, and other presents of value. The next lecture of the school course is to be given by Prof. Quimby of Dartmouth College, on Tuesday evening next. There is to be a musical entertainment on Saturday evening, the 14th, Ball on Wednesday evening, the 11th, a school exhibition and a dramatic entertainment soon after, which together with the usual number of singing schools and dancing schools will keep people busy.

A Liquor Crusade.

[Exeter News-Letter.]

On Wednesday the local sensation of the town was the raid upon the retailers of spirituous liquors, on complaint of Rev. B. F. McDaniel. Five of the parties engaged in the business were arraigned for a violation of the law before Justice Shackford of Newmarket, who was engaged for this special service, local justices declining to act in the cases. A. L. Mellows of Newmarket, acted as prosecuting attorney, the county solicitor, J. S. H. Frink of Portsmouth, being engaged in the trial of a cause before the court now holding in this town. The parties were severally fined fifty dollars and costs. Two of them paid the fine imposed, and the others gave bonds for their appearance at the Supreme Judicial Court. The single witness for the prosecution was one Charles Oscar Smith, who was employed to purchase the liquor and appear against the parties.

—A New York gentleman protects himself against the pique and sense of injury which thieves experience when they can find nothing to carry away, by leaving in his country house, when he goes to town for the winter, a demijohn of fine old brandy. A note by the side of it explains that there is no silver in the house, that all the drawers and doors are open, requests that no unnecessary damage be done, and that his guests shall help themselves to the brandy.

A Source of Great Anxiety.

My daughter has received great benefit from the use of VEGETINE. Her declining health was a source of great anxiety to all of her friends. A few bottles of the VEGETINE restored her health, strength and appetite. NAT. WHITE,

MOTHERS, READ THIS!

A Great Blessing!

WORTH A DOLLAR A DROP.

Mothers, are your little ones fretful? And is your patience almost exhausted in vain efforts to please them? Then sympathize with you, and can tell you what will make your little child quiet, give it a good appetite, and procure for it hours of sweet, sound sleep.

My little girl is two and a half years old; and during that time I have not had two consecutive nights' rest. She has been sick a number of times and no one seemed to know what was troubling her. It was hard to hear her little fretful cry, and not know what to do for her. I doctored her for worms, but it did no good; and I was nearly tired out with sleepless nights and weeks for some days.

I heard of the VEGETINE, and determined to try it. It has proved a blessing to me and my child. It has cleansed from her stomach and bowels the sores which kept gathering there, and now she sleeps soundly from her bedtime until very late in the morning, besides a long nap at mid-day. Her appetite is good; and, in fact, she is like a different child. I often say, the true value of this medicine to me is a dollar a drop. Try it. Cleanse the humors from your children's blood while they are young. Try it, and you will join with me in calling it a great blessing. MRS. ELLEN L. CLAPP,

275 Tudor street.

South Boston, July 10, 1871.

Circulation of the Blood.

The circulation of the blood is the life of the body, and its stoppage is death. We are healthy when the blood circulates freely; any interruption preventing its free course is the commencement of disease. "Blood is the life of the flesh." Can we expect to enjoy good health when bad or corrupt humors circulate with the blood, causing pain and disease; and these humors being deposited through the entire body, produce pimples, eruptions, ulcers, indigestion, costiveness, headache, neuralgia, rheumatism, and numerous other complaints? No disease can be in the body without first being generated in the blood; and no disease can possibly be in the body if the blood is pure. It is of great importance to know what medicine will purify and renovate the blood, eradicate the disease, renew vitality, mentally and physically, and instil fresh vigor into all the vital functions of the body. This medicine is the VEGETINE, i.e great blood purifier.

It extends its influence into every part of the human organism, commencing with the foundation; correcting diseased action, and restoring vital powers, creating a healthy formation and purification of the blood, driving out disease, and leaving Nature to perform its allotted task.

VEGETINE is composed of Roots, Barks and Herbs. It is very pleasant to take; every child likes it. Sold by all Druggists. 4w 46e8p nrm.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND ZHUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as it easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Rheumatism, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an iron foundation.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

CATARRH!
A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years, Cured.
And Droppings in Throat, Choking, Strangings, Pains in the Side, Loins, Headache, Dizziness and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the CONSTITUTIONAL
CATARRH REMEDY.
To Messrs. Littlefield & Co., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.:
I reside at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Henniker, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 12 years old, and it had all the time. It run all that period, and nights it would fill up and drop down in my throat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I would spring out of bed to save myself from strangulation. It affected my head so that I got confused, and was troubled with severe headache sixteen weeks, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three weeks. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has cured me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.
MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.
Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.

I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, dropping in the throat, and coughing and strangulings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, and have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.
Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left, Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.
MARY M. ABBOTT,
No. 17 Manchester Corporation.

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 27, 1872.
The above lady is my mother. I am a painter by trade, and a member of the City Council of Manchester. Every word that my mother states is true.
JACOB J. ABBOTT.

Hundreds of cases of a similar nature cured within the last year. Smile and Laugh you need to give myself very relief. The CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY strikes at the root, bullds up the constitution, makes it new, and drives away Catarrh and all diseases of the mucous membranes and their attendant pains and aches, including to head, back, shoulders, kidneys, and throat.
Price $1 per Bottle. Sold by all Druggists. A Pamphlet of 32 pages, giving a Treatise on Catarrh and containing innumerable cases of cures, sent FREE, by addressing the Proprietors,

BRIGHT TINTS IN GRAY LIVES.

[Hearth and Home.]

Laura and I were twins. Ruth was our half sister, and nearly a dozen years our senior. She was a brisk, cheery body, one in whom the Yankee gift, "faculty," was largely developed. Her face showed knowledge of evil as well as good, but it was the look of a pure, strong spirit, that had the evil under subjection; often sorely tempted, it may be, but conquered—never. Ruth was one of those who keep their Sunday dress nature for mere acquaintances, and let their nearest friends have the soul's deshabille; she always made the best of everything, turning to the world the bright side of her life, even as the market woman puts the fairest part of her fruit uppermost.

During our father's lifetime, he had done a small business as commission merchant, sending butter and cheese to New York city for the farmers in our little town of Berkley. By great economy he had secured a comfortable home; but when Laura and I were only a year old, he died suddenly of heart disease, leaving a delicate wife with three children to support. A short time previous to his death he had taken the precaution to have his life insured; but this slender income hardly sufficed for our wants, and since my earliest recollection life with us had been rather a pinched, frost-bitten affair.

When Laura and I were thirteen, Ruth married her old playmate, George Ames. He was about as poor as herself, "but rich," as he laughingly said, "in the chief elements of success—a pair of strong hands and a disposition to work." The young couple hired a small farm not far from Berkley, and for a few years were happy and prosperous.

Then came the Great Rebellion. George was anxious to volunteer, and his wife's brave heart would not hinder him. He disposed of his stock and lease of the farm, and Ruth came home to us. We all know the sad story of the Union repulse at Big Bethel. Ruth never saw her husband alive again. She remained with us and faithfully shared with her stepmother all heavy burdens.

Mother's health, always feeble, now began to fail. Before the war ended, she too, left us, and at the time my story opens, we three sisters were living alone together.

I was unlike my twin sister. She was tall, strong, and self-reliant; I was slender, pale and timid. When a little child, I had received an injury in my right foot from a push by a rough boy on the school playground, and the prospect was that I should be lame all my life. For nearly two years now, Laura had taught gymnastics in L—— Seminary, and this was the last day of her spring vacation.

"April, May, June, July,—four weary months before we see you again, Laura. I hate to have you go back to L——. You are much too pretty for hard work, poor pay, and poor fare," and I looked with loving admiration at the fresh, rosy face opposite me.

"The hard work and poor fare are nothing, Edna dear," replied Laura; "but we ought not to be separated even for so short a time. How can this be managed? Come Ruth, do sit down a moment, and help us plan. What matter if those dishes are not finished at precisely a certain hour?"

Ruth laughed, and obeyed with the resigned expression of one who could not possibly gain anything by complying.

"Does it not seem, girls, that on this question of work and wages our thoughts travel in a circle? We always come back to Laura's plan of opening a small family boarding-school—the favorite of needy gentlewomen. For my part, two years' experience of district school teaching has cured me of all further desire to 'train the young idea.' I would sooner take in washing."

Ruth's tone was decided.

"And as for a situation in a school," she continued, "there is a call nowadays for thoroughly trained teachers who have made a speciality of some particular branch. It is not too late for you, Laura and Edna, but my day has gone by. There were plenty of good seeds sown in my mind, but I have no good crop of any one thing. No; my talent, if I have any, is housekeeping, and this I must make pay somehow;" and Ruth surveyed her little, hard, brown hands, with a very determined expression.

"How nice to be poor after the graceful fashion of English heroines!" remarked Laura, irrelevantly. "They always have a maid. If their tea is weak and the bread and butter thin, the meal is always sent into the parlor and served in delicate china. They never blacken their hands peeling potatoes and apples, nor blister them doing the family ironing; neither have the dainty creatures any conception of the moral courage it requires to plunge one's arm into the brine of the pork barrel."

"You are not often called upon to stand the latter test," said Ruth slyly.

"But I have had experience enough to understand that it is disagreeable," persisted Laura.

"Gray lives are interesting only in romance," sighed I.

"And yet," added Ruth softly, you remember Thoreau thought it possible for one to have many happy hours even in a poor house."

"I suppose," reluctantly admitted Laura, "that it is a weak, shallow soul that grumbles at destiny and complains of her lot. Better work conscious of authority, though compelled to humbly labor."

"But come to the matter in hand," said practical sister Ruth, "there is no denying that we are getting behindhand each year. The place is running down, and we have no money for repairs. The house needs painting, the roof leaks, the fence is shabby,——"

Her look of despair was so comical that Laura and I laughed outright.

"If we only did not live in a little factory village I might make what musical taste I possess available, and so contribute my share toward our support. Shall I always have to be a burden on you girls?" and my heart was heavy as I spoke.

Their loving words of sisterly comfort need not here be repeated. After all, we were rich in one another.

"How few possibilities there are for women!" began Laura.

"Nonsense!" interrupted Ruth, cheerily. "Possibilities are plenty. We might turn our fine large yard into a garden."

"You would find more hard work than poetry," and Laura smiled with an air of superior wisdom.

There were a few moments of silence, and then Ruth spoke hesitatingly: "I will tell you what, in my opinion, is our best course—for the present, at least. Laura must keep her situation at L—— Seminary; Edna will stay at home and study music; and I am going to take boarders. Seriously girls, this is not a new idea with me. Do you remember the conversation the other evening when Mrs. Hubbard called? She was telling me how well the Johnson's had succeeded since leaving Berkley. When they left the village they were in destitute circumstances; but by keeping summer boarders they have had a comfortable living all the year, besides laying by something towards paying for their house. The secret of success in their case seems to be in their doing most of the work themselves, and so needing few servants; they raise all their own vegetables, and they charge a high price for board. 'City people expect to pay well, and Mrs. Hubbard.'"

"But—" exclaimed Laura and myself in one breath.

"Just hear me through," continued Ruth, becoming more animated. "We own the house; that is a great point in our favor—no high rent to pay. The garden will supply us with fruit and vegetables. Then, I believe Aunt Deborah and Uncle James would be glad to come to live with us. They have no home of their own. With Aunt Deborah's help, I could get along with one servant. Uncle James will make the garden. The unfinished room over the dining-room can be done off for them; we can give up the parlor with the bed-room adjoining, to boarders, and can also spare two rooms up-stairs."

Laura and I looked at each other dubiously. This was indeed a new project.

"It is a great risk, Ruth."

"Of course," replied she briskly; "life is a series of risks."

"Shall you advertise for your city boarders?"

The incredulous smile of my twin sister as she asked this question, would have annoyed a less sunny temper than Ruth's.

"That is unnecessary," was her quiet reply. "A great many people stay over night in Berkley on their way to the White Mountains; and I have often heard that if there were only suitable accommodations at the tavern, it could be full of visitors all summer."

Ruth's manner was inspiring; and as she concluded with, "Trust me, girls; I am confident of success," we were almost ready to yield to her decision.

"I am not quite prepared to give my consent to expose you to the mercy of city boarders, or any other," said Laura, as she rose from the table. "Not being what is called a sharp manager (and heaven defend you from ever becoming one,) you would constantly be imposed upon. You will never succeed in a public career, dear! The world is a great game of brag. To hide one's light under a bushel is to put one's self in the way of a merciless snubbing, or else that most unpleasant virtue, condescension."

"How the child talks!" said Ruth, greatly amused. "Who has lived the longer, Laura, you or I? And now it is time you were packing the old black trunk. As you go up stairs, please look in the clothes-press by the chimney, to see if the rain leaks in. I have my suspicions."

I shall always think that Ruth had a double motive in this last request, for she hurried with alacrity in obedience to the call that reached her in a few moments later from the upper hall.

"Just see!" and Laura's tragic gesture of despair as she threw open the clothes-press door was worthy of a Siddons.

It was indeed a forlorn sight.

The air was thick with that indescribable sickening smell of liquid soot, while big black drops trickled fast down the ceiling, and fell splashing into the large pool they had formed on the floor.

"I am not surprised," said Ruth coolly surveying the scene. "It is well that I removed the things yesterday. The old shingles are like so much paper protection."

"It is miserable to be poor!" ejaculated Laura impatiently.

"Never mind!" was Ruth's consoling answer. "I shall earn enough this summer to make everything snug and trim." And to Ruth's triumph, Laura made no farther objections.

The new plan promised to work admirably. Uncle James and aunt Deborah gladly consented to come, and soon the rumor crept around the village that repairs were making at the Bennett place, and Mrs. Ruth Ames, was going to keep boarders.

One evening the chatty landlady of the little tavern came bustling up to see us.

"Wal, if you ain't as slick as a fiddle up here! I tell 'em you are a master hand, Mis' Ames, and no mistake! I sez to John this mornin', sez I, I shouldn't wonder if Mis' Ames could take the new doctor to board."

"The new doctor?" repeated Ruth, inquiringly.

"Wal, I don't s'pose he's actually settled yet," was good Mrs. Williams reply. "It depends on how he likes Berkley. He's a friend of Judge Loomis, and was sent for once before when the Judge had a fit—them Loomises are a dreadful fitty set—and now, I guess the doctor ejaculates to spend the summer, if he can get board in a private house. I'll send him to look at your rooms."

"Is he old or young?" asked Ruth.

"Wal, middlin', I should say. He's a smart appearin' man—looks as if when he set out to do anything he'd carry his point—but he don't look handsome much, no more than I;" and Mrs. Williams' fat homely face wrinkled all over with her good-natured smile.

"He's one of the kind I like, though," she added. "He's brown as a berry, and has dark hair and eyes. I tell him if there's one thing I despise more'n another, it's a slack-backed individual."

In due time Dr. Philip Raymond called, and his quiet gentlemanly bearing made a favorable impression on both Ruth and Aunt Deborah. As he looked around the cheerful parlor, and in the cosy bedroom adjoining, a pleased smile lighted up his dark face. "This is my idea of home comfort!" he exclaimed, and immediately engaged the rooms at double Ruth's modest estimate.

As the season advanced, Ruth realized her expectations of having a house filled with boarders, but whether her experiment was a great success financially, I shall leave for her sometime to tell.

The doctor daily grew in favor. Aunt Deborah especially thought there was nothing too good for him. When we teased her about her evident liking, she boldly defended herself declaring that all the superabundant affection of old women goes either to their minister or their doctor, she had a right to bestow her share upon Dr. Raymond.

"I hear that he is a famous surgeon," she remarked, one day, while engaged on her favorite theme—the doctor's merits. "I believe he can cure Edna's lameness."

I felt myself turning white and faint at the suggestion of an operation on my foot. Ruth hastened to re-assure me, but from her manner it was plain to perceive that this had entered her mind before.

The first shock over, gradually their confidence inspired me, and finally I was persuaded to an examination.

"Can you bear a little pain, Miss Edna. In my opinion your lameness is not incurable. I once saw, in a Paris hospital, a similar case cured by judicious treatment. The operation will require time, and be rather tedious; but think of the result and have courage!"

There was something so strong, tender, and compassionate in the kind eyes turned full upon mine, that had the doctor desired to dissect me, I should doubtless have willingly consented.

In the weary weeks of suffering that followed, I learned the noble nature of Philip Raymond.

'Ruth, he is almost good enough for Laura?' I exclaimed one evening, shortly after my twin sister's return. In saying this I had paid him the highest compliment in my power, for Laura was my idol. 'Where are they, Ruth? I hear their voices.'

'Out on the front door step, looking at the moon and parlez vousing. Why people with English tongues wish to use any other, is past my comprehension.'

'I see how it will all end!' and I nestled contentedly among the pillows of my low couch, and began to weave a delightful romance, in which the couple on the door-step figured conspicuously.

'Ruth, don't you wish it would happen?'

'Wish what would happen?'

'Why, Laura and the doctor——'

'I don't know that I do,' replied Ruth dryly.

'They will make a charming pair,' mused I: 'so well fitted for each other.'

Ruth looked at me searchingly without comment. I thought her contrary. There was a little spice of that in her disposition.

Dr. Raymond and Laura seemed to be on the best terms with each other. Once, I hoped to surprise her into a confession.

'Well, dear, what do you think of him?'

'Who? The doctor? Oh! he is very nice, only just a little bit of an old bachelor—is he not, Edna?'

'Old bachelor,' and 'nice!' Laura, I am ashamed of you!' were my indignant exclamations. 'He is perfection! And I wanted you to like him.'

'So I do, you delicious little goose! O Edna! where are your eyes?' And to my great perplexity Laura laughed merrily.

'You need not build any castles for me in that direction, I assure you, Edna,' she began. 'Besides, I fear I hate the so-called sphere of woman. I long to have a profession, and the position and influence it brings. Who does not wish to be a genius? For my part, I am tired of always having to warm myself at other people's fires! I long to become a power in the world!'

Her voice rang out sweet and clear, and her beautiful face glowed with earnest feeling.

'Ah! if he could only see her now!' thought I.

It was a memorable day when I graduated from my couch and crutches.

'Let us celebrate by a croquet party and tea in the orchard,' proposed Laura.

Leaning on Dr. Raymond's arm, I walked very slowly, but unimpingly, down the yard to the seat prepared for me under the trees. Nothing could exceed the doctor's quiet solicitude for my comfort. Somehow, I was not half so glad to be better, as might reasonably be expected. Perhaps it was from thinking that his delicate attention would soon cease altogether.

'I am spoiled by so much petting,' and my voice was not quite steady as I thanked the doctor for his unobtrusive care.

He looked down on me with his rare bright smile.

'My—'

'All ready!' shouted the players.

'Come, doctor, it is your turn.'

And his sentence was not finished until a few hours later.

I grew rather tired, though, before the afternoon was ended. It was dull watching the others, and I attempted to steal across the ground, hoping to gain the house unnoticed. But I had miscalculated my strength; and then, unfortunately, a vigorous ill-directed stroke from Laura's mallet sent a ball whizzing toward me. I could not move quickly enough to avoid the blow that came crashing against my poor lame foot. The sunshine turned black, and the trees went dancing around me. 'My darling!' and with a bound Dr. Raymond had reached my side.

When I opened my eyes again, I was in my old place on the low couch, and loving faces were bending over me. But I saw only the doctor's; and I read there the truth that I had been too blind before to discover.

'Well,' said Ruth, smiling, 'do you wish it would happen now; Laura and the doctor you know; so well fitted for each other—'

'My beloved patient shall not be teased;' and Dr. Raymond, with mock sternness drove them all out of the room.

I shall probably always limp a little, my husband says, but I have his strong arm on which to lean. We are Ruth's boarders still; and when Laura finishes her studies at the Boston Medical College, we four are going to Europe.

And so bright tints may creep into gray lives after all.

"Rootin' Round" in a Poor Pasture.

[From Washington Smith's Biography.]

When Washington studied medicine, a great deal of difficulty was experienced in procuring dead bodies for dissection, and the students at his college used to make forays upon the cemeteries at night for the purpose of maintaining the supply. One day they heard of the interment of a person who died of a mysterious malady, and they determined to resurrect the remains. That night, Washington and his friends started out without a lantern, but with plenty of spades and shovels. When they came to the place and saw the white marble tombstones, they climbed over the fence, and after a while found a spot where the earth was apparently fresh. Then they began to dig. They dug for two hours, and went down about twenty-four feet. After they had excavated a big enough hole to make a couple of cellars and a rifle pit, they concluded that they must have been at the wrong spot. They picked out another place where the ground had just been upturned—and after nearly bursting a blood vessel apiece and getting out a few hundred tons of dirt, they knocked off, and as they sat down on the edge of the hole to rest and wipe off the perspiration, they expressed their astonishment at the scarcity of bodies in that particular burial ground. It was getting on toward morning then, but they determined to try once more. Just as they removed the first shovelful of earth, Washington, who had been wandering around the place meanwhile, suddenly said, in a mournful voice:

"Boys, I think we had better go home now."

"Why? What for?" they asked.

"Well, I think anyhow we'd better knock off now on account of various things."

"What d' you mean? What d' you want to go home for?" asked the crowd.

"Well," said Washington, "I think it would be judicious for several reasons, but principally because we've been rootin' around here all the night in a marble yard!"

They did go home. They had gotten over the wrong fence, the cemetery being a few steps further down the road. The members of the class who went out after breakfast to see how the ruins looked by daylight said that while the owner of the marble yard did not invent any new kind of swearing when he came to business, he infused into the old variety a very unusual and picturesque scenery.

Incongruous Parallels.

Reading Mr. Mark Twain's late and widely quoted speech in response to the toast of "Woman" at the festival of the Scottish Corporation of London, and recalling Artemus Ward's oratorical vein, one is prompted to wonder with which humorist the peculiar style was original. As reported by English papers, Mr. Twain said, in the course of his remarks: "The phases of the womanly nature are infinite in their variety. Take any type of woman, and you shall find in it something to respect, something to admire, something to love. And you shall find the whole joining you heart and hand. Who was more patriotic than Joan of Arc? Who was braver? Who has given us a grander instance of self-sacrificing devotion? Ah, you remember, you remember well what a throb of pain, what a great tidal wave of grief swept over us all when Joan of Arc fell at Waterloo. (Much laughter.) Who does not sorrow for the loss of Sappho, the sweet singer of Israel? Who among us does not miss the gentle ministrations, the softening influence, the humble piety of Lucretia Borgia? (Laughter.) Who can join in the heartless libel that says woman is extravagant in dress when he can look back and call to mind our simple and lowly mother Eve arrayed in her modification of the Highland costume. (Roars of laughter.) Sir, women have been soldiers, women have been painters, women have been poets. As long as language lives the name of Cleopatra will live. And not because she conquered George III. —(laughter)—but because she wrote the divine lines—

'Let dogs delight to bark and bite,
For God hath made them so.'"

The secret of the "fun" here is in extravagance of misassociation, and that is the trick of the following passage from one of Ward's English lectures: "I like art. I admire dramatic art, although I failed as an actor. It was in my schoolboy days that I failed as an actor. The play was the "Ruins of Pompeii." I played the Ruins. It was not a very successful performance, but it was better than the 'Burning Mountain.' He was not good. He was a bad Vesuvius. The remembrance often makes me ask, 'Where are the boys of my youth?' I assure you this is a conundrum. Some are amongst you here, some in America, some are in jail. Hence arises a most touching question—'Where are the girls of my youth?' Some are married; some would like to be. Oh, my Maria! Alas! she married another—they frequently do. I hope she is happy, because I am. Some people are not happy; I have noticed that. My orchestra is small, but I am sure it is good so far as it goes. I give my pianist ten pounds a night and his washing. I like music. I can't sing. As a singist I am not a success. I am saddest when I sing; so are those who hear me. They are sadder even than I am. The other night some silver-voiced young man came under the window and sang 'Come where my love lies dreaming.' I didn't go; I didn't think it would be correct."

—The Pioneer Farmer, published at Forsyth, Mo., engages in none of your chromo gift-enterprises in order to obtain subscribers. It makes the following unique proposition: "Farmers may give us their names and we will enter them on our subscription-books and forward the paper, the parties obligating themselves between now and the 1st day of May to select from their stock of hogs one healthy pig, which shall be put in our mark and remain with the herd of hogs, and treated in the same manner that the party treats his own stock, until the 1st day of next October, when, if living, it is to be delivered to us; if it dies it shall be our loss. If the pig is delivered in a healthy condition we will send the paper eighteen months, otherwise one year. Now every farmer knows that an ordinary pig is not worth more than fifty cents, and the cost of keeping it will never be felt by the farmer. This way every farmer can get the paper without money, and very little labor. Who will be first on the list?"

—A span of horses in a small Wisconsin town, kept for trading and speculation exclusively, have a little history of their own. They sold in Green Bay for 65 cents. Then they rapidly rose in value until they brought $5. Excitement running high, and appearances indicating that they would soon be able to stand alone, they were put up at a raffle, and seventy-five tickets were sold at $1 each. A Depere man won them, and thought himself lucky, but after feeding them $10 worth of hay and oats, he became discouraged, and sold them for seventy-five cents. The man who got them traded them to a barber for two months' shave, and the barber went out and hung himself. The result is that the horses are now without a protector.

PEABODY MEDICAL INSTITUTE
NO. 4 BULFINCH STREET, BOSTON.

When a thing is counterfeited, it is a proof of its excellence and popularity. The Peabody Medical Institute is a case in point. Founded in good intent many years ago, and the only establishment of the kind in the country, its success and ever-increasing popularity finally caused the name (Medical Institute) to be pirated and adopted by a host of infamous quacks, empirics and pretenders, who have been endeavoring to cheat the public by selling under a stolen flag. The founder of the Peabody Medical Institute can in no way be held responsible for the misuse of the name of a reputable and well-known curative establishment and legitimate medical institution, which has been from the start specially devoted to the treatment of nervous disorders and affections, from whatever causes proceeding. During its existence there have been issued from it several medical publications; quite recently a work on Diseases of the Nervous System, which have had almost a world wide circulation and popularity. These publications sufficiently attest the high character of the institution under whose patronage these medical works have been published. Meantime it is gratifying to know that several of the impudent charlatans, who have stolen its name to cover their nefarious practices, are getting their desserts in the penal institutions of the Commonwealth.—Boston Herald.

Local Matters.

P. & D. R. R.

On the arrival of the first train over the Portsmouth & Dover Railroad, this morning, the bells of the city will be rung for a half hour. Don't cry "Fire!"

Trains over the Portsmouth & Dover Railroad, carrying everybody who wishes to go, free, will run to-day as follows: Leave this city at 10 o'clock A. M., 2:55 and 5:40 P. M.; leave Dover at 7:45 and 10:45 A. M., and 4:25 P. M.

The fare to Dover after to-day is 40 cents. The distance between the depots is ten miles and 88-100.

Superintendent Prescott of the Eastern Railroad and President Jones of the Portsmouth & Dover, went over the latter road on Saturday and perfected arrangements for running trains. They found the road-bed in excellent condition. The road is to be run as a branch, Conductor Pickering running all the trains between Portsmouth and Dover. Mr. Pickering has rapidly risen during his connection with the Eastern road, is trustworthy and capable, and we congratulate him on the confidence bestowed on him.

Col. Hadley Wins.

The trial of the suit of Col. Wm. S. Hadley vs. the New Hampshire Fire Insurance Co. was concluded at Exeter, Friday, Judge Hibbard's charge being concluded in the evening. The jury was out twenty minutes and then returned a verdict for Col. Hadley for $4000 and interest ($450). The trial lasted five days, the defence being that the house, the "Seaside," was actually a boarding house and not a private residence when insured. It was burned nearly two years ago.

A Good Man Remembered.

Rev. C. P. Smith, late pastor of the Christian church in this city, seems to be appreciated in West Randolph, Vt., as will be seen by the following, from the Green Mountain Herald:

The friends and parishioners of Rev. C. P. Smith assembled in large numbers at his house on Friday evening of last week, bearing in their hands many and costly gifts, it being the fifteenth anniversary of his wedding-day. It is estimated that nearly three hundred were present, and it seems to be the general opinion that this was the greatest wedding of the season. A great number of articles were presented, among which may be mentioned a silver castor, a silver cake-basket, two sets of knives and forks, a writing desk and paper, one dozen breakfast plates, one dozen tea plates, one-half dozen dessert plates, one dozen handled tea cups, one dozen handled coffee cups, one sugar bowl and creamer, one dozen sauce plates, one pickle dish, one glass sauce dish, one glass pitcher, one dozen goblets, one mustache cup, one hair cloth sofa, one black walnut extension table. These with some money amounted to upwards of a hundred dollars in value.

Laconics.

Election four weeks from to-morrow.

Timothy Clifford of Newburyport is on trial at Saco for throwing a man overboard at Kittery, with intent to kill.

The attempt to start a new democratic paper in Dover seems to have been a failure. When it came to raising the money for it, difficulty was found in raising $400 even, and the project was abandoned. Foster's Democrat is the only democratic paper which has fought the license scheme, and the democratic farmers of Belknap, Carroll and Strafford counties are so far demoralized that the vote for Weston will fall far below that of last year. The democracy thereabouts are listless, without money and have no enthusiasm.

A noted hunter of Kittery fears that he has been the victim of a "sell." He has a gun that scatters shot badly, so that it is not of much account. A while ago, he saw an advertisement in a paper, offering to send information whereby such "scattering" of shot could be effectually prevented, on receipt of fifty cents. He sent the money, and in due time was informed that to prevent his gun from "scattering" he should "put in only one shot."

Our neighbor of the Times must be a veritable "dog-in-the-manger." He finds fault when men are employed at the yard, taunts them when discharged, and is chagrined when an order comes for their reinstatement. One would think that he feels better satisfied when 1000 men walk about our streets idly than when they are receiving $2 per diem each, the only excuse being that in the former contingency the democracy might gain a few votes from the poverty of the poorer classes. There are more democrats employed at the yard to-day than for many years, yet the Times seems as jealous and selfish as if their prosperity were very vexatious. We would like to see every man in Portsmouth who suffers from impecuniosity employed at the yard, even were the Times editor included in the number.

George S. Chapman of Kittery has been appointed quarterman blacksmith at the navy yard. Mr. Chase Goodwin of Wells, Me., has been appointed store clerk in the Steam Engineering department vice Mr. Moses A. Safford.

John E. Rider, Esq., of this city was in the sleeping car of the train on which the accident occurred Friday morning on the New Jersey railroad. He was thrown from his berth but escaped with a blow on the head. Senator Conkling of New York had a very narrow escape.

Lieut. John Dennett, of the U. S. revenue service, thinks himself unfairly dealt with in a paragraph which appeared in the CHRONICLE last week, in which an unfavorable comparison was drawn between the conduct of a lieutenant of the revenue service and that of several naval officers, at the Kittery fire. As Mr. Dennett was the only revenue officer present on that occasion, he thinks he must have been the one meant; and as he was looking for a physician at the time, and did not arrive at the fire until it was nearly out and there was but little left even for those engaged to do, he considers the remark about his not assisting needless and unjust. As to his fearing to get his "brass buttons" tarnished by salt water, he had no such fear, as he was luxuriating in a bell-topper and "muffi" that morning, having left his uniform safe at home.

The Methodist Festival closed Saturday evening. Orville D. Bryant, overseer at Kearsarge Mills, had 1093 votes for the silver epergne; Stephen L. Marston, Chief Engineer of the Fire Department, had 1092. A Masonic jewel was awarded to Samuel S. Fletcher, and the saw-horse went to John E. Roberts. The gavel was voted to the Knights of Pythias, and the chair was voted to Rev. Carlos Martyn, while the jack-knife for the homeliest man was awarded to Wm. Frazer, the handsomest man in the hall.

The Manchester Union referring to our notice of the mistake made by Mr. Beck of Kentucky in the House of Representatives, in crediting certain statements (which he read from the Times) to the GAZETTE, says we "devote nearly a column to this mistake, but make no denial of the facts." We didn't know there were any "facts" in the case—nothing but the unsupported assertions of a democratic paper, made in one of its chronic attacks on the administration,—and how many "facts" are generally found in such a connection no one knows better than the Union.

By reference to the advertisement it will be seen that Jackson & Co. have commenced running their express to and from Dover three times daily.

The ungentlemanly, and we might say riotous, conduct of some persons at the Methodist Festival, Saturday evening, was without excuse and deserves the reprobation of all peace-loving citizens. At best the proposition to allot gifts by ballot causes excited rivalry and leads to contention. As a money making scheme it is usually a success; but religious societies should aim to secure peace even at a pecuniary sacrifice. Rev. A. C. Hardy and the lady who presided at the ballot box are too well known for unprejudiced persons to believe that they are inclined to deal unfairly. Both were blamed by a few indiscreet parties, whose conduct only showed that they were out of place among decent people.

Nature's Cathartic.

No medicine is needed to keep the bowels in order as long as nature's cathartic, the bile, flows freely and regularly from its source in the liver, and is of the right strength and quality. But the great biliary gland is easily disordered, and the consequences of its irregularities are serious. To bring it back to its natural condition when thus affected, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters should be taken at least twice a day until the desired object is attained. Constipation is due to a scant supply of bile, or to a lack of the stimulating element in that fluid. In either case mere purgation is useless. The liver must be compelled to yield the supply of bile necessary to remove the waste matter from the system at least once in twenty-four hours before a radical cure of costiveness can be accomplished. Hostetter's Bitters produce this effect. Its action upon the stomach and liver is direct and salutary, and through these organs it regulates and invigorates the whole frame.

An Infallible PILE remedy.—Sufferers with this pain ul disease who have tried electuaries, lotions, oin ments, and a long list of nostrums for its relief, in vain, will thank us for calling attention to AXAKESIS, t e happy discovery of DR. STEPHENS, an experienced and celebrated M. D. Thousands of cases attest its virtue; it is a simple suppository, acts as instrument, soothing poultice, and medicine, gives instant relief and cures permanently.—Price $1.00. Sold by druggists everywhere. ANAKESIS Depot, 46 Walker st., New York.

At this season of the year, when so many of our people are suffering from colds, we call attention to AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL as a sure cure not only for coughs and colds, but all affections of the lungs and throat. Having used it in our family for many years, we can speak from personal knowledge of its efficiency. There may be other remedies that are good, but in all our experience this has proved to be by far the best. Its qualities are uniform and wholly reliable. It is pleasant to take, and should be kept at command, by every family, as a protection against a class of complaints which seem harmless in the beginning, but become afflicting and dangerous if neglected.—[N. H. Register.]

Helmbold's Buchu—the only extract of that wonderful curative shrub that contains its full virtues, is still considered the true specific for Kidney Diseases, Gravel, Diabetes, Calculus, Dropsy, and those obscure diseases that undermine life and rob it of its joyment. Dr. Helmbold, who spent a fortune in making his discovery known, has lived to see it endorsed by the physicians and people of two continents. Remember that it is Helmbold's Extract that cures when all others fail. For sale by all druggists.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver or "Biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. 706

—As soon as the Congressional chaplain closes his appeal to the throne of grace there is a clapping of hands all over the floor. It is the way the members have of calling pages to their side. Every Congressman begins his day's labor by giving an order to a messenger; hence the clapping is universal and uproarious. "Well, that beats me," said an elderly man in the gallery, with mud on his boots, which looked as though it had been brought from the other side of the Potomac; "I don't see anything in that prayer worth cheering."

—The Chinese idols on board the steamship China had a narrow escape from destruction during the last trip of that vessel. A San Francisco paper states that when the China arrived there was great hilarity in the quarters of the Mongolians, and the walls of apprehension that had filled the temple for ten days previous were changed to pæans of triumph. Arrangements were immediately set on foot for the solemn ceremonies of installation of the gods as soon as the customs officers should perform the duty of inspection, to see that no contraband articles were secreted in their ugly carcasses. The hideous images will be set up in time to preside over the delightful festivities of the Chinese New Year, now near at hand.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all 35 Years, Cured.

CONSTITUTIONAL
CATARRH REMEDY.
TO MESSRS. LITTLEFIELD & CO., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.:
I resided at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Hennikes, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh for thirty years, over since I was 18 years old; had it bad all the time. It ran all that period, and nights it would fill up and from down in my throat, causing a gulping of mucus, so that I would spring up in bed to save myself from strangulation. It always was bad so that I felt confined and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for a week at a time. I also had bad pains in shoulders, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely. So bad were they, that a year ago last summer I was confined to the bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of quaff and Catarrh remedies with no particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough. I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to grow better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured; my health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.
MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.
Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.

I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered horribly; have had difficulty in running at the nose, dropping in the throat, chokings and strangulings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies, but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.
Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left, Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.

The Story of a Kiss.

[Hearth and Home.]

"You wished to see me, Doctor?"

"I did, Miss Dallas, and upon a very serious matter. Pardon me if I appear to be meddling with your secrets; I do it only to save a fellow-creature's life."

The young woman's face flushed during the remarks, but paled when he spoke so gravely. He continued:

"Three weeks ago I was called to the bedside of Harry Gilman, and found him prostrated with brain fever. I saw at the outset that the case was a desperate one, but hoped that skill and care might bring him through. From that day until this I have been almost constant in my attendance upon him; have battled with the disease inch by inch; and striven with what skill I had at command to save him.

Early in my attendance I saw there was some dreadful disappointment beneath his malady, if not the cause of his prostration. In the hours that his mind wandered, your name was constantly on his tongue. His sister told me, in answer to my questions, that Harry was deeply and truly in love with you, but that an estrangement has come between you lately; and I think this blow has been the one that brought him under my care. To-night the crisis in his disease will be reached, and to-night will answer our questions as to whether he will live or die. Without any help but such as I can render him he may be saved; but a man's life is too great a jewel to trifle with, and we feel if you would but help us we could surely save him. Will you consent to assist us?"

"What could I do?" she asked.

"The plan I have marked out in my mind," said he, "is simply this. About midnight he will arouse from his present stupor, and in the next ten minutes his fate will be decided. The main point will be to have him make an effort for his own life. Should he try to live, his chances will be among the best; should he make no such effort, we might with stimulants carry him beyond danger; but if at that moment he recalls the past, and despondently sinks under it, no power under heaven but you can save him."

"And what would you have me do?"

"Just this, Miss Dallas: if when he awakens, he is hopeful and remembers nothing of his disappointment, we will not need you at all. But should he begin to sink, the sight of you would save him."

"But how?"

"We could pretend you had recalled your decision of a few weeks ago."

"Oh, that would be too horrible! I could never do that."

"Not to save a man's life?" he asked solemnly.

"He would not thank me for saving his life by such a mockery," she said. "Why I might have to say that I loved him, might I not?"

"Yes."

"Oh, I could not do it!"

"Not even to save his life?"

"You said that before," she said "but not even for that could I do this thing. Harry and I have ever been dear friends. I never fancied that he could love me until he surprised me by his avowal, and then I told him it could not be. How could I stand at his bedside now and say that I loved him? No, no, it cannot be. Think of some other plan."

"I have thought of all ways, Miss Dallas. I may not have to ask you to do this thing that you dislike so much, unless in the contingency I spoke of. I will not say to you what you ought to do, my dear young lady, but I promise you, if I am compelled to ask your assistance, that I will explain the whole matter to Harry, just as it is, and give him a correct report and understanding of your part in it."

"But could I ever meet him again?"

"It will be no harder then than it is now. And I have no doubt Harry will leave the place if he recovers."

"I would be glad to help you, Doctor, but this would seem like profanity to me."

"It is to save a fellow creature's life; and be all the blame on me."

"I wish I could do it, but what an awful thing it is for a girl to do!"

"I can appreciate your hesitation, and yet, if you were my daughter I would say it was your duty to do it."

"Thank you for saying that, Doctor; it decides me. I will do what you ask."

"Thanks; I will call for you this evening, and explain your part to you."

Later in the night there gathered around the bed of the sick man his mother and sisters, the doctor and Kate Dallas. The doctor had explained to the others the part he had persuaded Kate to act, if it should be necessary, and they had thanked her over and over for consenting. They sat near each other; the mother and sisters wondering in their own hearts that any girl could know their Harry and not love him, but yet, they are women enough to know that love cannot be forced or reasoned.

"How is he now, Doctor?" the mother whispers, and his reply, "There is no change." They await the slow turnings of another hour, and then the sleeper makes some movements with his lips, and the doctor, bending over, catches the word, "Kate," but he does not tell it to the others. By and by there is another movement, and the doctor beckons them out of the room.

"In a quarter of an hour more he will awaken," he says. "You, Mrs. Gilman and Ruth will stand near me and be ready to catch the first question he asks and answer it. Miss Dallas, you will stand at the door and come if I speak to you, and act as I have told you before. If we are prompt and careful, and God wills it, we will save his life."

The mother and sisters step softly back to the bedside, and the doctor, reading the tremor in Kate's eyes, waits to speak with her.

"You will not have to say a word, Miss Dallas. I will play the tyrannical doctor to perfection and save you, as well as quiet any apprehensions that come to his mind. God bless you!"

"It was no common case with Doctor Brown, this attendance on Harry Gilman. When he came to Melville a poor, unknown graduate, seeking to establish himself and earn his daily bread, it was Harry Gilman's father who had been the first to trust him, the first to say a kindly word to him, the one who had taken him to his own fireside and made him feel he was in the house of a friend; the one who had honored him with his friendship in all the succeeding years. Doctor Brown was now, with skill and care, repaying to the son the debt he owed the father, and he could not have done more for his own child. As he looked into the face of Kate Dallas, he could not but feel it was a fearful experiment he was about to make in two lives, but he brushed the thought aside, and returned to his patient.

There were the premonitory symptoms of awakening upon the part of the sick man, and the hearts of the women around him seemed almost bursting with suspense and anxiety. At last the eyes opened; the wild look in them soon gave way to one of recognition, and the lips feebly uttered:

"Mother."

She could not speak; her heart was too full for words, but she bent over and kissed him.

"Have I been here long?"

"Not such a great while," said the cheery voice of the doctor, "but plenty long enough. Here, take a drop of this," and he gave him some stimulating drops.

"Have I been very sick?"

"You have been pretty sick, my boy, but you must not talk. Turn over and go to sleep again, and you can talk as long as you wish to-morrow."

"Is that Ruth?"

"Yes, Harry."

"Tell Kate——"

"Nonsense," broke in the doctor, "take a little more of this and go to sleep without another word," but he turned to Kate, and his eyes said, "it will have to be done."

She tried to still the beating of her heart, but she had no fear for herself.

"Tell Kate—" Harry started again, but the doctor, after a quiet draught was administered, said:

"Why don't you tell her yourself?"

"Who? Is she here?" he asked excitedly.

The doctor caught his hand quietly, saying, "Do not get excited, Harry, but listen; obey me exactly, and all will be well. Miss Dallas and you have had some misunderstanding, but you fancied it to be much more serious than it really was. She is here now to see after you; she wants you to get well, and if you obey me you will."

The sick man's eyes opened wider and wider as his physician proceeded, and when he said, "Miss Dallas is now here," he would have raised himself, but the doctor was watching, and prevented his making more than the first effort. He turned to Kate, and in answer to his look, she came close to the bedside.

"My orders," said the doctor, "are that you may look at Miss Dallas a moment, but you must not speak, and then she and your own people must leave the room."

Kate's face was almost deathly white as she turned toward Harry.

"Kate, oh Kate!" cried he with the most supreme happiness written in his face.

"There, there!" said the doctor, "you disobey me already. Clear out of the room, you women, at once."

"No," said Harry, "Stop a minute! Kate, will you kiss me?"

"Yes," she said, and she pressed her lips to his face.

"You may go now," he said, and he took the draught the doctor offered him, turned to the wall with sweet contentment written on his face, and in a few moments the doctor's practiced ear told him his patient was asleep.

He walked out where the women were awaiting him, took Kate's hands in his, and said, "You have saved his life."

"Thank God!" came swelling up from the mother's heart.

From this point Harry's recovery was rapid. His frequent inquiries for Kate were parried until the hour came when Dr. Brown felt the story had best be told. There was no danger to be feared for Harry, while something might possibly happen to annoy Kate; so he set about unfolding the stratagem. Harry listened attentively, his face turning red and pale by turns, but he spake no word until the story was finished.

"I did this," said the doctor, "because I knew it was the last chance of saving your life. I kept her back until I saw it must be done."

"Have you seen Kate since that night?" Harry asked quietly.

"I saw her but once, and then only for a moment. The poor girl's nerves underwent a terrible strain that night and I was called to help her."

"Doctor, I want to ask you one question. Do you think I can ever have any hope of winning her love?"

"To be frank with you, my dear boy, I do not think you ever can. I have given you a careful account of what passed between us at our interview and to me, her manner showed that you have no place in her heart."

"Yet mother says she has sent over daily to inquire for me."

"Yes, but it was at my suggestion, until I had told you the story."

"Doctor, I am, so far as you can tell, in my right mind; am I not."

"Certainly you are."

"The fever has all gone?"

"Of course it has. What are you driving at?"

"Just this," said he, with despairing bitterness; "I wish to heaven you had let me die!"

"Why, Harry?"

"I mean it. You ought to have let me die."

"My boy, you are too young to talk like this. There is more in life than just loving or being loved. You have your mother and sisters, if you care nothing for yourself."

"Well, let it go. As I am alive, I must make the best of it. I thank you just as much as if life was dear to me. When can I drive out?"

"To-morrow, if you choose. Where do you want to go?"

"To see Kate Dallas."

"Not to worry her, Harry?"

"No, to thank her, and then withdraw from her presence forever."

"Can I help you?"

"No, except to let me visit her without announcing that I am coming."

"It shall be as you wish."

The next day Harry was driven to the home of Kate Dallas, and as he sat in the parlor awaiting her appearance, his thin white lips seemed to move as if he were rehearsing his part.

"I am glad to see you out again, Harry," she said, as she came toward him, but though her voice was sprightly, her face was fully as pale as his.

"Thank you Kate, this is my first call; but Dr. Brown consented to my ride today."

Her eyes tried to read in his if the doctor had told the story, but she said:

"I hope you will soon be out of the doctor's hands."

"I learned from Dr. Brown only last evening," he went on, as if determined to say at once what he had come to say, "of what you consented to do for him during my sickness. I ought to thank you for, perhaps, saving my life. I do thank you heartily for all that you did, and all the more because I know it was a terrible task for you. He told me the complete history of his plan, and while I wish I had never been thought of, I cannot but see how great a sacrifice you made for me, and I thank you for it."

She had covered her face with her hands as soon as he began, and still kept them there. He waited a moment as if to give her an opportunity to speak, but she remained silent.

"I have come," he resumed, "not to thank you only, but also to say 'Good bye.'" She uncovered her face at this, and her eyes filled with anxiety—he went on, "in a few days I leave Melville forever, but if—no matter where I am—the day shall come when I can be of help or assistance to you, you will remember that I owe my life to you, and"—he almost broke down here—"all that I am or have will be at your service."

She had covered her face again, and had he looked closely he might have seen tears forcing their way between her fingers, but his eyes were on the carpet, where they had been all the time.

"I am sorry," he continued, "more sorry than I can tell you, that I have ever been the cause of annoyance to you, or have ever brought aught of sadness into your life, but you have beautiful days yet in store for you wherein these will be forgotten, and I hope you will think of me, if at all, as one who would rejoice in your happiness and be happy in your joy."

He waited a moment, as if hoping she would say a word, but the tears were dropping from her eyes thick and fast, and her tongue refused to speak.

Finding that she did not intend to break the silence, he arose to take his departure, and then, for the first time, saw her tears. A wild, exulting light leaped into his face and eyes, but died away as soon again.

"Good-bye, Kate," he said and he moved towards her.

Her answer was a sob.

"It is my lot," he said, "to bring to your life unpleasant experiences, when my dearest wish would be to bring you joy. I shall never be a cloud on your horizon again, so once more, 'good-bye.'"

She turned her face from him, and said between her sobs, "I don't want—to drive you—from your—home."

"Let that give you no pain," he said, tenderly; "I could not live here now."

"But it is I who am driving you away," she said.

"No, you must not take the blame," said he. "I should never have supposed you could love me, but let that go now. Good-bye."

"Don't go," was her answer.

"I must. I could not stay and see you the wife of some one else."

"Don't go," she repeated.

Heavens! Could he believe his own heart! Could it be possible that she loved him! His eyes filled with light and hope again, and with one step he was beside her. "Kate," said he, "am I coming from death once more to life? Can you love me? Do you love me? Ask me to stay but once again! I am yours for life or death if you love me. What shall it be, darling, will I go or stay?"

"Don't go," was all she said.

A day or two since Mr. Eben Hill and wife of Penobscot, Me., after partaking of a boiled dinner, were taken with excruciating pains, and it was soon ascertained that they were poisoned. Mrs. Hill died not long after. Mr. Hill was not expected to live through the day, but now hopes are ascertained of his recovery. Some time last season Mr. Hill mixed a large dose of arsenic with meal, for the purpose of killing crows, in a tin pan which was supposed to have been cleansed after using. The dish was placed over the pork in the kettle in which the dinner was boiled, and it is pretty evident that sufficient poison remained to cause this sad accident.

Emma Black, who lives in a small town in Mississippi, saved a man's life, recently, in a curious way. He was fishing, and having fallen out of his boat, was making all possible haste to drown when the maiden perceived him and swimming out to him, threw her hair, which is nearly four feet long, into his grasp and towed him ashore.

The citizens of St. Albans, Vt., had made great preparations for a sleigh ride, recently, but postponed it because it was the week of prayer. It is incidentally suggested that the fact that there was no snow on the ground might have also had some connection with the postponement.

Death of an Octogenarian.

A few weeks ago Mr. George Washington Hall, a colored man, about 80 years old, was found dead in an uninhabited house in Gilmanton. He was the son of Jude Hall, of Exeter, who was a man of great size and gigantic strength; the strongest man who ever lived in Exeter, and perhaps in New Hampshire. The bones of his chest, that is, his sternum and ribs united with it, seemed like a breast-plate of iron, there being but little flesh between the ribs. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and was in the battle of Bennington. He had a very large and stout gun, a "Queen's-arm," and a bayonet corresponding in size and length with his gun. During the battle his company was ordered to charge on a division of Hessians; these Hessians were thickly set men, usually weighing from 160 to 180 pounds. In this desperate charge Jude was a host, clearing the enemy from the ground before him; he would run his bayonet through the bodies of these heavy men and throw them over his head like a boy spreading hay and tossing it over his head. While Jude had a Hessian on his bayonet one of the foe made a pass at him, but fortunately his bayonet struck against Jude's breastbones, only causing a flesh wound; Jude, quickly tossing behind him his victim, endeavored to kill the Hessian who had stabbed him, but he had darted back into the ranks and Jude could not get him. This division of Hessians, however, was taken prisoners, and the next day were confined in a school house and Jude was stationed as a guard at the door. The Hessian who had wounded Jude the day before knew him from his color and size, but Jude did not know him. This man tried to let Jude know that he was the man who stabbed him, and begged of Jude not to kill him. Jude replied: "Me no kill you to-day, but if I had got you yesterday I should." Jude then gave him some tobacco to fill his pipe and they settled all their difficulties. The poor Hessian was overjoyed at Jude's generosity and magnanimity. Jude was also in the battle at Saratoga, where his bravery and heroism were equally great as at Bennington.

During the war of 1812, with Great Britain, he volunteered his services to his country and was stationed, for a while, at the forts in Portsmouth. At the close of that war, in February, 1815, and when the news of peace reached Exeter, and the bells were ringing, the cannons booming, the flags, on all sides were waving in the wind and the people rejoicing, Jude manifested his joy by thrusting out a pole from the attic window of his house, on which were hung skeins of red, white and blue yarn swinging to and fro in the breeze.

Among many instances of his great strength one more is selected. He was one night at a husking in Kensington, and the corn, as was usual in those days, was carried into the large old kitchen to be husked. After the merry work of the husking had commenced, there was a call for more baskets. At this call Jude went out into an old shed and brought in an old potash kettle, large, thick and heavy. After it was filled with husked corn, Jude put a finger of each hand into the bale holes in the ears and carried it, Sampson like, up two flights of stairs into the garret.

He had a large family of sons and daughters, of which George Washington used to say, he was the smallest of them all; yet he was a very large and uncommonly strong man. Three of his sons served in the late war of the Rebellion. For many years he also resided in Exeter.

Mt. Washington in Winter.

The following interesting account of an ascension of Mt. Washington in winter by a party of gentlemen is good reading before a warm fire:

On the the 20th of January, in company with George Taylor and Fred. Frothingham of Boston, we left Lancaster to spend a night on the summit of Mt. Washington, via Fabyan House and E. A. Crawford's logging camp at the end of the turnpike. The day was delightfully clear and the view from the Fabyan House was unsurpassed. This house is destined hereafter to take the lead of all the mountain houses this side. The rooms are all very large, airy and handsomely furnished, and the management under Mr. Lindsey will be everything the travelling public can require. This is the terminus of the Boston, Concord and Montreal Railroad, and from here the ride to the base is easily made.

At the base we were hospitably welcomed by E. A. Crawford, son of the once famous old Ethan Crawford of White Mountain celebrity, who is engaged in a large wood and lumber contract for the Mount Washington Railroad. We began the ascent the next morning, armed with long poles, with spiked ends to help us over the railroad sleepers, which are placed three feet apart and are covered with new snow, making the walking very difficult. Upon reaching the Waumbek Station, we encountered a severe snow storm and wind, that admonished us to turn back, which we did. Taylor, however, passed one mile further, being obliged to crawl on his hands and knees over Jacob's Ladder, owing to the severe storm, which increased with such violence that he, too, was obliged to succumb and return. In attempting to slide on the track on a board, he lost his breaks (chips) and checked himself with his hands, tearing two pair of mittens to pieces in the attempt; he then laid down on his back and slid on the middle track until he got below the severe storm, where he could walk. Taylor and myself slid down on a sleeper, one sitting each side of the middle rail and breaking up at every other sleeper.

We spent the afternoon and evening very pleasantly at Crawford's camp, and the next morning, with Mr. Crawford for guide, we again commenced the ascent. The view was very fine most of the way up. The last mile it was very severe, the wind blowing sixty-five miles an hour, and entirely shut in by the clouds. The last mile we walked in the old Fabyan bridle path, the last half of which was very icy. We reached the United States Signal Service Station, on the summit, at 12 30, where we were heartily welcomed by Sergeants Thornett, Roshen and Lin—gentlemen in every sense of the word. A splendid dinner was soon prepared for us to which we did ample justice. Their house is about twenty by forty, five rooms and very cheerfully and comfortably furnished, with a good library, adding much to relieve the monotony of the time. We each sent telegrams home. It seemed wonderful to be on the summit of Mt. Washington and be talking with Boston and other places.

After supper the table was cleared for euchre; eight or nine games were played, Crawford and Roshen beating Thornett and Frothingham one game. The wind increased during the night to seventy-five miles an hour. We made the descent the next morning, leaving at ten o'clock, and reached Crawford's Camp at twelve—coming down the Fabyan path to the Waumbek Station—from there the path beside the track. We reached home, via Cherry Mountain and old Jefferson Turnpike, before dark, encountering sunshine, clouds, ice, snow, rain, hail, deep mud and good wheeling—the whole ride made in wagon. The trip on the whole well paid for the labor, although the ascent of the mountain was more difficult than we anticipated.

She Didn't Return.

Our readers will remember the fact that a young lady in Western New York recently died, but previously declared she would only be entranced and would come back and tell of her experience in spirit life. Her body was kept unburied until a medium told her friends that she delayed her return so long that it was impossible to reanimate the body. On Jan. 5th a coroner's inquest was held on the lifeless body, which was in a state of decomposition, and her death was officially established. At the inquest Miss Bonney's brother-in-law protested against any post-mortem examination, avowing his belief that the spirit would yet return to animate the decaying body, and several witnesses testified that the house had been violently shaken, as had been predicted, and that the clear note of a bell had been heard on several occasions, although there was no bell about the house except the door bell. The Buffalo Courier says that so far as the physicians were able to determine, the various organs of the body showed that at the time of death they were in a sound and healthy condition, and no cause of death could be found.

—The editorial correspondent of the Columbus Journal writes from Washington: "Charley Baldwin, of Mt. Vernon, was here last week, and he wanted to see Sothern. At the ticket office the treasurer said very politely: 'Sorry to disappoint you, sir, but the house is crammed, and there is not an inch of even standing-room.' 'But, my dear sir,' said Charley, 'I'm from Ohio!' The treasurer looked at him a moment in blank astonishment and then called out: 'Harry! Take this gentleman to the manager's box and give him a front seat. He's from Ohio!' The idea that any person from Ohio shouldn't be able to get a place anywhere was too thin."

PEABODY MEDICAL INSTITUTE

NO. 4 BULFINCH STREET, BOSTON.

When a thing is counterfeited, it is a proof of its excellence and popularity. The Peabody Medical Institute is a case in point. Founded in good faith many years ago, and the only establishment of the kind in the country, its success and ever-increasing popularity finally caused the name (Medical Institute) to be pirated and adopted by a lot of infamous quacks, empirics and pretenders, who have been endeavoring to cheat the public by selling under a stolen flag. The founder of the Peabody Medical Institute can in no way be held responsible for this misuse of the name of a reputable and well-known curative establishment and legitimate medical institution, which has been from the start specially devoted to the treatment of nervous derangements and affections, from whatever causes proceeding. During its existence there have been issued from it several medical publications; quite recently a work on Diseases of the Nervous System, which have had almost a world wide circulation and popularity. These publications sufficiently attest the high character of the institution under whose patronage these medical works have been published. Meantime it is gratifying to know that several of the impudent charlatans, who have stolen its name to cover their nefarious practices, are getting their deserts in the penal institutions of the Commonwealth.—Boston Herald.

Local Matters.

Opening of the P. & D. R. R.

At last the long-looked for railroad connection between Dover and this city has been made, and trains are running regularly, thanks to the efforts of President Jones and his associates. Trains were run free on Monday, as previously announced, the first leaving this city at 6.45 A. M., to bring passengers from Dover. Conductor Horace F. Pickering assumed charge of the branch and made good time between the terminl. About 100 passengers came in the early train from Dover, leaving there at 8.05 and reaching Portsmouth at 8.35. The news-boys disposed of a goodly lot of CHRONICLES in Dover, se'ling them on the streets nearly as early as subscribers were served with them here.

The train which left here at 10.30 took to Dover about 500 people of both sexes, who enjoyed the picturesque route over which they passed, and made merry on the way. The train ran very smoothly and the staunch bridge at the Point proved its security by holding a train of nine cars, heavily loaded.

When the first train arrived from Dover, Mayor Marvin having given the necessary orders, the church bells were rung for half an hour, and the steam whistles woke up the neighborhood, the arrival of the train at Freeman's Point having been signaled to the depot, and the depot bell repeating it. Our worthy friend Gardner J. Greenleaf thought a little gunpowder wouldn't be out of place on the occasion, and fired a salute from his yard in rear of the post-office. The Rockingham House was decorated with flags, and flags were shown in other places. On the arrival of the first regular train at Dover, by Mayor Horton's direction the bells were rung for an hour. We noticed at the station Messrs. John R. Varney of the Enquirer, Joshua L. Foster of the Democrat, Everett O. Foss of the Record, Postmaster Colbath, Judge Hall, Col. A. H. Young and about a thousand other citizens. On the return trip, Conductor Pickering brought 450 more passengers to Portsmouth, resting a little at Lamos' now famous half-way-house-to-Dover. The down trip to Portsmouth was made in 27 1-2 minutes. Trips were made to Dover at 2.55 and 5.40 P. M., returning at 4.25 and 7. Nearly 4000 persons went over the road during the day and no one was injured. Those who enjoyed the right are especially indebted to Hon. Frank Jones, who insisted that on the opening day the public should ride free. His indomitable exertions and excellent preparations thus gave opportunity for many of each city to see their sister city, who had never done so before.

We hope the new route will be advantageous to both communities, as it certainly will to citizens living near the stations. The people of Dover have manufactures that Portsmouth people want, and mutual interchange of trade must result from the building of the P. & D. R. R. The interests of the two cities are nearly identical and there is a closer bond of friendship between them than between any other large towns in the State.

Nature's Cathartic.

No medicine is needed to keep the bowels in order as long as nature's cathartic, the bile, flows freely and regularly from its source in the liver, and is of the right strength and quality. But the great biliary gland is easily disordered, and the consequences of its irregularities are serious. To bring it back to its natural condition when thus affected, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters should be taken at least twice a day until the desired object is attained. Constipation is due to a scant supply of bile, or to a lack of the stimulating element in that fluid. In either case more purgation is useless. The liver must be compelled to yield the supply of bile necessary to remove the waste matter from the system at least once in twenty-four hours before a radical cure of costiveness can be accomplished. Hostetter's Bitters produce this effect. Its action upon the stomach and liver is direct and salutary, as it through these organs it regulates and invigorates the whole frame.

Sold by druggists everywhere. ANAKESIS Depot, 46 Walker st., New York.

At this season of the year, when so many of our people are suffering from colds, we call attention to AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL as a sure cure not only for coughs and colds, but all affections of the lungs and throat. Having used it in our family for many years, we can speak from personal knowledge of its efficiency. There may be other remedies that are good, but in all our experience this has proved to be by far the best. Its qualities are uniform and wholly reliable. It is pleasant to take, and should be kept at command, by every family, as a protection against a class of complaints which seem harmless in the beginning, but become afflicting and dangerous if neglected.—[N. H. Register.]

Remember that it is Helmbold's Extract that cures when all others fail. For sale by all druggists.

Claims for Remission.

Captain John S. Pray of this city, for himself and as managing owner of the ships Yosemite, Prima Donna and Semiramis, has filed petitions in the court of claims, alleging that crews largely composed of foreigners were shipped at San Francisco for each of these ships, before the United States shipping commissioner in 1872. The voyage was from San Francisco to Liverpool, thence to one or more foreign ports, and back to the final port of discharge in the United States, term not to exceed twenty-four months. The articles contained the following clause: "It is further agreed that the undersigned are to be discharged at Liverpool if mutually consented to between master and seaman." Upon arrival at Liverpool it was mutually agreed that certain of the crew should be discharged. The captains therefore applied to the consul stating the contract had expired. The consul intimated that he had no discretion in the premises, and demanded three months' extra pay for each man discharged. This was paid under protest, the amount of the three ships' payment being $1490 in gold. Applications to refund the sum have been refused by the Treasury department. Not one of the crews so discharged appears designated on the list of the ships' company as a citizen of the United States. The petitioner, in the belief that the acts of February 2, 1803, July 11, 1840, and August 18, 1856, under which the claims were made, have been misinterpreted, asks judgment against the United States for the sum above stated, the amount having been paid into the Treasury of the United States by the consul.

—The Troy Times says: "Recently, at a church fair on Ida Hill, a large and frosted cake was offered to the person who should guess nearest to the correct weight, at ten cents a guess. The pastor of the church urged a young lawyer to invest a dime. The practitioner replied: 'I'll play you a game of euchre to see who gets the cake, but I don't understand the other game.'"

—The Chicago Inter-Ocean wittily remarks that "if words were bullets, Toombs, of Georgia, would be a mitrailleuse."

And the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser responds that from his persistent way of telling the same old story over and over again, "From morn till night, from youth till hoary age," we should rather be inclined to call him a Parrott gun.

—A gentleman had just put on his pants, the other morning, when he immediately took them off again, under the impression that they were haunted. The kitten was pulled out by the tail, and drowned.

Monday being "washing-day," the city was as usual short of water. Hon. Frank Jones has made the long-talked-of Portsmouth & Dover Railroad a fact; cann't he or some other man of energetic obstinacy carry out some scheme by which our periodical water-famines may be averted?

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

A Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their application in a form to secure them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.

EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,

In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left unpried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

How To Make Hens Lay.

The jocular Stratham correspondent of the Exeter News-Letter says: Many of our citizens who have kept a large number of hens have received small returns from them. To such we would say don't be discouraged, don't give up in despair, until you have given the following a fair trial: Write upon each nest egg with indelible ink, eggs one cent apiece. The hen is naturally an intelligent bird, and when she sees the marked egg, she reasons thus: Corn one dollar a bushel; eggs one cent apiece. I must either discharge my duty or die. Life is sweet. Be sure and mark the eggs lengthways, up-side down. Don't fail in this! If you do, we fear the result will not be satisfactory.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

THE BAZAR is edited with a contribution of unusual talent, and we seldom find in any journal; and the journal itself is the organ of the great world of fashion.—Boston Traveller.

The BAZAR commends itself to every member of the household. It is the delight of the young ladies by its pictures, to the young ladies by its fashion-plates in endless variety, for the provident mother by its full, warm, and the little children, to whom its pictures and its wonderful designs for embroidery of slippers and Berlin cross-stitch patterns. But the engraving of the BAZAR is universally of great excellence. The paper has always had a wide popularity for the lively enjoyment it affords.—N. Y. Evening Post.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, removing out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, imparting strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Foundation.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

This well known remedy is offered to the public sanctioned by the recommendation of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

CATARRH!
A Woman Having Catarrh 35 Years, Cured.
And Droppings in Throat, Choknigs, Stranglings, Pains in the Side, Loins, Headache, Dizziness, and General Weakness, Cured by less than Three Bottles of the
CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY.
To MESSRS. LITTLEFIELD & CO., Proprietors of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Manchester, N.H.:
I reside at Manchester N., H., and previously resided at Hermitage, and am a native of Weare, this State. I have had Catarrh twenty-five years, ever since I was 19 years old; had it bad all the time. I run all that period, and nights it would fill up and drop down in my throat, causing a feeling of choking, so that I would spring up in bed to save myself from strangulation. It affected my head so that I felt confused, and was troubled with severe headache at intervals, for as much as a fortnight. I also had bad pains in shoulders, back and kidneys, from which I suffered immensely. My hearing was very dull, a year and a half before I was obliged to lie in bed most of the time for three months. I have tried all kinds of snuff and Catarrh preparations, no particular benefit, and consulted physicians. I had a hacking cough, I began to take the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy last August. I began to get better before finishing the first bottle. I am now on the third bottle. My Catarrh is cured. My health is restored. I have no pains, aches, or cough. My whole system is made over new. I know it is this medicine that has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave. I am now able to do the hardest work and bear the greatest exposure, and feel that I cannot say too much in favor of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.
MRS. E. J. FLANDERS.
Manchester, N. H., Feb. 1, 1873.

I am now 53 years old, have had Catarrh ever since I was eighteen years old, and headache all the time; have suffered beyond description with running at the nose, droppings in the throat, choknigs and stranglings. Have tried any quantity of Catarrh Remedies but have found no relief till I tried your Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, six months ago. I found immediate relief.
Catarrh and all its attendant evils have left, Headache, Pains in Loins and Back, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, and General Weakness. Less than three bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy have cured me. I have not been so well since I can remember as now. I feel as if I could not say too much for the medicine, or thank God too heartily that through its instrumentality I have been restored to health.
